Fenton Twp. — Inside their enclosure, the baby raccoons growl at each other as they eat messily.

It’s 6:30 a.m. on Thursday and Michelle Allen is hosing out the bottom of their wire enclosure. “You guys are a pain in the butt,” she said to the furry masked crowd, as they made a mess of the fresh water she poured, and dropped food all over the ground.

SMART SOLUTIONS

1 Wake up happy!

Sit upright with legs crossed and hands at your sides. Next, inhale as you lift your arms up and out, palms skyward, until they meet above your head and hold for three seconds. Repeat three times. This yoga pose, called the Sun Celebration, improves breathing and blood flow to muscles.

2 Erase airport stress

To stop long lines and pushy people from ruining your traveler's high, think about those who help you get from point A to B — everyone from the pilots to the ticket agents. Remembering to think grateful thoughts makes you less defensive and more open to surprising new solutions.

Holly Twp. — It's finally perfect weather for gardens, and gardeners. Holly couple Marianne and Howard Kjetlien had already filled two baskets with produce by early Wednesday afternoon.

"It's just nice to be around other people and see what they're growing," said Marianne, as she picked green beans from one of their four plots. They are members of the Holly Heritage Farmstead Community Garden on Holly Road.

"The community garden, that's our jewel right now," said Harvey Sorensen, chair of the farmstead. He's most proud of the amount of food the garden is able to give to area churches. Fifteen of the 50 plots are used for charity.

"It's really absolutely a wonderful thing we've started here," he said. It's harvest season now, for many crops such as beans, beets and squash.

In Holly, most of the 10- by 20-foot plots are taken for personal use. The Kjetliens enjoy the community that comes with a community garden. They can leave seats and equipment out, and know that it will stay safe. "They're just nice people," said Marianne.

This is only their fourth year, but they've managed to grow enough tomatoes and cucumbers to can, and keep all year long. On Wednesday, they picked cucumbers, zucchini, potatoes, green peppers, pole beans and tomatoes. They grow enough for themselves, their kids, and their grandkids.

Beer tax increase would cut property taxes

►If elected, candidate to introduce bill that would benefit property owners

By Sharon Stone

sstone@tctimes.com; 810-433-6786

The first thing John Lauve is going to do, if elected, is introduce a four-part bill that would raise the beer tax, cut property taxes, send generated revenue to the schools and help support an alcohol treatment and prevention program.

Lauve, 71, (R-Holly) is running for state rep for the 51st district.

John Lauve

The state rep candidate said that in 1962, the beer tax in Michigan was raised to 2 cents per bottle. It was lowered to 1.9 cents per bottle in 1966 and it has remained at that level since.

"For 50 years it has been flat," he said. Since 1966, Michigan has imposed a tax of $6.30 per 31-gallon barrel of beer, according to Lauve. This equates to about 1.9 cents per 12-ounce can, or $0.20 per gallon. As of March 2009, Michigan ranked 28th among the 50 states in its beer tax rate, meaning that 27 states have a higher tax and 22 have a lower tax.

"Cutting property tax by 2 mills helps everyone. Keeping the beer tax where it is, helps the beer lobby exclusively."

John Lauve
Candidate for 51st district

Lauve said alcohol taxes were once intended to keep prices high enough to deter excessive use, however, these taxes have not kept pace with general inflation, and the real price of beer has actually dropped.

His plan is to raise the beer tax to 10 cents per bottle, cut property tax by 2 mills for non-homestead properties, send generated revenue, about $245 million to the schools and contribute 1 percent toward alcohol treatment and prevention programs. "They're alcoholics, not criminals," he said.

He estimates the dollars generated by his proposed beer tax increase and property tax decrease would be a "wash."

Lauve is convinced that the powerful beer lobby and beer wholesalers in Michigan are responsible for the lack of an increase in 50 years. He said the manufacturers are not involved with how beer is taxed.

Summary

►John Lauve, a Republican state rep candidate for the 51st District, intends to introduce a multi-part bill that would decrease property taxes by 2 mills, while increasing the tax on beer, which has been the same since 1966.

"It's the first thing I'll do — put it in front of the people," said Lauve. "Nobody wants to talk about it though."

This proposal, if it were passed by lawmakers, would allow property owners to get a break, said Lauve.

"They deserve a break. They need to be protected and they don't have a lobby."

"Cutting property tax by 2 mills helps everyone," said Lauve. "Keeping the beer tax where it is, helps the beer lobby exclusively."

BUSINESS

day if my day is going to be successful or not. I like at the end of the day to know that today was successful because of the choices I made."

The first question you will want to ask yourself is what sort of business do you want to open?

"I am a very passionate person about what I do. My theory in life, not just about business, is find something you are passionate about that you don't mind putting in the hours to do," Shouse said.

Unfortunately, just doing what you love will not guarantee a successful business. According to Shouse, it is also important to make certain there is a need for you.

"Location is important. You need to make sure there are not 10 other businesses just like yours. If you have too much competition that is a bad thing," said Shouse.

After you have decided on a business and a location, the amount of work that comes next only increases. Shouse said that when starting a business there are large amounts of paperwork, book keeping, a lot of forms and licensing. After running her business for 10 months, there is a lot that Shouse is still learning.

"It is really important and I know that there are a lot of places to educate yourself. The best way is to go right straight to your local government and say 'What are you looking for, and what do you need?'" said Shouse.

Once you have the paperwork dealt with, and your business opens its doors, all of the hard work may hopefully start to pay off.

"Our town is a very friendly town and our business is thriving, and I think it is the personal side of the business because we are very passionate about what we do," Shouse said.

In order to ensure your business has the opportunity to thrive, preparation is key. "Take your time, do a lot of research, know the business," said Jeff Stone, owner of Sears Hometown Store in Fenton.

Like Shouse, Stone also puts emphasis on opening up the right business, and he did a lot of research before deciding what to open up in the area.

"I called a lot of the owners and talked to them and got their opinion," said Stone. "Based on many conversations with those people, it seemed like overall they were pretty happy with it." After doing the research, Stone made the decision to go with Sears.

A five-year plan also helps keep a business prepared and on track, ready to face any challenges that may arise. A plan should map out your expenses such as your costs and how much you can expect to earn based on those in your community. Stone said that by opening a franchise, rather than a brand new business, he had detailed information available to him from Sears.

Mike Clabuesch, co-owner of Goin' Postal, in Fenton said that he has always had the desire to run his own business. "I was working for a corporation and decided that I could do the same type of thing, but do it better, and do it my way," he said.

"Take your time, do a lot of research, know the business."

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | WILLIAM AXFORD

Fenton police and firefighters respond to a two vehicle crash on Wednesday at approximately 4:45 p.m. A male was transported to the hospital by emergency personnel at the scene.

Police&Fire report

VANDALISM AT HOLLY BUSINESS

On Monday, July 30, Holly police were dispatched to a business in the 4100 block of Grange Hall Road to investigate a malicious destruction of property complaint. The plant supervisor said that between 2:30 p.m. on July 29 and 5 a.m. on July 30, unknown suspects spray painted markings in several locations on the building, as well as knocked over porta-potties. The complaint remains under investigation.

SUV STUCK ON TRACKS, WOMAN ARRESTED

Holly police arrested a 30-year-old Davisburg woman for having unidentified pills in her pocket following a call to the train tracks at 11:30 p.m. on Friday, July 27. Police were dispatched to Sherman and Grant for a vehicle stuck on the tracks. A black SUV was sideways on the tracks and two women nearby, one walking away. The 26-year-old Holly woman at the scene told police that the driver of the SUV, identified as a 25-year-old Waterford man, fled when he saw the patrol car approaching. Police noted the odor of intoxicants on both women and the Davisburg woman had to be placed in the patrol car because she kept trying to walk away from the scene. A computer check showed she had outstanding warrants. After being booked at the police station for the pills, she was turned over to Oakland County. The vehicle was impounded. Det. Julie Bemus is awaiting an interview with the driver and his vehicle remains impounded.

LARCENY ON ELMWOOD

At 3:30 p.m. on July 31, officers were called to the 700 block of Elmwood Drive to address a larceny complaint. A 57-year-old male reported two amps and a power supply, valued at $3,000 total, was missing from his residence. The homeowner told police he suspected two men who were collecting items for scrap took the amps and power supply while the residence were absent. One of the suspects was described as in his late 50s, had a large beard and drove a stationwagon. If anyone has any information pertaining to the case, please call Fenton Police at 810-629-5311.

GARDENS

"I love it," said Marianne. "It's my favorite thing to do."

Despite the recent drought, the Holly community garden has thrived, due to the simple but effective irrigation system, which pulls water from the river, up to a large tank just outside the garden fence.

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | TIM JAGIELO

Many types of produce, like these beets, are being harvested currently at local gardens.

The Fenton Community Garden is fed with city water, and is also no worse for wear in the dry heat.

Ricky Wilkerson of Argentine Township uses a wheelchair to get around to the various water barrels throughout the Fenton garden as part of his volunteer job.

Cherie Smith of Fenton is busy picking green beans. She said there are 40, 10- by 20-foot plots. It costs $40 annually to rent the plots, and it comes with the city water. "You can plant whatever you want, harvest whatever you want," she said. Of the 40 plots, 34 are filled. The garden had 60 members on its Facebook page.

Green peppers, cabbage, carrots, beets, broccoli, zucchini, yellow squash

Summary

► Local community gardens have survived the heat and drought. They provide an opportunity to grow food to eat, to give to charity and also to socialize.

and cucumbers are grown at the Fenton Community Garden. Green beans are coming up all the time, because of staggered planting.

"Sometimes it's hot, sometimes it's muddy, or raining, but we do it because we love it," Smith said.

She also loves that her garden gives produce away twice per week, from 5 to 8 p.m. on Wednesdays, and 10 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

Kim Emmert was also on hand to pick green beans. "(You can) give back to the community, enjoy the fresh air, and grow some wholesome produce," she said. "It's wonderful."

market and relies on his contacts for accumulating work.

Goldstein is also legally blind and unable to see most of his direct surroundings.

Goldstein was diagnosed with Stargardt Disease 20 years ago, making his central vision nearly nonexistent. The macular degeneration has made reading difficult, leaving Goldstein with little more than his peripheral vision. Despite this, Goldstein is one of the most successful real estate agents in the area and has been involved in major dealings such as the expansion of Caretel Inns in Linden, Price's Airport in Fenton Township, Fratz Consignment and other properties on Torrey Road.

David Goldstein

Goldstein's lack of sight has yet to stifle his success.

"The blind man who can still see is a very lucky man," Goldstein said of his limited sight. "I remain very positive to this. It's not terminal or painful, it's just something that needs to be overcome. Having a positive attitude is very important."

Goldstein's vision started to decline when he was 40, shortly before he moved from Flint, where he owned Roberts David Alan clothing store, to work in real estate for John Tremaine in Fenton. Instead of accepting the notion that his lack of vision would hold him back, Goldstein built a loyal clientele through hard work and cultivating a formidable reputation.

Many of Goldstein's clients have become close friends, recommending him to others and even providing transportation during dealings.

"My friendships are all about building bonds and bridges," Goldstein said. "Most of my practice is getting clients and continuing to do business with them. It makes for more than just a 'business relationship.'"

While specializing primarily in land development, Goldstein also deals with high-end residential real estate.

The advancement of technology plays a role in Goldstein's dealings. Before he surveys a property, "kicks the dirt," he researches land on the Internet. With the ability to change fonts and their sizes, Goldstein often does a lot of work from his home.

And, it's not just friendships that have been responsible for Goldstein's success. The real estate agent said he has a good working relationship with local governments and various planning boards. Being on a first name basis makes his job all the more easier.

"My true love is doing vacant land and learning all aspects of buying or selling it," said Goldstein, having experience with pollution issues, environmental studies, easements and title problems. "If you don't do due diligence, you may end up with something that costs you hundreds of dollars."

Realtor John Tremaine is amazed by Goldstein's passion and enthusiasm, despite his disability.

"It's amazing the way he stays positive, putting deals together without using his vision as an excuse," Tremaine said. "He does not let that interfere with his success and progress."

Goldstein's future goals include helping others who are affected by macular degeneration and encourages them to call him at (810) 750-5522.

and Brewery, have big plans for their new building. Immediate goals include using bigger equipment for increased production and the sale of ingredients and products for home brewing.

Long-term plans include opening a pub and establishing beer gardens (an open-air location where beer is served) on the five-acre property located at 1370 North Long Lake Road in Fenton Township. For the Sherrows, acquiring the new property was something that simply came up at the right time.

"We never planned for this, it just happened," Matt said. "We're going to take our time. We're going to do it right."

The current Fenton Winery and Brewery location on North LeRoy Street will remain open and operate as usual.

The Sherrows have also expanded into Holly, having opened a wine tasting location in Battle Alley. The Holly location opened up a month ago and has been a great addition for the Sherrows.

Matt and Ginny Sherrow are rapidly expanding their business, the Fenton Winery and Brewery. They have a location in Holly and soon, in Fenton Township.

"The foot traffic is so good there, it's driven people over to our Fenton location," Matt said. The Holly location is licensed as a wine-tasting location and does not have a bar. However, wine, sangrias, specialty meats and cheeses are sold at the location, serving as another location for marketing.

Further down the road, the Sherrows hope to eventually sell kegs of their beers to local restaurants and bars in the area.

Ginny said there are no plans as of yet to distribute bottled beer. That may change however if the two discover there is a high demand for bottled beer and if a distributor is interested in working with them. The two have spoken with some distributors and have described the encounters as "exciting."

"We're thrilled to have a home," Ginny said of acquiring the property. "We're outdoor enthusiasts and beer gardens have been on our priorities list."

The property went up for public auction earlier in June. Officials at the Loose Senior Citizen Center had expressed interest in possibly purchasing the former Creative Wood building but found that the renovations were beyond the organization's budget. According to Fenton Township records, the location was purchased for $286,908.

Matt said the sale of brewing supplies and equipment should only take a few months to establish, since all that is required is a retail license. For the pub and beer gardens however, Matt expects the process to take at least six months, due to the numerous liquor licenses and compliances that must be met. Renovations within the building will begin soon.

Rising up from defeat

Since the Bible is an accurate record of the lives of many people, it reveals the shortcomings and failures of human nature. It also tells of miraculous rescues of those who had become great disappointments to others and to themselves.

Abraham disappointed his wife, Sarah, by telling the kings of Egypt that she was his sister, in order to save his life. But this same man rebounded from weakness and became known as the friend of God and the father of the faithful.

Jacob disappointed his father, Isaac, by pretending to be his brother, Esau, so that he could receive the blessing of the first-born son (Genesis 27). But later Jacob's name was changed to Israel, meaning 'Prince with God,' and in his older years he lived up to his new name.

Have others disappointed you? Don't give up on them. The best may be yet to come.

More than any other, Jesus felt the wounds of disappointment from those He loved.

He did not do many mighty works in His home area because so few there believed.

Even after His perfect example of humility, two of His disciples, James and John, connived to get the highest places in the kingdom.

Peter denied his Lord three times just before the crucifixion.

Thomas could not summon faith enough to believe in the resurrection without visible proof.

Yet in all these heartbreaking experiences, there is not one word of self-pity or bitterness from our Lord. Why?

Because He understood human nature and was not shaken by its ugly manifestations.

He had not come to condemn but to save. Beyond even the cruel cross was the joy of rescuing lost people and giving them eternal life. He saw past the failures and sins to the future potential of those about Him.

Many who had rejected Him would believe.

James and John who had desired the highest places in the kingdom would become faithful apostles, preachers and penman who would turn others to faith.

Peter would become the spokesman for the New Testament church.

Thomas would believe after a weak week and would finally give his life as a martyr, being thrust through with a spear and suffering a wound somewhat like the one he had once demanded to be able to thrust his hand into in order to believe.

These disappointing ones would become dynamic Christians, turning the world upside down with their powerful preaching of the Gospel that had been entrusted to them. They would rise up from defeat and go on to the greatest days of their lives.

Many have done just that. So can you.

Your recent failures need not mean the end of meaningful living. The future can be brighter than the past. And a great future beats a great past every time.

God can make the difference for you. Like the Prodigal Son who came to himself in the pigpen and returned to his waiting father, you can return. You can rise up from defeat and receive your Heavenly Father's welcome.

Haven't you been defeated long enough?

Linden's Parcher is our running man once again

► Captures our Tri-County Male Track Performer of the Year award for a second time

By David Troppens

dtroppens@tctimes.com

810-433-6789

Ted Parcher takes running day-by-day.

Ask him what he thinks about when he's looking at his future, and that's what he'll say.

So far, that strategy has served the incoming Linden junior well during the first half of his prep track and field career. Parcher has come amazingly close to earning state championships in his craft, and actually broke a Division 2 state meet record in an event, but had two others do the same just a bit faster than him.

Put a speed detector at Linden High School, and he'll likely make it light up while at the track. That's not shocking considering he's the area's premier prep sprinter.

And, now, despite finishing just his sophomore year, his track exploits have earned him another honor — he's our 2012 Tri-County Male Track Performer of the Year, a title he also earned his freshman season in 2011.

"I don't think about it really," Parcher said when asked about what the next two seasons might have in store for him at Linden. "I just take it day-by-day."

Parcher may have come into his freshman year as a semi-unknown entity to some in the tri-county area, but, of course, that changed really quick when he started posting the best times in the Flint area in the 100 and the 200. Since then, he's an established prep star. And it seems like he's taken it well in stride.

"I just try to stay being focused on being myself and being faster," Parcher said.

"That's all you can do."

He was faster in 2012. After posting a time of 10.8 seconds in the 100, earning second at the state meet, and a time of 21.8 seconds in the 200 during his freshman season, he got even faster in 2012. He capped the season by posting a FAT time of 10.67 seconds in the 100, once again earning a state runner-up finish. Meanwhile, his FAT time of 21.64 seconds in the 200 broke a state meet record, but he finished "just" third since two others also broke it with better times.

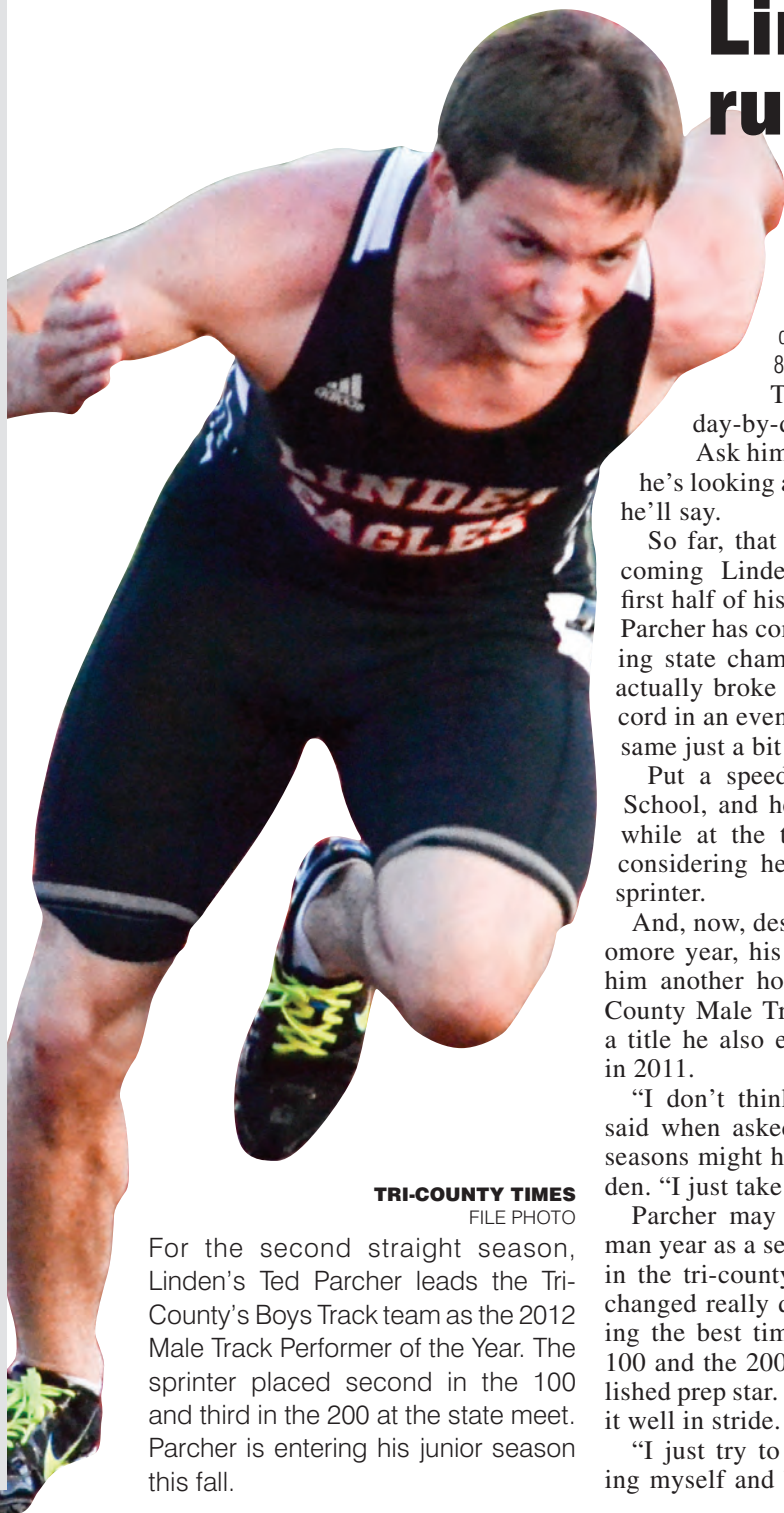

He also helped lead the 400 relay team of himself, Connor O'Connell, Kevin Baker and Austin Buerkel to a fourth-place team finish at the state meet with a school record time of 43.4 seconds.

"I thought he did phenomenal," Linden varsity boys track and field coach Nick Douglass said. "He worked hard all year, and I think that is evidenced by the success he had at the end of the year. Fortunately, he got through the season relatively healthy. He may have been fatigued at times, but he was physically healthy and that was the key to his success."

Douglass also saw some progress in Parcher's season in another way. Mentally, he's maturing into being a smarter sprinter, something that only comes with experience.

"Physically he matured but he also matured mentally," Douglass said. "During his freshman year, he'd go out in the prelims and semifinals and beat the door down to beat everyone. But this year, he ran more strategic, and that helped him advancing through the rounds in the 100 and the 200 at the state level."

David's Dabblings

A few thoughts about the area's sports scene and some others not dealing with sports at all.

LOTS OF FREE FOOD IS ONE OF MY BEST OLYMPIC MEMORIES

When people my age think of great Summer Olympic moments, a lot of images come into their minds. Many involving the vault come to mind quickly. First, there was Nadia Comaneci earning the first 10 on the vault in Montreal in 1976. I'd be lying if I said I really remember the performance, but as I grew up, I remember hearing a lot about it.

I do remember Mary Lou Retton's 10 on the vault in 1984. She earned the gold medal in the all-around in Los Angeles. Finally, there was Kerri Strug, who helped lead the U.S. women to an all-around gold medal in Atlanta in 1996 after performing the vault on a bad ankle injury.

There have been plenty of others that I could detail, but that's a pretty good start right there. But while all three of these performances were outstanding, I have to say, none of them amount to what really was my top Summer Olympic memory — and that memory is a lot of Big Macs, french fries and soft drinks.

I was 15 during the 1984 Summer Olympics. At the time our family lived about two miles away from Lakeside Mall, a place we'd ride our bikes to frequently when I wasn't working at the good ol' party store that gave me my needed financial resources to buy whatever teenagers feel important on that given day. I worked, about 30-plus hour weeks at the party store, so I always had money to go to the ol' mall to get an album (or more likely a cassette at that time), some magazines, some silly sports glass or some other piece of memorabilia at the mall. And with the urgent feeling most teens felt, it's a given we were going to the mall quite frequently.

In 1984, McDonald's started a game campaign surrounding the summer games. The slogan was, "When the U.S. wins, you win." And, it was accurately stated. Essentially, anytime you purchased certain items at McDonald's you received a game piece with a certain Olympic event listed on it. If the U.S. won a gold medal, you won a Big Mac. If the U.S. won the silver it was fries. And if the U.S. won the bronze, you won a drink. And because it was the year of the Eastern Block boycott (meaning countries like the Soviet Union and East Germany weren't participating), the games in Los Angeles became a U.S. free-for-all of medal victories.

Needless to say, there was a McDonald's next to that mall we went to, and we frequented it, well, frequently. We'd get our game pieces, and they were also very generous with giving out free game pieces as well. When the games happened, the U.S. won 83 golds, 61 silvers and 30 bronzes. There were track events in which the U.S. won all three events, giving you, essentially, a free meal. But, the best part was, once you redeemed your winners, you received even more game pieces, which usually gave you more winners.

Well, we were a family with three teenagers, pretty much policing our-

Danhausen's shooting career continues to flourish

► Wins gold medal in recent jr. national event

By David Troppens

dtroppens@tctimes.com; 810-433-6789

Adversity has never been an issue for Linden graduate Erin Danhausen.

When she was learning her craft — competitive trap shooting — just getting to practice was a challenge.

Summary

► Mundy Township resident and Linden High School graduate Erin Danhausen earned a gold medal at the U.S.A. Shooting National Shotgun Championships recently. She's also on the Bethel University shooting team. She'll be entering her sophomore year this fall.

That's because just to be able to practice on what are considered international bunker traps, she had to travel to Columbus, Ohio to do so. And, then for a long time, the lefty had to compete with a used righty's gun.

And yet, through it all, she qualified for the U.S. Junior Olympic International Trap Shooting team in 2011.

But move ahead a year and Danhausen is starting to see the fruits of her hard work pay off. She's now a member of the Bethel University shooting team, and for a great portion of the year has the ability to compete and practice frequently without taking car trips that last well over three hours. She also has a new left-handed gun.

The results? The Mundy Township resident seems to be getting better. She recently earned a new honor when she won the gold medal at the U.S.A.

Fall sports season begins with Monday prep football practices

By David Troppens

dtroppens@tctimes.com; 810-433-6789

For those dying to get their prep sports fix, it won't be long now before they can get it.

According to the Michigan High School Athletic Association, approximately 110,000 student-athletes will begin practice in eight fall sport seasons next week.

Of course, football is the king of the fall, and it will begin before any of the other sports. Teams are allowed to start practicing on Monday. In anticipation of the start of practices — and gruelling two-a-day sessions — many teams host midnight practices, starting at 12:01 a.m. on Monday. Fenton and Lake Fenton are expected to have such practices.

For those that attend practices starting on Monday, they'll be allowed to start contact practices, with pads, on Thursday.

On Wednesday, all other fall sports teams will be allowed to start practices.

Competitions for many sports can start reasonably soon after those dates. For boys tennis and girls golf, matches Shooting National Shotgun Championships, winning the junior class of the women's trap competition. Danhausen is pretty excited about having the new equipment.

"I actually got a brand new gun this winter because I wore the other one out," Danhausen, 19, said. "It wasn't shooting properly because it was shooting too many rounds, more than it was built for. This one fits a lot better. When I went down to Ohio, it took me about 200 rounds a day to get used to the brand new gun. That's all I did. I kept going to Columbus, practicing with the new gun and my scores kept going up.

"It probably took about 1,000 rounds to get used to this gun."

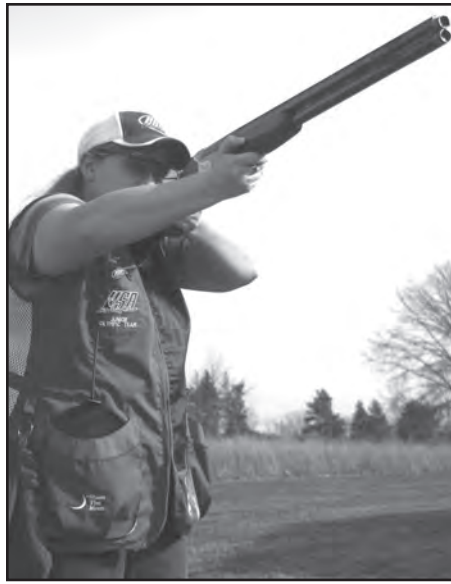

Her scores certainly went up during the women's trap competition. Danhausen actually qualified to compete in the 2012 Olympic Team Shotgun Trials, held in Arizona, hitting 185 targets out of the 250 she was presented during the event.

Along with her 181 she hit in an earlier event in Texas, she finished the competition with 366 targets hit out of 500.

"That was one of my highest scores for a national event. I was very pleased with it," Danhausen said. "But I don't like the desert, though (the event was in Arizona). The desert is so dry, you feel like a little raisin out there. And it can affect your eyesight. If you don't drink water, then your scores will go down."

Danhausen didn't stop there. She only performed better at the 2012 USA Shooting National Shotgun Championships earning the gold medal in the junior girls trap competition with a total of 232 targets hit out of 275 for the competition.

Danhausen started the national event by hitting 21, 21 and then 22 targets out of 25 in each set, resulting in 64 hit targets out of 75 after the first day. During the second day, she hit 21 and 19, giving her 104 targets hit out of 125 for the two days. She got stronger during the final two days. She hit 65 of 75 on the third day and then hit 63-of-75 on the final day, earning the junior national championship.

"I had no idea where I was. I was just shooting," Danhausen said. "I find it better not to know what is going on. It gets in your mind and messes with you. I did not know I was in the running for the finals until I finished."

The new gun apparently made a difference. After hitting 185 targets out of 250 at the trials, she had a total of 211 targets out of 250 at the National Shotgun Championships. Her improvement didn't go unnoticed.

"Everyone asked about my training and how on earth I got so good," Danhausen said. "You don't see people shooting 185 to 211 only two months apart. Everyone was surprised. I scared myself, to tell you the truth."

While competing in collegiate competitions, Danhausen finds herself under a different format of shooting. In the two competitions detailed previously, she competed on what is known as an international trap or a bunker trap. It has 15 trap machines that will create target flights that vary tremendously at 65 miles an hour. These bunkers are limited, the reason why Danhausen finds herself going to Ohio for training frequently. There are no international traps in Michigan.

However, the school season uses American traps, which have just one trap. They target flights are much more consistent and the speed of the clay pigeons is only 45 mph. While she still is somewhere in the middle in terms of talent on the team right now, Danhausen continues to improve.

"It helps because you get that friendly competition," Danhausen said. "When I go to Ohio, I don't always have that competition. But (at school) you can go out and try to beat each other."

Danhausen can compete at the junior level until she turns 21. Then she will have to continue in the open divisions. She plans on working hard on her shooting.

"I'd really like to see how far I can go with this," Danhausen said. "I'd love to go to a World Cup, go to a different country and shoot on a world Cup team. I can do that on a National Junior team, but I also can make it on a national team."

"I'm not very far. I have the ability to be on the national team. I just have to practice a little more. You have to work on it, just like everyone else does."

can start as early as Aug. 15.

Meanwhile, cross country, girls swim, volleyball and soccer can start as soon as Aug. 17. Most teams will have one or two events before the Labor Day weekend, but for most, league competition doesn't start until after that date.

Football teams can start as early as Aug. 22 for sub-varsity teams and Aug. 23 for varsity programs. And for the first time, a tri-county team will begin on that Thursday date. Lake Fenton will host Gabriel Richard for a 7 p.m. contest. That means Lake Fenton's first two varsity games of the season will be played on Thursday dates.

"Gabriel Richard suggested it, and we and since we are playing on Thursday the second week as well, we decided to go with it," Lake Fenton varsity football coach Eric Doyle said.

The other three tri-county schools will begin action on Aug. 24 under the Friday night lights

Fenton and Linden face off in the opening game of the season at Linden's Claude Cranston Football Field. It will mark the first of two straight seasons the two area rivals will open the season against each other.

Meanwhile, Holly will begin its season with a home game against the Swartz Creek Dragons on Aug. 24 as well.

All four area football teams made the playoffs a year ago, and each will have aspirations to make it to week 10 again this year. Fenton and Linden each reached the regional championship round before falling to state powers. Meanwhile, Fenton and Holly earned co-Metro League titles last year.

selves during that summer. And, as you might guess, that meant a lot of trips to McDonald's. We'd watch the games and just watch the free sandwiches, fries and soft drinks pile up. It's obvious when McDonald's came up with the idea, they probably didn't accurately tabulate what the boycotts would mean to the U.S. medal total. Certainly, they looked back to the 1976 games in Montreal (the U.S. boycotted the 1980 games), saw a total of 94 medals and figured out what their projected losses would be. Certainly they must've not understood that the U.S. would end up with almost as many golds in 1984 as they had medals in 1976.

But we didn't care about McDonald's misfortunes. We had what was a pretty limitless supply of free food — and we used them all. It got to the point, if you had a game piece for something like U.S. basketball, you got upset. You certainly felt like you were going to win something, but you realized you'd only have one winner on the card. Yeah, we got that spoiled.

But, without a shadow of a doubt, that was my greatest Olympic memory — the McDonald's medal game.

Linden's Ted Parcher prepares to get the baton during state meet action in June. For the second straight season, Parcher is the Tri-County's Male Track and Field Athlete of the Year. He placed second in the 100 and third in the 200 at the state meet. Meanwhile, he helped lead the Eagles' 400 relay team to All-State honors at the state meet as well.

Parcher did that. During his freshman year, Parcher ran a 10.81 in the semifinals and then posted a 10.8 in the final at the state meet. This year, he went from a 10.93 in the prelim, to a 10.8 in the semifinal, and then a 10.67 in the final, losing only to his summer teammate and Auburn Hills Avondale's Kyle Redwine (10.53).

"I thought running a 10.67 was awesome," Parcher said. "I hadn't run a 10.8 since the state meet (his freshman year). All of the competitors pushed me hard to run my best time. I was glad I got to go faster at the state meet."

To some, Redwine came "out of nowhere" to win the 100 since he wasn't in the event a year ago. However, injuries and bad luck had plagued him in the past, and Parcher knew about his speed.

"He happened to get beat, but he ran the race of his life against Kyle," Douglass said.

"At the beginning of the year if you told me he'd run a 10.67 FAT I'd be thrilled. Kyle was great. Ted was ahead at 80 yards, tied at 85 and a stride back at 90. I didn't think that was even possible. That kid was legit, but Ted ran a 10.67 and that's flying."

Douglass also sees Parcher being more mature about how he approaches a season. And it's also true about Douglass himself as he matures as a coach.

"We did not go into this season thinking the 100 was his to win or lose. He knew he was going to have to work hard just to have a chance to accomplish his goals," Douglass said.

"He knew Kyle was running successful times and there were others. The point is Ted knows he can control only what is in his control. Goals are relative to the conditions you run in and relative to your competitors."

"Some place, somewhere, there's probably always going to be someone who is faster. And if that guy is not on the track with him, Ted wins. If he is, he might not. It's hard for a teenager to maintain that focus all the time, but Ted has done a great job with it."

Parcher's work ethic remains high.

TED PARCHER (Linden)

For the second straight season, Parcher is our selection. He finished second in the 100 dash at the state meet with a time of 10.64 seconds and also placed third in the 200 (21.64). He helped the 400 relay team to a school record and a fourth-place finish. He's entering only his junior season.

After a successful freshman year, he continued to push himself by running in a variety of summer track meets. Parcher has continued to do that this summer as well. In fact, he recently competed at the 2012 USA Track and Field Junior Olympic Championships at Morgan State University, in Maryland, earning ninth in the preliminary round of the 100 dash with a time of 10.77. He followed that with a ninth-place time in the semifinals of 10.69, nearly the time he posted to take second at the state meet in 2012.

He also competed at the Michigan regional of the Junior Olympics earlier this summer, winning with a time of 10.89 seconds. His 400 relay team also earned a second-place finish with a time of 43.0 seconds.

With half of his prep career left, who knows what Parcher will accomplish. Like he said, he'll "take it one day at a time."

"You can't get caught up in place and time, but the key is he has to stay healthy," Douglass said. "I know his goals, and if he stays healthy he'll have a chance to accomplish them. But, again his goals are relative to the conditions and the people you run against."

ASK THE MECHANIC

Chris Wilkinson, Certified Mechanic

Q: I own a 1999 Plymouth Voyager. Last week the fuel gauge was reading empty with the low fuel light on. I know the tank was not empty as I had just filled it. Then it was fine. Today the low fuel light began lighting up and going off along with the wonderful dinging noise. Also the fuel gauge kept fluctuating between 3/4 which it is and empty. Any ideas? - Tony

A: Tony, in this case I suspect that you have a bad fuel sending unit, but you will want to test it before replacement. To test, you will need a wiring diagram and an ohm meter. The pump and level sender are located in the fuel tank, so you will want to do this when the tank is below 1/4 of a tank so that it is not so heavy when taking out. After removal of the pump and sending unit, you need to hold it steady and have a partner watch the ohm meter while you sweep the sender from full to empty slowly and watch the reading. It should change at a slow pace and not drop out which is what I suspect that you will see when it gets near 3/4 of a tank or so. If it does, then you will need to call the dealer if you only want to replace the sender, but pay attention to the cost because this sending unit also comes with the fuel pump when you replace it. It may be in your best interest to just replace the pump assembly. Check Car-Quest for a Delphi fuel pump, that is what we prefer to use, they seem to have the least problems in my opinion.

their non-profit organization, Wild Oat Animal Rescue, Inc. These raccoons have already graduated from being bottle fed, to eating puppy chow. Soon, they'll be moved, and switched to fruit, frogs, eggs and anything else they would encounter on their own, before being released into the wild.

"I'm their mommy so they're fine with me," said Allen as she let them grab her finger with their dexterous paws through the enclosure bars. "When I release them, they won't like me anymore."

She doesn't get attached to them, she's never sad when releasing them back into the wild. "That's the good, that's the awesome part," she said. Allen is sad, however, when an injured animal does not make it. Deer and raccoons are both incrementally introduced to the wild.

Allen spends about an hour feeding the veritable wild menagerie every morning.

As she gathers feed for the deer, Romeo, a Nigerian dwarf goat sneaks mouthfuls for himself from her pail. "You're fat enough," she said, scolding the grey and black goat, who followed her around the farm like a dog.

Romeo is one of 50 or so rescued animals that include horses, deer, raccoons, rabbits, a peacock, and a fox that hides from view.

The property is 23 acres, and nestled therein are three big pastures, two big pens, three larger enclosures, and a smaller one up front for baby raccoons. Scott hand-built all of these, and included posts given from Deer Park in Grand Blanc as it was closed down.

Allen said there they have five habitats, including wetlands, woods and grasslands.

It all started with taking care of a baby raccoon and a kitten, and it grew from there. Just this week she took in an injured opossum, and they often respond to 911 calls for injured wildlife, and receive many animals from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

She is licensed through the DNR for wildlife rehabilitation, and the DNR has inspected the enclosures and pens. The couple has to fill out a lot of paperwork, and take continuing education classes.

Every year for 13 years this cycle of nursing baby deer, raccoons and rabbits in the spring, and administering pet vaccinations for four months continues its dizzying path for the couple.

The work can range from eight hours per day, to four, to almost nothing in December. "December would be perfect without the holidays," she said. Through all of this, the couple has paid for their expenses out of pocket. "It's just us," she said. Now, this 501(c) 3 non-profit is in trouble.

The Allens purchased 12.5 acres behind their property in 2004 to expand or the land can be repossessed. "All of this that you see, that bank can take back," she said. Efforts are well underway to raise the money. Wild Oat Animal Rescue, Inc. has a Facebook page with almost 1,000 fans, and a companion petition page to help keep the acres open.

Even if they raise the money needed in time, they will probably need funds continuously. They've been holding auctions on Facebook for items including jewelry and even saddles.

For a fee, people can sponsor, and name an animal. Romeo was named Luke before he was snatched up. All the baby raccoons need sponsorship, she said.

Through the stress of the possible repossession, and the sheer workload, Allen finds the daily chores therapeutic. "You can come out here and listen to the sounds. I have peace out here," she said looking over her pens, with a group of baby deer nearby. "It's a stress reliever."

were dispatched after receiving a 911 call at 8:56 p.m. on Tuesday about a teenager found hanging by his neck on a play structure.

Upon arrival, emergency workers detected a faint pulse on the teen. Deputies used bolt cutters, which are standard equipment in every patrol car to assist Star EMS in extracting the teen from the rope. He was transported by ambulance to the hospital.

Sheriff's detectives from the Springfield Township substation said this incident appears to be a tragic accident. The investigation has revealed that the teen was at the playground with an 18-year-old female from Springfield Township when he accidentally became entangled in a zip line on the play structure.

The sheriff department's Forensic Lab collected the rope for examination. School officials have been notified of the incident.

Tasers were approved for civilian use in May and follow the same laws as firearms do under CPL laws. Curtis said a variety of people have expressed interest in obtaining a Taser including people who are wheelchair bound and the elderly who are affected by arthritis.

In addition to having a CPL, Taser owners must complete a training course before purchase. Tri-City Trading Post will offer training courses in their store. The course includes an overview of safety procedures, literature of warnings, a video presentation and a test. The course does not require people to shoot a Taser or to be shot at.

Tasers sold at Tri-City Trading Post have an output of .0036 amps. Comparatively, a Christmas tree bulb has an output of 1 amp. The Tasers' output is so low that it won't interfere with a pacemaker yet is powerful enough to render a person motionless. Consumer grade Tasers have a maximum reach of 15 feet and operate for 30 seconds once triggered.

Once shot, the Taser releases two barbed torpedoes that are connected to charged, coated wires. Usage of the weapon includes sliding the safety mechanism, pointing and pushing a button. There is no kickback or strength necessary to use the weapon.

"A lot of people have said they're more comfortable with the Tasers because it is a non-killing weapon," Curtis said.

The standard price for a Taser at Curtis' store is $399. The unit comes with two live cartridges, a holster and a target with a battery pack.

Local police enforcement has used Tasers for years as a non-lethal option. Argentine Police Officer Angelo Panos is certified to instruct others on Taser usage and records all of the information associated with the department's use of Tasers. Argentine Police Chief Dan Allen said having someone certified on his staff saves both money and time.

"The shock is a pulse and not continuous," Curtis said. "They work to stop the sensory nervous system and motor nervous system and the 30 seconds is enough time to escape and call the police."

Meet Lloyd Richter

Family man, business owner, jack of all trades

I remember the armistice, World War I, on Armistice Day, I remember very distinctly that Model T Ford, they honked the horn, of course all the roads were gravel and dusty. They stuffed an imitation of the Kaiser, and they dragged it behind the car all day long. That night they burned the dummy up in a bonfire. I can remember that, I was only 5 years old.

Lloyd Richter is 98. He and his wife were married 66 years until she passed away in 2002. Though he is nearly 100, he uses a computer three times a day to do his banking and follow the stock market. He said everyone tells him he looks closer to 70.

How does it feel to be a great grandfather? I have four grandsons. Two of the oldest boys are in Florida, and I've got three great granddaughters and one great grandson. I think being the grandfather the first time was the biggest thrill.

What did you do as a career? 'Jack of all trades,' we'll put it that way. When I got out of high school in '32, I worked for a barn builder. We had two tents. We'd stay there on the

The (grain) elevator in Chesaning burned, I got a job there with the (new) Chesaning Elevator, and it was completed in '36.

Today, they've made a bed and breakfast out of it. (After that) I was trained in internal grinding. You ground precision of the inner of anything, like a bearing. The depression came on in '37, and they shut the plant down.

Republic Aircraft called me up, all through the war I worked on aircraft parts. That was my career, and then I bought a place in St. Helen. I bought a saw mill and sawed my own timber.

(Then) I sold out of there and built my own house. I hired in at the original Fischer Body Plant. I started in at Mechanical Handling, back in the '50s.

The Korean War started and I got laid off. It was only a week before I was called by the tank plant in Grand Blanc. I was hired in, it was a beautiful job, so I say, 'I was jack of all trades.'

I got into small engine repair and everything. You know where Fenton Auto Parts is? I built that in the early '60s, and had Richter Sales and Service. I sold that store (in 1968) and retired. I retired at 55.

What did you do after you retired? Well, for 20-some years my wife and I went to Florida for six months. Then I lost my wife, and came to live with my daughter.

What advice do you have for young people? Wow, they're growing right up in this here what's happening is mind boggling for me. My two granddaughters are growing right up with the times.

It bothers us with what's going on with the younger generation, but the younger generation, it's just an everyday thing for them. They'll go on, it'll all work out.

"Try to smile and tell jokes and have a happy time."

Lloyd Richter

The trend of the times and what we see on TV, the way the dress is for instance, so much different than when we were growing up. The way I look at it, it's modern times.

I've been so lucky to live to see the coming of the radio, and the automobile and how that's improved and from the jets, why, it's just mind boggling to think what's happened in this world. I gotta say it's for the good.

You should try to smile and tell jokes and have a happy time.

I do tell you, it's sad for me, for somebody my age. I used to know so many people and they're all gone now. It is sad, but I get to look back and be part of the generation to see the radio up through the television, your different cars and your aircraft, your TV and all your computers, it's so wonderful what has happened.

What vacation destination combines the Wild West, wildlife and American presidential history? They all come together in the mountains and Black Hills of South Dakota — home of Mount Rushmore, the Badlands, and best of all, Custer State Park.

With seven weeks of summer left before the official start of fall on Sept. 22, there still may be time for you to visit one of the most unique vacation spots in the U.S. If not, put it on your travel agenda for next year, so you can take full advantage of all the sights and sounds of South Dakota.

About 1,200 miles of driving through the heart of America awaits you from Michigan to South Dakota, but the dramatic scenery and abundant wildlife is worth the drive. You can pick-up I-90 outside of Chicago, Illinois and follow it west through Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and

Ears

Did you hear that?

Maybe the sound you heard was as quiet as your cat licking her paws. Or maybe it was loud, like a siren going by. Sounds are everywhere, and you have two cool parts on your body that let you hear them all: your ears! Your ears are in charge of collecting sounds, processing them, and sending sound signals to your brain. And that's not all — your ears also help you keep your balance. So if you bend over to pick up your cat, you won't fall down — or even worse — fall on your cat. Meow! The ear is made up of three different sections: the outer ear, the middle ear, and the inner ear. These parts all work together so you can hear and process sounds.

THE OUTER EAR: CATCH THE WAVE

The outer ear is called the pinna or auricle (say: or-ih-kul). This is the part of the ear that people can see. It's what people pierce to wear earrings and what your friend whispers into when it's time for a secret. The main job of the outer ear is to collect sounds, whether they're your friend's whispers or a barking dog. The outer ear also includes the ear canal, where wax is produced. Earwax is that gunky stuff that protects the canal. Earwax contains chemicals that fight off infections that could hurt the skin inside the ear canal. It also collects dirt to help keep the ear canal clean. So earwax isn't just gross. It's gross and useful.

THE MIDDLE EAR: GOOD VIBRATIONS

After sound waves enter the outer ear, they travel through the ear canal and make their way to the middle ear. The middle ear's main job is to take those sound waves and turn them into vibrations that are delivered to the inner ear. To do this, it needs the eardrum, which is a thin piece of skin stretched tight like a drum.

What do your ears say about your years?

The ear is actually representative of your fortunes from age one to age fourteen. From the shape to the position, your ears can say a lot about your fortunes in the early years and your personality.

POSITIONS:

1) The ear is as high or higher than the eyebrows:

This means you are pure of thought with a high intellect, thus you will be steered toward the area of the arts or research. It also means that you will not be destitute at any time in your life. You might not be a millionaire because you don't follow the business track, but you won't be poor.

2) The ear is lower than the eye: This means you're more practical when it comes to material possessions and you know what it takes to make yourself comfortable. Since your ears are also an indicator of your early years, this means you had a somewhat turbulent childhood, which is also why as an adult, you want stability and the possessions and comforts that comes that stability.

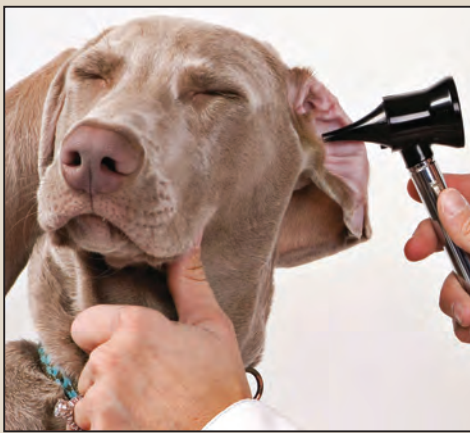

Man refuses to cut almost 10-inch ear hair

Radhakant Baijpai has no intention of ever cutting the hair in his ears, which he has been growing since he was 18-years-old. In fact, the Indian grocer, 58, has let his hair grow so long, it measures 9.8 inches in each ear. He was recognized in the Guinness Book of World Records as having the longest ear hair in 2003, London's Daily Mail reported Tuesday.

Dogs can hear 40 times better than humans

Dogs with flaps over their ears don't hear as well as dogs with ears that stand up straight.

The shape of a dog's ears doesn't affect the frequency that the dog can hear, but does affect the acuteness or sensitivity of the dog's hearing. The range of hearing is approximately 40 Hz to 60 kHz,[6] which is much greater than that of humans. Dogs with flaps over their ears, like Bloodhounds, Basset Hounds and Poodles don't hear as well as dogs with prick ears, ears that stand up straight, like those of German Shepherds or Pomeranians. When dogs hear a sound, they will move their ears towards it in order to maximize reception. In order to achieve this, the ears of a dog are controlled by at least 18 muscles allowing the ears to tilt and rotate.

DOGS GET HIGH OFF EAR RUBS

Has your dog ever fallen into a trance, or into a light sleep, while having her ears rubbed? The nerve impulses sent through the hypothalamus and pituitary glands actually secrete endorphins — the same pain-killing, feel-good hormones humans release during exercise, for example — that make your four-legged companion feel relaxed, mellow and very happy.

When you rub your dog's ears, she's essentially getting high on her own hormones, says Dr. Allen Schoen, director of the Center for the Advancement of Veterinary Alternative Therapies.

Size and physical characteristics:

1) Big ears: It's a sign of vitality and independence. You are lively and energetic, but it often leads you to do whatever you want to. You take into consideration what other people have to say, but in the end, you will make your own choices.

2) Big earlobe: The Buddha had very big and long earlobes. So if you have big and long earlobes, it's extremely good luck. Everything comes very easily to you, and you know how to enjoy life.

3) Triangular earlobe: The earlobe is not fleshy and goes straight to the face. This is not a good sign. Your childhood was troubled and you're not that close to your parents, thus you were lacking a good environment your studies.

4) Vulcan ears: The top of the ears is pointed, though perhaps not to the Vulcan or elf-like extent. If this is you, then you are creative and independent, often to the point of rebellion. You are the anti-traditional, the alternative thinker.

5) Big and rounded ear tops: You are exceptionally smart, though not in the traditional, grade-point average way. Understanding things comes easily, but you don't apply your intellect to just everything. You will engage your smarts only in the things that interest you. Children with these ears should be encouraged to find their own niche, and they will excel at that.

6) Ears that stick out: You did not have the ideal childhood, or you are not that close to your parents. However, you're very energetic and physical, and suited for working outside, not confined to a desk.

7) Overall shape: If the inner cartilage of your ear sticks out more than the shape of your ears, this means you had a rough time in your studies during your childhood and didn't have the best of luck before your fourteenth.

9) Ear hair: Anyone who has the chance to have ear hair will generally live a long and healthy life.

SOUTH DAKOTA

buttes of the Badlands, and the nearby mountains so thick in evergreens that the native Lakota called them "paha sapa" — hills that are black, according to National Geographic Traveler.

The Black Hills boast the highest point east of the Rockies and a wealth of outdoor adventures set amidst jaw-dropping scenery. With one of the largest concentrations of national parks, monuments and caves in the Midwest, the Black Hills and Badlands of South Dakota make a memorable vacation experience.

Badlands National Park

Travel east from Rapid City to the northeast entrance of Badlands National Park. The park consists of nearly 244,000 acres of dramatic rock formations, blended with the largest, protected mixed grass prairie in the U.S. Sixty-four thousand acres are designated official wilderness, and is the site of the reintroduction of the black-footed ferret, the most endangered land mammal in North America. There is also a variety of wildlife including buffalo, bighorn sheep, antelope and black footed ferret.

With jagged spires, eroded buttes and deep crevasses, the Badlands offers unique scenery you can explore on foot, horseback or by car.

Mount Rushmore National Monument

South of Rapid City, Highway 16 will lead you to Mount Rushmore, where sculptor Gutzon Borglum, the original artist assigned to carve Stone Mountain in Georgia, immortalized Presidents Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Theodore Roosevelt on a 5,725-foot-tall stone mountain.

The Presidential Trail provides dramatic views from the foot of the mountain and passes the sculptor's studio, where rangers offer talks on how 400 men and women blasted, chiseled, and smoothed the monument for 14 years with no fatalities.

Custer State Park

Winding mountain roads lead to and away from Rushmore, but if you take Highway 16A, you'll take a western turn into Custer State Park after many twists and turns through tunnels. Custer State Park spreads out into 71,000 preserved acres of granite, pine and prairie. The park's 18-mile Wildlife Loop Road will take you to grasslands, which support a herd of 1,500 bison in addition to pronghorn, bighorn sheep and mountain goats. Halfway along the route, get out and enjoy the summer wildflower displays from the three-mile Prairie Trail.

Whether you like to camp or stay in cabins or full-service lodges, there are plenty of choices at the park, but reserve early, especially for weekends.

Needles Parkway

This 13-mile highway threads through the granite spires of the park in a series of dizzying twists and turns. Look for the roadside turnoff at the Cathedral Spires Trail for a three-mile round-trip hike through ponderosa pines and granite boulders. At the edge of the mountain, enjoy views of 7,242-foot Harney Peak, the state's tallest mountain.

Crazy Horse Memorial

Leaving the park, head west to Custer, then north five miles to the Crazy Horse Memorial, the world's largest sculpture-in-progress. In 1948, Chief Henry Standing Bear invited sculptor Korczak Ziolkowski to carve a mountain to honor the heritage, tradition and culture of North American Indians through a 19th-century Lakota warrior, Crazy Horse. The memorial continues to be worked upon, with frequent drilling and mountain blasts making each visit unique. When completed, Crazy Horse Memorial will stand 563 feet tall by 641 feet long.

Deadwood

Northbound 385 leads straight into the honky-tonk town of Deadwood, where Old Style Saloon #10 on Main Street stages summer daily reenactments of Wild Bill Hickok's murder at the poker table. Visitors can play a hand at the gaming tables themselves.

Hartland Glen Golf Course Offers special 40th anniversary rates

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Hartland Glen Golf Course is celebrating the 40th anniversary of its North Course this summer with special anniversary pricing coming up on Labor Day weekend.

"We'll be offering 18 holes of golf with a cart for just $18 that weekend," said Steve Scherff, general manager. Hartland Glen is located at 12400 Highland Rd. in Hartland, two miles east of the M-59/U.S. 23 intersection.

Affordable pricing is just one of the reasons that Hartland Glen is considered by many to be Livingston County's premiere golf course. It is the only 36-hole golf course in Livingston County and one of the few in southeast Michigan.

The North Course is the original course, featuring ponds, wetlands, mature hardwoods, and plenty of bunkers. The South Course was added in the mid-1990s, designed with doglegs, ponds, wetlands, and tree-lined fairways to negotiate. Both courses are par-71 with plenty of wildlife to experience.

Hartland Glen is an ideal setting for individual, league or group play, accommodating up to 300 golfers. "We're ideal for leagues, because golfers can rotate over all four 'nines,'" said Scherff. The course also handles many golf outings because of its size.

For novices or those who want to practice their swing, Hartland Glen offers lessons with a golf pro. A practice facility includes a range with real grass, a sand bunker, chipping green and two putting greens. Lessons and junior golf are available.

Before or after the game, golfers can enjoy a full grill menu and bar at the Hartland Glen clubhouse. A golf shop is also on-site to provide all the necessities for the avid golfer.

Summary

► Hartland Glen Golf Course, the area's only 36-hole course, is celebrating the 40th Anniversary of its North Course this summer.

Edward Jones[®] MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

Financial Tips for Newly Single Women

Within a marriage, a man and a woman's financial circumstances are generally pretty much equal. But if a divorce occurs, the woman's situation tends to be somewhat more challenging than that of her ex-spouse. And that's why, during this major life transition, you may want to meet with a professional financial advisor to go over your spending needs and your cash flow, so that you know what you absolutely need today — and how you can plan for tomorrow.

Before we get into some possible steps you can take, let's look at some of the reasons that women may fare worse than men, financially speaking, following a divorce:

- Lower income — The average woman's family income drops by 37% after divorce, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. In many cases, divorce exacerbates a situation in which women were already trailing men in earnings. In fact, women still only earn 77 cents for each dollar earned by men, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.
- Smaller retirement accounts — The average balance on women's defined contribution plans (such as 401(k) plans) is only 60% of men's average balances, according to LIMRA, a financial services research organization.

Of course, "averages" are just that — averages. But whether you recognize yourself in the above numbers or not, consider these suggestions:

- Create an emergency fund. Try to put six months' to a year's worth of living expenses in a liquid account. Once you've established this emergency fund, you won't have to dip into long-term investments to pay for unexpected costs, such as an expensive car repair, a new furnace or a large medical bill.
- Contribute as much as you can afford to your retirement accounts. Even if you will eventually receive some of your ex-spouse's retirement funds, you need to take full advantage of your own savings opportunities — because it's pretty hard to save "too much" for retirement. If money is tight, it won't always be easy, but contribute as much as you can to your 401(k) or similar employer-sponsored retirement plan. At a minimum, put in enough to earn the employer's match, if one is offered.
- Rebalance your investment portfolio. If you are now investing for yourself, you'll want to take a close look at your asset mix to make sure it is appropriate for your situation. For example, your risk tolerance may be quite different than that of your ex-spouse's. So if you now have total control over an investment portfolio, you need to make sure it reflects your needs and preferences. Consequently, you may need to "rebalance" your holdings.

• Above all, get some help. As mentioned above, now is a good time to meet with a financial advisor. And if you don't have much experience in managing your finances, you may even find it helpful to work with a trust company, which can collaborate with your financial provider to manage your assets and also provide a variety of other functions, including bill payment and record keeping. A trust company's services can prove especially valuable to you and your family should you ever become incapacitated.

Unfortunately, a divorce may leave you feeling "at sea" in many areas of your life. But by following the above suggestions, you can at least help keep your financial ship in calmer waters.

Getting important upcoming dates out to the community is one of the most effective ways of communicating special events. It's also a big benefit of being a member of the Fenton Regional Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber members are invited to use the Chamber's new online Community Calendar, which debuted six months ago when the Chamber updated all its website software with new web development company Chamber Master. Examples of events to be posted include community events, as business-related events and promotions.

Non-chamber members are also invited to promote special events on this calendar, but can expect a phone call from the Chamber office inviting them to become a member.

"It's a great way to promote community and local business events in Fenton and outside the community," said Shelly Day, Chamber president. "If you aren't a

There are 23 members of the Chamber Ambassadors — a group of business professionals dedicated to helping all of the events of the Chamber run smoothly. Food, music and family fun

► Kiwanis Art at the Center shares day with its art show

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Rain or shine, the 12th annual Taste in Fenton will be a destination for residents and visitors of the tri-county area on Saturday, Aug. 11, from 12 to 8 p.m. at the Fenton Community & Cultural Center.

Whatever the weather, the center will offer a comfortable ambiance inside or outside. The event will take place alongside the 34th annual Kiwanis Art at the Center, providing a full day of activities — ranging from food and beverages to art and music. It's a day of fun for all ages, according to Chamber President Shelly Day.

The Taste in Fenton has developed into an all-day family affair, from its original roots as a weekday "foodie" event. Primary Presenting Sponsors are The State Bank and VG's Grocery, with financial support from the city of Fenton Downtown Development Authority (DDA).

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Mark your calendars now to welcome fall with the Linden Autumn Festival, set for Saturday, Sept. 22, beginning at 12 p.m. Activities will take place on the grounds of the Linden VFW Hall and the Linden Mill Pond.

The State Bank is the primary sponsor of this event, now in its fourth year.

Financial Plus Federal Credit Union is another active sponsor. New this year will be a Euchre Tournament sponsored by Innovative Retirement Solutions running from 6 to 10 p.m., according to Shelly Day, Chamber president. Returning events include the annual fishing contest, miniature golf, Fun-tastic Inflatables and music by a local D.J. Chris Foster.

Food served from area restaurants will be sampled by visitors in a similar style as Taste in Fenton. Entertainment by the hour will provide a festive backdrop to all the festival events.

For more information about the Linden Autumn Festival, visit www.fentonchamber.com or call the Chamber office at (810) 629-5447.

Time flies when you're having fun!

It's hard to believe half the year is over! It's been an exciting full six months at the Fenton Regional Chamber of Commerce.

Our Membership roster continues to grow, which speaks volumes about what our Chamber has to offer through services. We are very proud of our investment with Chamber Master. It has allowed us to enhance benefits without requiring members to pay additional fees. These benefits include mini web profile pages, hot deals, community event calendar, job postings, etc. Other advertising opportunities we have enhanced our Facebook and Twitter business exposure for members.

Our events have been extremely successful! Our Forecast Breakfast was well attended with excellent local and state-wide updates. The Expo added more than 50 new exhibitors. The Eggstraordinary Event in Linden attracted more than 100 children and was enhanced with a kiddy fun run. The Chamber Golf Scramble was sold out with 148 golfers enjoying a great day at Spring Meadows Country Club. We are proud of our involvement in the Fenton Freedom Festival parade and festivities, which proved again to be one of the largest celebrations for miles around. Taste in Fenton is again gearing up to be right on top as one of our largest events this year. We expect this event to be one of the best 'Tastes' ever. Special thanks goes out to all the committees, sponsors and volunteers that help the Chamber staff deliver successful community events to the Fenton region.

Our popular monthly networking events continue to attract approximately 100-plus attendees. We are very appreciative to the sponsors that host networking events. Our members attend for free, get a light bite to eat and enhance their clientele. The next available date to host a networking event is in 2014.

Our most recent accomplishment and proud moment was when we hired an intern from Fenton High School. We are very excited to have Alexandria Stack on our staff. She has already proven to be quite an asset with her technology skills and enhancements to our website.

We, the staff, at the Fenton Regional Chamber of Commerce look forward to making the last half of the year as successful as the first half. We welcome your ideas and suggestions. As always, if you would like a benefit refresher, don't hesitate to contact us.

Wishing you continued business success,
— Shelly Day, president

What a Freedom Festival Parade and Fireworks we all enjoyed on 4th of July!

Despite the extremely hot weather this summer, we had a record turnout for the Freedom Festival Parade. Special thanks go to Pat Lockwood for her leadership and the many hard-working volunteers that made the Freedom Festival such a wonderful event!

There is no better time like the present to take advantage of our community events, activities and businesses in our own communities.

Just around the corner is the Taste in Fenton, set for Saturday, Aug. 11 from 12 to 8 p.m. on the Fenton Community & Cultural Center grounds. There will be plenty to do and taste for all ages, so join us for one of the premier events our city has to showcase. This year the weather will be perfect, so start making plans, invite your friends and relatives from out-of-town and bring them all to enjoy the array of tasty hors d'oeuvres, entrees, drinks and desserts from some of the greatest restaurants. It's a 'foodies' delight!

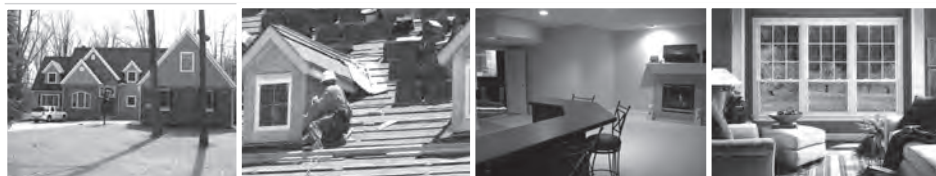

As fast as summer has gone by, the color on the leaves will be turning soon, so don't forget this fall's Linden Autumn Fest on Saturday, Oct. 22 from 12 to 6 p.m. in beautiful downtown Linden on the Mill Pond. Looking further out, we have Meet the Candidates and our Annual Dinner in November.

It is amazing the time commitment required to plan, organize and manage these events and programs. Without our amazing staff, the wonderful volunteers, board members, and our business community members and city officials, we wouldn't be able to showcase our fine communities.

As you know, the North LeRoy business district remains under road construction, but 'progress' is being made! The city has been instrumental, as has the staff from the Fenton Chamber office in reminding the community to continue to Shop Local at those businesses this summer.

As always, thanks for your commitment to Shop Local! I look forward to seeing everyone at this year's Taste in Fenton. We all should have a wonderful time, bring the family! Mark your calendar for Aug. 11.

Report

We at the Chamber have made a personal effort to conduct as much of our business with Chamber members on N. LeRoy during the construction as possible. We have found and heard from others that navigating the construction has not been that difficult. We challenge you to make an effort to visit at least one of the 50 plus Chamber businesses located on N. LeRoy during the construction to show your support.

The Fenton Regional Chamber of Commerce Business Development Committee has developed offerings for Chamber businesses affected during the N. LeRoy Street construction project.

THESE OFFERINGS INCLUDE:

- Your business may provide a coupon in one of the Chamber's weekly updates.
- Your business may post one or two times weekly on the Chamber Facebook page.
- You can offer a Hot Deal on the Chamber website.
- We can post a mini flip cam commercial on Facebook and YouTube. We have a flip cam and can schedule your recording date and time.
- The Chamber will provide each business with five to ten shop local bags for you to offer as an incentive to shop your businesses during construction.
- All interested businesses will be entered into a drawing for a quarter page color ad in the Tri-County Times for only $100. Only three spots are available. The Chamber & Tri-County Times will pick up the remaining cost of the ad.

The Fenton Chamber offers Chamber Members 10 percent off their 2013 membership dues for every business that is referred to the Chamber that joins in 2012. Why not take advantage today and ask your business associates to join too?

Wishing you business success

AMBASSADORS

One of the biggest projects of the Ambassadors is Networking @ Noon, showcasing new Chamber members on-site at the business during the lunch hour. Ambassador members serve as greeters during these regular events, and assist with some of the details.

They are also very active in the Chamber's monthly fundraising lunches, delivering boxed lunches to area businesses through a special arrangement made with a different area restaurant each month. "We get a special rate on the lunches, and the remainder of the money charged for each lunch benefits the Chamber's scholarship program for Fenton, Lake Fenton and Linden high school students," said Penwell.

"You can't imagine just how important and valuable the Ambassadors are to the Chamber staff. They help us with their connections in the business community. One of the benefits to each Ambassador is new connections they develop with other business owners and representatives."

Shelly Day
Chamber president

Other active Ambassador projects include Taste in Fenton, where these business volunteers will be busy helping with booth set-ups and tear downs, taking tickets, directing visitors, etc. The annual Chamber Golf Outing and JingleFest are other busy Chamber events with which the Ambassadors are involved.

"You can't imagine just how important and valuable the Ambassadors are to the Chamber staff," said Shelly Day, Chamber president. "They help us with their connections in the business community. One of the benefits to each Ambassador is the new connections they develop with other business owners and representatives."

"Part of the reason the Chamber is so strong is that they have the backing of the Ambassadors," said Penwell.

SPOTLIGHTPanda Water
Ice Company, LLC

The frozen dessert treat known throughout the world as “Water Ice” starts with sorbetto, and ranges down through sorbet, sherbet water and ice. These are followed by slushes, frozen lemonades and snow cones at the bottom.

Panda Water Ice is artesian sorbetto, made from fresh fruit, natural sugars and natural fruit extracts. Unlike the more commonly known gelato or Italian ice cream, sorbetto has no milk or dairy. In addition, it is made with no egg or egg products. Therefore, it is fat free, lactose free and cholesterol free as well. There is no gluten, whey, soy, or nuts in our sorbetto. There are also several sugar-free varieties available. All of this makes Panda Water Ice a healthier and delicious alternative to ice cream.

Panda Water Ice Company, located near the Fenton Winery and Brewery, and the Sagebrush Cantina, is also within walking distance to parts of Lake Fenton. We offer a family-friendly setting with both indoor tables, as well as, outdoor seating on our bistro-like patio — with its own beautiful waterfall. There are always 32, freshly made flavors on hand (at least three are sugar-free).

We offer Strawberry Lemonade, Cherry Vanilla, Michigan Cherry, Passion Fruit, Coconut, Blue Raspberry (Blue Raz), Piña Colada, Margarita, Root Beer, Lime, Lemon Peel, Cotton Candy to name a few, to delight the senses. Water Ice can be blended to make fantastic, exotic tasting ice creams such as mango, passion fruit or sour green apple. Or, Water Ice can be layered between soft serve ice cream to make a Gelati (like a root beer float or a creamsicle).

Hazelnut coffee sorbetto can be combined to make a treat called a Pandachino made with vanilla soft serve ice cream or a Pandamochachino made with chocolate soft serve. Both are a delicious way to get an afternoon pick-me-up.

For an extraordinary taste sensation there are mixed treats. Water Ice blended in with soft serve ice cream and toppings like brownie bits, cheesecake bit or other toppings is called a Pandamonium.

Either as an “eat-at-the-store” treat, a take-home treat or pints and quarts, sorbetto is a wonderful and healthy alternative to ice cream and other frozen desserts.

counselors
needed

The Fenton Regional Chamber of Commerce is proud to be a satellite location for SCORE. Over the past year, we have scheduled nearly 50 appointments for counseling sessions at our location.

Ann Arbor is the closest main headquarters for SCORE in our area. SCORE is a free service for potential entrepreneurs, as well as current business owners to receive real life experience advice. If necessary, after an evaluation visit with a SCORE counselor, the counselor will try to match the client up with someone who has a similar career background.

SCORE welcomes anyone interested to inquire about the qualifications of becoming a SCORE counselor. Recently, one of our members, Dave Zoldowski, owner of Auto One in Fenton, was approved as a SCORE Counselor. Dave is looking forward to sharing his personal experiences and expertise he has acquired as a business owner for approximately 20 years.

To set up an appointment for more information about becoming a counselor, or if you would like to meet with a counselor for business advice, contact the Chamber at (810) 629-5447, ext. 403.
