● Michigan venues lining up concert experiences for all ages this summer

By William Axford

axford@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Woodstock. Monterey International Pop Festival. The Beatles playing their final live act atop Apple Studios.

Diehard music lovers can rattle off numerous concerts that defined a generation and shaped the future of rock 'n' roll. While Led Zeppelin, Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin are no more, there are plenty of touring musicians creating memorable concerts for a new generation. Here's a look at some of the top acts coming to Michigan this summer.

A mere half hour away from Fenton, summers at DTE Energy Music Theater are filled with numerous concerts. Eddie Money is the inaugural act every year, playing on May 23. Other acts to look out for this summer include Journey and Steve Miller Band (July 9), Boston with Cheap Trick (June 24),

Ted Nugent (July 19) and Hank Williams Jr. (August 17). While tickets can reach the $50 range for seats, general admission for most shows hover around $20. Palacenet.com has a complete listing of who is coming this summer, with pricing for seats.

If you're looking for free concerts within an hour's drive, consider making a trip to FirstMerit Park in Saginaw. Built less than two years ago, the park is hosting seven free concerts this summer, a tailgate party featuring country music for Michigan and Michigan State fans, and visits from several tribute bands covering Pink Floyd and Led Zeppelin. Go to Dowevent-center.com for the full low down.

With bright lights and thunderous bass bumping, Movement Electronic Music Festival in Detroit will most likely draw a younger crowd. Love it or hate it, electronic music has strong roots in Detroit. The event will be held at Hart Plaza. The three-day event begins May 24 and was formerly known as the Detroit Electronic Music Festival. One day passes start at $65, three-day passes at start at $130. Visit Movement.us for details.

From funk legends Earth, Wind and Fire to rock bands Say Anything and Brand New, the Common Ground music festival in Lansing has a variety of acts to satisfy anyone's palate. The music festival lasts from July 8 to the 13 with the option to buy a one-day pass to admission for all six days. In the past, Common Ground has attracted more than 50,000 people to downtown Lansing, with people enjoying food and music along the Grand River in Adado Riverfront. Ticket prices range from $15 to $1,300, depending on perks and number of days chosen. Visit Commongroundfest.com for more information.

Comerica Park in Detroit is usually home to some of the biggest concerts of the summer and this year is no exception. The annual Downtown Hoedown will kick off May 30 and wrap up June 1, featuring artists Dirk Bentley and Alan Turner, amongst others. Jimmy Buffett will bring his island tunes July 26. Michigan favorite Kid Rock will take the stage August 12 and August 13, followed by Eminem and Rihanna the following weekend August 22 and 23.

As a bigger, more theatrical venue, Concerts at Comerica Park can be a little more expensive, ranging from $30 for upper level seats to well over $100 a ticket for a seat on the field. Visit Detroit.tigers.mlb.com for a complete rundown of summer concerts.

Closer than Detroit and right down the street from DTE Energy, the Palace of Auburn Hills will have a bevy of concerts worth seeing this summer. On July 18, The Warped Tour will feature enough pop punk bands to keep teenagers enthralled for the whole day. Justin Timberlake is bringing his 20/20 Experience tour July 28 and Katy Perry's Prismatic World Tour follows August 11. Palacenet.com has more information.

The stories behind your favorite CEREAL MASCOTS

► Here are the stories behind the characters that successfully motivated us to beg our parents to purchase their sugary products.

Sources: mentalfloss.com, thrillist.com, kelloggs.com, generalmills.com

ORIGINAL TAGLINE

"I'm a rabbit and rabbits are supposed to like carrots. But I hate carrots. I like Trix."

CURRENT TAGLINE

"Silly Rabbit, Trix are for kids."

THE RABBIT

Cereal: TRIX

Before he was animated, the Trix rabbit was a hand puppet. By 1976, General Mills was worried it was sending the wrong message to kids by having the rabbit always fall short of his aspiration. They decided to let the kids vote whether the rabbit should get a bowl. The Rabbit's campaign was so successful that more than 99 percent kids voted to let the rabbit have a bowl. The Rabbit has succeeded in grabbing bites here and there, but he hasn't had a full bowl since 1980.

"THEY'RE GRRRRREAT!"

If Tony's singing voice sounds familiar it's because his voice actor Thurl Ravenscroft also sang "You're a mean one Mr. Grinch" for the Grinch cartoon.

THE FOUR CHOICES

The Leo Burnett advertising agency came up with four different choices for the cereal: Tony the Tiger, Katy the Kangaroo, Elmo the Elephant and Newt the Gnu.

HORATIO CRUNCH

Cereal: CAP'N CRUNCH

One of the grossest things about cold cereal is when it gets too soggy and turns mushy. Captain Horatio P. Crunch was born in response to a survey kids that said they hated soggy cereal. The Captain was charged with guarding his cereal from the menace of sogginess, Jean Le-Foot.

DID YOU KNOW?

Once the television ads began to be seen by a larger and younger audience, Kellogg's decided to modernize the three and make them more human-like. Snap, Crackle and Pop are now the longest-running cereal advertising campaign in history.

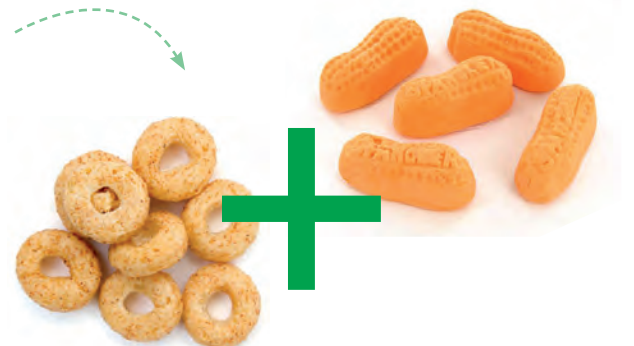

LUCKY

Cereal: LUCKY CHARMS

The concept of marshmallows in a bowl (or "marbits," as General Mills called them) was easily appealing to kids, but a much harder sell for parents. Lucky was spawned from a concept to base the marshmallows around a charm bracelet. Lucky's original charm bracelet included yellow moons, orange stars, pink hearts, and green clovers.

BRILLIANT IDEA

Lucky Charms hit the shelves in 1964 after some crazy food scientists experimented with Cheerios and Circus Peanuts marshmallow candy to form the cereal we love today.

TODAY

SNAP, CRACKLE AND POP

Cereal: RICE KRISPIES

Rice Krispies had the distinction of being a cereal you could hear. Illustrator Vernon Grant drew the three characters as gnomes. Snap was the first gnome and appeared in a few solo ads before his brothers came along. When they first started appearing in 1939 they fought against their rivals Soggy, Mushy and Toughy for the hearts (and bowls) of the children.

Sausalito PLAN 30-521

Painted columns support the Marion's lavishly windowed front porch, creating an overall impression of warmth and understated refinement. Shutters and a plant shelf add to the charm.

This large two-story home with side-opening garage is designed to fit on a narrow corner lot, but the garage could just as easily open to the front.

Entering, you step into a two-story foyer, brightened by a gabled dormer and two skylights. Plants thrive on the high shelves near the front door.

In the living room, high windows on both sides of the fireplace cap built-in shelves, useful for displaying photos, objets d'art, books, you name it.

INGREDIENTS

- Pizza dough
- 1-2 small boneless skinless chicken breast, sliced and cooked
- Salt and Pepper (for seasoning the chicken)
- Pinch of sea salt
- 2 T. extra virgin olive oil
- 1 - 1 1/2 cup Alfredo sauce
- 1 cup sliced black olives
- 1 cup sliced red onion
- 2 cups shredded Mozzarella cheese
- 1 handful of baby spinach leaves

DIRECTIONS

1. Season your chicken with salt and pepper, cooking it in olive oil until cooked through. Drain and place in a medium size bowl. Stir in 1 cup of Alfredo sauce until chicken is completely covered. Set aside.
2. Once you've rolled out your dough, lightly drizzle it with olive oil and lightly sprinkle with sea salt. Add a thin layer of pesto followed by your chicken. You can add a little extra Alfredo sauce but be careful not to add TOO much, otherwise you'll have a runny pizza!
3. Follow the baking instructions for the dough you're using.

KEITH ROACH, M.D.

To your good health

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 65-year-old male in fairly good health. I do a bit of running. I've checked my blood pressure and pulse lately and have started monitoring it. My pulse is always in the 40s or low 50s. I went to the hospital to get some blood work done and have an EKG. They almost didn't let me go home. My pulse was reading 35, so the doctor sent me to the outpatient department. I wore an all-day heart-rate monitor. It did register in the 30s overnight. I eat right, don't smoke and am athletic, so my doctor couldn't recommend anything. Is there a problem with a low pulse? When I get older, how low will it drop? — C.W.

ANSWER: Bradycardia ("brady" for "slow," "cardia" for "heart") usually is not a problem in people who have no symptoms. However, heart rates in the 30s make me nervous, and they make most cardiologists start thinking very seriously about pacemakers. My colleague, Dr. Rob Campagna, a cardiologist at Weill-Cornell, tells me that at heart rates in the 30s and below, most people have symptoms, even if they are subtle. He also reminded me that sleep apnea, a condition I have written about several times, is a cause of bradycardia and ought to be considered in people with slow rates at nighttime.

Puppy love should go the distance

DEAR AMY: I recently found the man of my dreams. Timing seems to be the enemy here as I've been trying to follow my passion and have dreamed of becoming a teacher for the past three years. I have now landed a job six hours away. I start in a month. We've talked more recently about visiting each other twice a month and him potentially moving up there in December. Do long-distance relationships ever work out, especially after knowing someone for such a short amount of time? I tell him every day all the things I love about him but I don't say, "I love you." He does the same thing. I am worried that might scare him off. The "L word" is a big thing, but I don't want to leave town without him knowing how I feel. Is it possible for such a new relationship to work out long distance? Is it too early to tell this man that I love him? — Not Enough Time

DEAR ENOUGH: It is definitely possible for your relationship to work out long distance; in fact, given the fact that you are starting a new job and your love interest is working on challenging projects, this distance might give you both the freedom you need to fulfill your professional pursuits, while giving this new relationship time to grow. Long-distance relationships can be wonderful, fulfilling and exciting. Don't crowd him too much now and don't lay heavy emotions on the table (I do think it's too early to launch a spring-loaded "L word" in his direction). Determine that you will stay open and optimistic about the possibilities.

DEAR AMY: Some years ago, my wife reconnected with an old boyfriend, "Ray," on Facebook. I don't have any problem with this; I keep up with a few old girlfriends on Facebook too. We've been married nearly 30 years and are approaching 60. Our trust issues are long behind us. Today, she told me that she just found out that Ray died. His wife put a notice up on his Facebook wall. My wife wants to send a note of condolence. I'm concerned that this could be a really bad idea. Though my wife and I might not have any issues with re-contacting old flames, his wife could jump to the conclusion that this was an active romantic relationship. What do you think? — Husband

DEAR HUSBAND: If this wife has full access to her late husband's Facebook account, she is going to see his activity. Regardless, your wife should express her condolences: "I was so saddened to learn of 'Ray's' death. Though I hadn't seen him in many years, I remember him as a wonderful person and I can imagine the void his passing has left in your life. My husband and I send our condolences to you and your family."

iPhone tip of the week

Oh no! Autocorrect! How to teach your iPhone new words

Apple's iOS autocorrect can be helpful when it works, but is very annoying when you're typing correctly, and autocorrect replaces it with something else, just because the word isn't in the iOS dictionary. You must have undoubtedly encountered this annoyance, and found workarounds, but here's the quickest way to "teach" autocorrect new words.

Simply open up Safari and type the word you want to add to your dictionary into the smart search field. Once you've done that, iOS should stop correcting that word for you. The nice thing is that, the dictionary gets synced across iOS devices, so if you successfully add a word, it should get synced across all your devices.
