Pay off your mortgage — or not?

►That is the question many homeowners have as they head toward retirement

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

If you're a homeowner with a 30-year mortgage, you're likely dreaming of the day when you can hold the same ceremonial burning of the mortgage your parents did many years ago.

Times have changed, however, and more people are going into their retirement years with not only a roof, but a mortgage still over their heads.

"You've got to look at your whole financial picture when deciding whether or not it's a wise financial decision to pay off your mortgage," said Margie Shard of Shard Financial Services in Fenton. "Generally speaking, any time you can eliminate debt, it's a good thing. Then you can re-direct those funds into investments."

However, in some cases there may be benefits to homeowners

One thing Shard is definite about is that you don't want to pay off your mortgage at the expense of your retirement accounts. "You'll have to pay taxes on money you take out of your retirement account to pay off your mortgage."

The best way to go into retirement without a mortgage is to either pre-pay the mortgage, or make 13 payments instead

Then there is No-Shave November. (no-shave. org,) which is a unique way to raise cancer awareness. This is for the guys who want to go all out and grow their facial hair for a good cause.

One of these men hap-

"Yes, I have taken the No-Shave November challenge and have asked my school family (students, staff, and parents) to take the challenge as well (or simply make a small donation)," Tiemann said via email. He added, "I decided to of 12 over a 12-month period, reducing your interest and gaining more ground on the principle.

Whether you should take these steps to pay off your mortgage early depends on your personal finances, according to forbes.com. These factors include:

• Your total financial picture. Have you fully funded your retirement, including uncovered health care costs?

• The amount of your mortgage payment. Is it so high that it's a big burden every month?

• Other investments you may have. Depending on your cash flow, your financial plan and your ability to put money toward it, paying off your mortgage may carry opportunities for loss on investment returns you have to forgo that might be higher than the interest rate on the mortgage.

• Your cash reserves. You should have six months' worth of living expenses put away for emergencies, such as a job loss. Don't pay off your mortgage without having a cash cushion.

• The interest rate on your mortgage loan. You don't have as much to gain when interest rates are low. If it's higher than 5 percent, it would be worth more to get it paid off. You should evaluate your interest rate against the current lending market to see if it might be a smart move to refinance your mortgage. If so, you may be able to lower your payment and invest more for retirement.

• Property taxes on your home. Even if you pay off your mortgage, you'll have to account for these taxes in your postmortgage financial life.

• Where you stand in the life of the loan. The more your outstanding principal, the more interest you're paying, which can be deducted for federal income tax purposes.

The above points show the practical sides of whether or not to pay off your mortgage. There's an emotional side as well, in achieving that lifetime goal. That may make the decision worthwhile for you.

do this because it's a silly way to bring attention and raise awareness to a serious problem."

Cancer affects everyone in some way, whether it's a family member, friend, neighbor, or co-worker. No-Shave November and Movember are both ways that people can take action in an effort to raise money for a cure.

Tiemann said, "I have a $500 goal that we hope to reach by the end of the month (all money will be donated to the American Cancer Society)." Not only does he work toward getting donations, he also tries to enlist others to follow along. "I know that several of the 'dads' of my students have accepted my challenge and are now growing beards as well," he said. Whether you want to donate to the cause, or earn some money toward it, there is still a week and a half left of the month to start growing that facial hair.

We're inching closer to December, the busiest shipping month of the year. To avoid the longest lines, you'll want to have your packages sent out before the week of Dec. 15 to 20, which is traditionally the busiest shipping week of the year.

If you wait until the week of Dec. 22, you may have to buy an upgraded, more expensive service to get your gift to its destination in time for Christmas. If you wait until Dec. 29 and beyond, you may have to pay a higher price, as UPS and all other carriers will begin charging for the dimensional size of the package or the weight, whichever is greater.

Air at a premium price, about $50 for a 5-pound package sent from Fenton to California. If you are sending a package as far as California, it should be shipped out by Dec. 17."

Beare advises customers to get packages mailed out early, and avoid the store's early opening hour at 9 a.m., lunch hour, and the after-work hours, when lines will be the busiest.

The biggest shipping mistake people make in sending out packages is assuming that it will arrive on the same schedule it would during less busy times of the year, said Michael Clabuesch of Goin' Postal in Fenton.

"Priority mail may take quite a bit longer than usual at Christmas, without paying a premium price to get it there," he said. "It may take four to five days instead of two to four days for ground packages sent in the continental U.S. For overseas packages, plan on at least two to three weeks."

Clabuesch also advises people shipping packages to pay just a few dollars more for delivery confirmation. "January through October, it may not be a problem," he said. "But during the holidays, people will follow delivery trucks and take packages right off the porch. If delivery is critical, ask for delivery with See SHIPPING on 10

Obama's new attitude: Don't back down

With only two years left in his final term — and after a stinging rebuke to his party in the midterm elections, the president is showing a new attitude: No more Mr. Nice Guy.

First he threw down a challenge on the immigration issue. After years of setbacks and delays, Obama boldly vowed to take executive action to protect as many as 6 million undocumented immigrants from fear of deportation.

He welcomed Congress to replace his unilateral action with more comprehensive legislation of its own. But he's moving ahead, he vowed, whether Congress does or not.

But if the president has given up hope for a break in Washington gridlock, he has ample reasons. Despite the willingness that McConnell and House Speaker John Boehner have expressed to maybe work across the aisle with Democrats in the new Congress, that's not what Republican voters tell pollsters that they want to hear.

Two-thirds of Republican and Republican-leaning independents voters say the Grand Old Party's leaders should 'stand up' to Obama, 'even if less gets done.'

Only 32 percent want to see the newlyelected GOP lawmakers work together if it means compromises that disappoint some of the party's supporters. By contrast, only 43 percent of Democrats and Democraticleaning independents said Obama should 'stand up' to Republicans, even if it meant less productivity in Washington. Yet, even if Democrats are more interested in compromise than Republicans are, Obama has only two years left to accomplish something with Congress — after two years in which they seemed to accomplish almost nothing.

Conservative extremists want to push for another government shutdown to get what they want. Obama wants to show that he, too, can govern, despite relentless GOP attempts to show that he can't.

Future presidential candidates will have to be 'pro-immigration, pro-same-sex marriage, pro-economic fairness,' said White House senior adviser Dan Pfeiffer.

Yet it is hard to deny that Obama has had a profound impact on the way we Americans talk about politics. You can hear it in the boldness of his actions and the ferocity of his opposition.

Compiled by Christopher Jones, staff reporter

I UNDERSTAND YOUR frustration. You state you did not want to vote, because you may not trust the candidates to do right. I voted because the township hall is close, and convenient. But, I also felt that I was just going through the motions. I did not win.

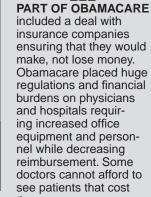

YOU ARE RIGHT. I used to work at an assisted living center on the overnight shift. Some of the residents had a hard time sleeping. I think they are lonely and afraid. They do need conversation and interaction especially in those hours. The caregivers really don't have the time.

Who are you calling stupid?

'Stupid is as stupid does' — Forrest Gump

Unless you regularly follow conservative media, you may not have heard what one of the architects of the Affordable Care Act (aka Obamacare) thinks about you.

Jonathan Gruber is a Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) health economist who helped craft Obamacare. In a rare moment of unvarnished candor, Gruber told an audience last year at the University of Pennsylvania the law passed because of the 'stupidity of the American voter.'

Gruber told his audience, 'The bill was written in a tortured way to make sure the CBO (Congressional Budget Office) did not score the mandate as taxes. If CBO scored the mandate as taxes, the bill dies. OK, so it's written to do that.' Gruber added, '... if you had a law which said that healthy people are going to pay in — you made explicit that healthy people pay in and sick people get money — it would not have passed.'

Gruber continued digging his hole even deeper: 'Lack of transparency is a huge political advantage. And basically, call it the stupidity of the American voter or whatever, but basically that was really, really critical for the thing to pass.'

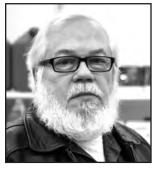

Not surprisingly, the video of Gruber's comments, which began to draw mainstream media attention this week, 13 months after the comments were made, has been removed from YouTube without explanation.

After the administration argued that Obamacare was not a tax, the Supreme Court narrowly ruled that it is and that because Congress has a constitutional right to impose taxes the law is constitutional. The court now has a chance to redeem itself and help people whose insurance is being canceled, or premiums raised, or coverage reduced.

Republicans should save the clip of Jonathan Gruber and run it over and over again in the run-up to the 2016 election. This attitude that government is better at making decisions than you are because you are too stupid to know what is good for you is a hallmark of patronizing, arrogant and condescending liberalism.

Mice move in for the same reason you do

►Warmth, water, food lure four-legged pests inside for the winter

By Yvonne Stegall

ystegall@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

There are three things mice are looking for, according to Jesse Sutton, one of the owners of Creature Control. They are looking for food/water, heat and a place to call home. If you think about it, this is why we humans have homes. So what is a homeowner to do when the mice have moved in?

Since this is an unwanted roommate that doesn't pay rent and does bring al-

► Mice want the same things as us, a warm place to live, with food and water readily available. nd does bring allergies and disease, and likes to eat your food without asking, you'll need to take some steps to rid your home of these little squatters. According to

Sutton, you need to start by removing the things that bring them in your home in the first place. Obviously, you aren't going to shut off the heat. However, you can make it harder for them to get to the food and water they need to survive.

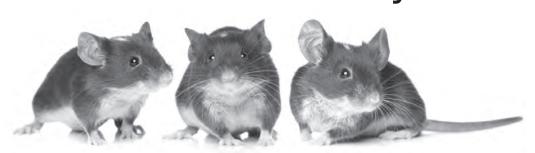

Don't leave birdseed or pet food in its original bags, even in the garage. Get a bucket with a lid, or Sutton suggested a galvanized trash can with a lid, to store it in. The mice can't climb up the can to get to the food. Also, keep pantry and cupboard foods, like rice and flour, in storage containers.

Leaky pipes or standing water in the basement, are great places for mice to quench their thirst. Get leaks fixed and make sure standing water is dealt with. Condensation on pipes can also attract mice.

What's inside your home might not be the only thing attracting mice inside. Sutton also pointed out that bird feeders placed too close to a house can attract them. He suggested keeping bird feeders 100 or more feet away from the house.

Once you've removed the draw, you can start working on eradicating the mice that have already made your house their home. There are many options, from live traps to classic mousetraps, and sticky traps to poison. Sutton said that often poisons are a bad choice because the mice will store it in the attic, or wherever they've made their home, and store it for some time. Then when they eat it they eat enough that kills them quickly, leaving a dead, stinky mouse in your house.

Once your infestation has been taken care of, when you aren't finding anymore mice in traps or signs of them (like feces or chewed up food packaging) it's time to seal the house up so no more can come in.

For this, Sutton suggested calking holes up to 3 feet high and having basic construction repairs done. Mice can squeeze through the smallest hole.

If none of this worked to get rid of your mouse houseguests, it's time to call in the professionals. Sutton said, "Don't just seal off the house if you have a current infestation." You need to get the mice out first, or you seal them in with no place to go.

HOUSE MOUSE FACTS

• While communicating with each other, mice make ultrasonic as well as regular sounds.

• Most mice are very good jumpers. They can jump nearly 18 inches (46 cm) in the air. They also are talented climbers and swimmers.

• At around 4 to 7 weeks old, a female mouse will mate and have young. She will carry her young for 19 to 21 days and give birth to four to a dozen babies. Mice can have a new litter of babies every three weeks.

• Mice have voracious appetites. They eat around 15 to 20 times per day.

Continued from Front Page There will be an informational meeting with representatives of the DEQ, their environmental testing firm, the health department, and other personnel to discuss the results of the air and ground water testing that was done in Linden this past summer.

They will also be discussing the next steps in the testing process. Mayor David Lossing said, "We are merely coordinating the sharing of information and what hopefully will be next steps taken by the MDEQ to resolve this issue in our community."

In June of 2014, DEQ came into Linden to do some investigating after complaints of petroleum odors in or near the downtown area. DEQ sampled storm water drains and the sump pump in one business, where they found signs of a gas component.

DEQ called in the EPA to help with air surveys, soil testing and more. The leak was tracked back to an area business, according to DEQ Environmental Quality Analyst Marjorie Frisch, and the information will be released at the meeting this Friday.

An update on Michigan's sentencing guidelines

Under Michigan law for almost all felony offenses committed after Jan. 1, 1999, judges are required to use Michigan's Sentencing Guidelines.

These Guidelines are published in a manual and have a scoring system, which gives a criminal defendant a certain number of points in a number of categories including their prior criminal record, the type of offense and the severity of the offense and which are added together to determine a total.

There are also other factors that are considered by the sentencing judge and a higher final point total will result in a higher minimum sentencing range.

For example, depending on the total score, an armed robbery conviction can have a possible minimum sentencing range of 21 to 35 months in prison all the way up to 900 months to life. The minimum range can be reduced only when there are substantial and compelling reasons to do so.

Michigan's sentencing guidelines are now the subject of appellate review by our Michigan Supreme Court in the case of People v Lockridge as a result of the 2013 United States Supreme Court's holding in Alleyne v United States.

In Alleyne the defendant was convicted in federal court of using or carrying a firearm in relation to a crime of violence. This federal offense carries a five-year mandatory minimum sentence with a seven-year minimum if the firearm is 'brandished.' The jury found that the defendant had used or carried a firearm and the judge found it had been brandished. Thereafter the defendant was sentenced to the seven-year term.

On appeal, the Supreme Court held that this was impermissible and any fact that increases the mandatory minimum for a crime must be submitted to the jury under the Sixth Amendment. Since this was not done, the Court held that the defendant was to be resentenced.

On June 11, 2014 the Michigan Supreme Court agreed to hear the Lockridge appeal to determine whether a judge's determination of the appropriate sentencing guidelines range established a 'mandatory minimum sentence' under Alleyne, and whether the fact that a judge may depart from the guidelines prevents the sentencing guidelines from being considered a mandatory minimum sentence.

When a final decision is reached in Lockridge, I will have a full report.

The Ford pick-up then struck a 2013 International, box truck, also southbound on U.S. 23. A third vehicle, a 2008 Chevrolet Malibu struck the rear of the International box truck as it came to a stop along the west shoulder of the roadway, after the initial collisions.

The driver of the 2008 Chevrolet van, a 73-year-old Monroeville, Indiana man was pronounced dead at the scene by paramedics, according to Aro. The passenger of the van was transported to Hurley Medical Center in Flint with serious injuries.

The driver of the Ford pick-up, later identified as a Linden resident, was not injured. The occupants of the International truck and Chevrolet Malibu were also uninjured.

The crash remains under investigation. Slippery road conditions were believed to be a factor in the crash.

Looking back to 2013

In comparison, the city had no fatal roadway crashes, due to the weather, in all of winter 2013-14. Police remind residents to take it easy on snowy roads and the National Weather Service is calling for at least small amounts of snow, and cold temperatures for the near future.

Michigan State Police reports that driving too fast for the conditions is usually the main cause of crashes in winter weather. Last year, 260 crashes occurred in the city, with 128 attributed to wintery weather. Of the 260, 48 were personal injury (PI) crashes and fortunately, none were fatal.

Further breaking down the weather related crashes — 75 were due to ice, 53 were due to snow and nine were due to slush.

Slater might feel like a broken record with his winter driving advice, but every year there are crashes, as well as many new drivers behind the wheel for their first winter season.

"You have to drive for the conditions," he said. While the speed limit may be 40, the best speed may be 10, or 25 miles per hour.

Slater said that the biggest mistake people make is driving too close to the car stimulus in Michigan. In addition, a federal report recently found that hunters, on average, spend about $885 each fall season for hunting related purchases and travel.

If you aren't a hunter you might wonder why that spending is so high, but the cost of hunting equipment isn't cheap. From a few hundred for a gun (or crossbow, which can be used during all deer hunting seasons here in Michigan), upwards of $100 for a stand or blind and then you need your license.

This year the DNR did some restructuring of licenses, making it so that all hunters would need to purchase a base license first (around $11) and then their nology, hunters are also spending more money on mobile devices and apps that help them in the field.

Debbie Munson Badini, deputy public information officer for the Michigan DNR said via email, "Every dollar that hunters spend on licenses and hunting equipment (guns, ammo, bows, etc.) helps to support wildlife conservation in Michigan. The hunting equipment has a federal excise tax that is returned to the states for wildlife conservation work. She added, "If not for the financial support of hunters, equaling more than $15 million each year just in license sales, Michigan's wildlife resources would not be nearly what they are today, with some of the best hunting opportunities you will find in the country."

Data shows that while there are fewer people hunting deer in Michigan than there were 10 years ago, the amount of money that hunters spend in the state has gone up. According to research studies, this higher spending has been on non-firearm category items, such as hunting clothes.

What hunting does for Michigan...

Michigan Sportsmen Against Hunger (MSAH), has been working since 1991 to help hunters and wild game processors work toward feeding the hungry. MSAH is an all-volunteer organization that is led by sportsmen and women concerned about making a positive difference in the community.

According to their website, "Together, we have assembled a network of processors and charities across Michigan to help channel wild game donations into

MSAH Vice President Neal Easterbrook said participating processors in the 2012 hunting season helped MSAH facilitate the processing of more than 30,000 pounds of venison into nutritious meals for needy families all across Michigan. ## Mini-golf free-for-all at Tomek

Students build 50 playable, one-hole putt-putt courses for PE unit

By Tim Jagielo

tjagielo@tctimes.com; 810-433-6795 Fenton — For three days last week, students at Tomek-Eastern Elementary School played haunted courses, MSU Spartan-themed courses, Candyland courses, inverted courses and about 50 others, in the school gym.

It was a putt-putt course free-for-all for all grade levels using more than 50 singlehole mini-golf courses on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, as part of a physical education (PE) unit.

Designed and built by fifth-graders and their families, the courses covered the entire gym with miniature putting greens that were colorful, detailed, and fun to look at.

PE teacher Amy Mowery said the unit teaches the students about respecting other students' projects, because of all the work that went into them, and making good choices.

The fifth-graders learn about using tools to build them, and Mowery said the dads all compare each others' work after everything has been set up in the gym.

They all probably learn a little about golf, too. As a 14-year tradition, she said students were excited for the unit.

While you may think that wrapping packages before bringing them in to ship will be a timesaver at the counter, it may be faster to have the shipping company pack it properly according to shipping guidelines. "Having us package it guarantees it will be shipped safely," said Beare. "The UPS Store is the only shipping location to back its services with the Pack & Ship Guarantee."

For customers preparing packages for shipping on their own, Beare suggests they use the following UPS packing guidelines:

• Use a new box.

• Use at least 2 inches of approved packing material (bubble wrap or peanuts) all the way around the item (no newspapers, tissues, towels, etc.). Using the wrong packing materials may void a claim if contents are damaged during shipping. • Do not 'overwrap' package with brown paper, as it could come off during shipping.

"All packages properly packed should withstand a 4-foot drop off a table," said Beare.

I'm a bit upset the Lions lost to the Arizona Cardinals. just like most Detroit fans.

Honestly, I was expecting a Lions' victory. I know Detroit was on the road, but I was shocked to hear so many people expecting the Lions to lose to Arizona with backup quarterback Drew Stanton guiding the home team. I thought that fact in itself was enough to figure the Lions would win if all else was equal.

Of course, the Lions' offense made sure all else wasn't equal. And, somehow, the Lions' Matt Stafford was outperformed by Stanton. How the heck did that happen? In a game where both defenses are expected to be reasonably solid for different reasons, it seems Stafford should've given the Lions the edge. But Stafford actually ended up being the biggest reason for the Lions defeat.

I like some of what I've seen from Stafford this year. He isn't turning the ball over like he did in the past. With the way the defense is playing, that in itself is enough to lead the Lions to a winning record. But to be outperformed by Stanton? That was puzzling

Nine Tigers headed to state meet

Young swimmers, divers to represent Fenton squad

By David Troppens

dtroppens@tctimes.com When the Fenton varsity girls swimming and diving team head to the D2 state meet held at the Holland Aquatic Center on Friday, they'll be bringing nine athletes.

And the Tigers can probably expect to bring those nine to future state meets in later years as well. That's because while the Tigers have a nice number of competitors qualified for the meet this season, all of them are underclassmen. This means this year's trip could provide a valuable experience for the future for each competitor.

The swimmers are sophomores Elise Cassidy, Lauren Gruber, Cameron Mathews, Emma Cagle and Grace Siefker; and juniors Bri Costigan and McKenzie Mead. Fenton's divers are even younger than the swimmers. They are freshman Taylor Shegos and sophomore Zoe Weinberg.

"We have had very high hopes for this group since their freshman year," Fenton coach Brad Jones said. "Having them get to the state meet this year certainly makes for a bright future."

Only four competitors will be in individual events. Divers Weinberg and Shegos will be as will Costigan and Cassidy. See NINE on 12

Costigan will compete in the 50 freestyle and the 100 freestyle, while Cassidy is qualified in the 100 backstroke. The Tigers also have two relays headed to the meet. The 200 medley relay squad should include Cassidy, Lauren Gruber, Mead and Costigan. In the final event of the meet, the Tigers will have the 400 relay squad of Costigan, Mathews, Siefker and Cassidy. Cagle will attend as an alternate.

Of Fenton's competitors, the athletes who have the best chance of competing during Saturday's second day are probably Shegos and Weinberg. Both dive with a club team in Ypsilanti when they aren't diving for Fenton, and it has gotten them strong results. For example, Shegos recently qualified for the state meet by taking second at regionals.

Weinberg, who was the Metro League champion in diving, also qualified by taking a solid fourth at regionals.

"Our divers have a very good chance of making it into the finals," Jones said. "Both Zoe and Taylor have been training outside of the season to prepare for this meet. I anticipate them doing very well."

The swimmers will find it a challenge to get to Saturday's consolation finals or finals round, considering the squad had to taper (rest) to qualify for the state meet instead of taper for the actual meet itself. To get to Saturday's portion of the meet, a swimmer must be in the top 16 during Friday's preliminary.

"This will be the first year going to state for most of our girls," Jones said. "Getting a chance to swim against the fastest kids in the state is a great experience for all of them."

Entering spring ball before this season season, Shegos found out quickly he had a good chance of retaining his starting wide receiver position his sophomore year.

"We have individual meetings with the coaches and they wanted me to be the guy who demanded the ball and to have a reliable season. I knew I had to play a main role. I knew I had to play a big role."

Yet, the season didn't start out that way. In the team's opening contest, Shegos only managed three catches for 37 yards and a TD in a 42-35 victory against Fairmont State.

"My first game I didn't play as good as I wanted or as good as I could've," Shegos said. "I had a couple of drops and I wasn't happy.

"After that game I went to my receiver coach (Mickey) Mental and we talked. I told him I didn't know what happened last week and he told me to just relax and you'll be one of the best receivers in the conference. The practice we had on Sunday was one of my best practices I had. I had some pep in my step and it was the best week of practice I've had."

It paid off. The next week the Falcons defeated Urbana 28-13 with Shegos catching nine passes for 135 yards. It marked the first time in school history Notre Dame defeated Urbana.

"I thought after the game I could be a dominant force in this conference and maybe the nation," Shegos said. "The first game was like a hit to the face, but once I got in a groove, I kept going on from there and letting things take care of itself."

An established star

Since that second game, no one is questioning Shegos' star power in Division II football. Shegos had a run of four straight football games in which he scored at least one touchdown. The game which was the last of the TD streak is the contest Shegos considers his best game this year. He had an 11-catch, 155-yard performance which included two TDs in a 35-34 win against Shepherd University. Shepherd's defense

The next game Shegos didn't hit paydirt but he actually tied a Division II record by catching 23 passes in a 41-38 loss to Glenville State. He had 160 yards receiving with those 23 receptions.

"I didn't even know how many catches I had," Shegos said. "It was pretty cool to set a record."

The future

Shegos has one big advantage. He's friends with the team's QB, Ray Russ.

"We created a bond during spring," Shegos said. "We hit it off and became friends, and that makes you more comfortable too."

Shegos has great plans for the future.

"I hope we build on the year we had this year," Shegos said. "I want to set more records, ... but the big thing is I want to make the playoffs."
