When it comes to shopping for eggs, you have many choices to make. The best choice might be right in your own back yard, if your town allows it.

Eggs from birds that are not raised in cages, but in floor systems usually in an open barn. The hens have bedding material such as pine shavings on the floor, and they are allowed perches and nest boxes to lay their eggs. However, they may still be at close quarters with many other hens — just not in cages.

Free-range eggs are laid from hens that have the opportunity to go outside. Smaller farms may keep birds outside under a canopy area. They may travel in and out of a barn at free will or spend some portion of their day roaming outdoors.

Organic eggs are laid from hens that may be kept in any kind of caging system, but generally are cage free. They eat an organic feed and don’t receive vaccines or antibiotics.

Vegetarian eggs are laid from hens that are only fed a vegetarian diet — free from meat or fish by-products. Hens are kept in cages or indoors and do not peck any grubs or worms.

Pasteurized eggs are eggs in their shell that have been put through a pasteurization process where they are heated to 140 degrees Fahrenheit for three and a half minutes. Eggs are not required to be pasteurized.

Eggs. We eat them for breakfast, deviled and even use them in our baking. Nevertheless, what don’t we know about them? We know they come from hens. We know that we buy them at the grocery store or, better yet, from a local farm. However, you might not know why some eggs are different colors or why store bought eggs are a bit different from farm fresh eggs.

First, the eggs you buy from the store come in a few different varieties, including size and type. You may see words like “cage-free” and “organic.” According to the Humane Society of the U.S., cage-free means that the hens laying these eggs are uncaged, but usually they live in barns and don’t spend time outside. “Free-range” hens are described as being similar, but may get some time outside, too.

For all of these terms though, there are no USDA regulations, so you have no way to know if that hen really did spend some time outside. That is, unless you buy your eggs from a local farmer where you know you can trust your product.

Here’s why area roads aren’t always salted

• Sub-zero temperatures can cause wet pavement to refreeze when salt is spread

By Yvonne Stegall
ystegall@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

The Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) wants to remind motorists, now that winter weather has descended upon us that roads can be slick and road salt isn’t always the answer.

According to the MDOT website, “Because of fluctuating temperatures, freezing rain and melting snow, the use of road salt becomes even more critical to create safer driving conditions.

“Temperature plays a major role in the decision to use salt. Salt’s melting point is lower than water. When salt is spread, it dissolves into moisture and lowers the freezing point, working to stop the formation of ice.”

Salt doesn’t always mean the road is ice-free though. Lower temperatures affect the melting of ice with road salt in different ways. When temperatures reach below 20 degrees Fahrenheit, it takes longer for the salt to do its magic and the roads re-freeze faster. At less than 10 degrees, the ice forms even faster and salt takes even longer to work at melting it. In addition, when it is below zero degrees out it can actually cause wet pavement to re-freeze almost immediately.

This is why you don’t often see the road commission out salting the roads when it is below zero. Remember this the next time you are out driving. Drive safe, go slower if you need to and be aware that roads can and will be icy during the winter.

This infographic shows the way salt works at different winter temperatures.
THE NON-CALL

It seems it’s the biggest penalty call that became a non-call in National Football League history. It happened on Sunday with about 8:25 left in the fourth quarter of the Detroit Lions’ playoff game against the Dallas Cowboys. The Lions led 20-17 and were facing a third-and-1 play. Lions’ quarterback Matthew Stafford tried to throw a first-down pass to tight end Brandon Pettigrew. Cowboys’ linebacker Anthony Hitchens defended the play by grabbing Pettigrew, face guarding him and then making contact before the underthrown ball hit Hitchens in the back for an incomplete pass. Initially the call was pass interference, sending Cowboys’ receiver Dez Bryant in a frantic froth. He illegally ran on the field without a helmet on and was never given a 15-yard penalty for the infraction. Then, without any explanation, the flag was disregarded and the Lions faced a fourth-and-1 play. The Lions punted and had a horrible 10-yard punt. From that point on, the Cowboys dominated the contest and captured a 24-20 NFC Wild Card victory.

TOP CONTROVERSIAL PLAYS
IN NFL HISTORY

1998 THANKSGIVING DAY COIN FLIP

The Thanksgiving Day game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and Detroit Lions went into overtime, and players from both teams met at midfield for the coin toss to decide who would receive the ball first. Referee Phil Luckett asked Steelers running back Jerome Bettis to call heads or tails. Bettis claimed that he called “heads.” The coin fall “tails.” Luckett said he heard “heads.” The coin fell “tails.” Bettis was declared the winner of the coin toss.

GOLDEN TATE’S WINNING HAIL MARY PLAY

With eight seconds left, the Seahawks were trailing the Packers, 12-7. Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson heaved a pass into the end zone, where a host of Packers players and Seahawks receiver Golden Tate leapt to make a play. The Packers’ M.D. Jennings appeared to have made an interception, but after players fell to the turf, Tate wrestled for possession. A referee signaled that it was a touchdown. Even after a booth review, the score stood and Seattle claimed a 14-12 win. The result set off a mad Twitter barrage by Packers players.

THE HOLY ROLLER

The Oakland Raiders and San Diego Chargers — AFC West powerhouses in the late 1970s — met for an early season showdown on Sept. 10, 1978, in San Diego. The Raiders trailed 20-14 with the ball at the Chargers’ 14-yard line with just 10 seconds remaining. Raiders quarterback Ken Stabler appeared to be getting sacked on the play, but instead the ball flew forward and was punched ahead by running back Pete Banaszak before tight end Dave Casper clumsily fell on the ball in the end zone for the winning score.

1999 NFC CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

Trailing 11-6 with less than a minute left in the game, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers were driving down the field with sights set on upsetting the St. Louis Rams to advance to the Super Bowl. Bert Emanuel appeared to make a 13-yard reception, but a replay determined that the nose of the ball touched the ground and — despite Emanuel completely controlling the ball during the process of the catch — the pass was ruled incomplete. In the aftermath, debate about the play resulted in a rule change that clarified what was considered a valid reception.

SNOW PLOW GAME OF 1982

A classic nor’easter blasted New England with a heaping helping of snow the divisional round Miami Dolphins on Dec. 12, 1982. The result was one of the more comical of the controversial moments in NFL history. Deadlocked at 0-0 with less than five minutes to play, the Patriots drove into position for a 33-yard field goal attempt. Patriots coach Ron Meyer ordered the snowplow operator to clear away the snow-covered turf so John Smith could kick a clean spot. Smith made the kick, the Patriots won 3-0 and Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula was infuriated.
Michelle Allen checks her coop for eggs on a frosty Thursday morning. She’ll usually get about five dozen from the 50 or so chickens she has.

One such person is Michelle Allen, who raises chickens at her home on Ray Road in Fenton Township. Allen has 52 hens and four roosters, right now. She collects 50 eggs a day, usually.

Allen said, “I check them every morning. Most of them lay one egg a day, but that can sometimes be less.” She said that hens produce the most during their first two years of life, at this time usually laying one egg a day. As they get older, it progressively decreases. Some will lay one egg every other day and some even less.

One interesting fact that Allen shared was that chickens are pre-destined when it comes to how many eggs they will lay in their lifetime. From their moment of birth, they contain embryos within for each egg they will ever lay.

If you are shopping for eggs in the store, the only guarantee for organic eggs is to buy certified organic, but that doesn’t mean that those chickens were treated kindly. Allen loves her chickens and enjoys checking on them on a daily basis. She feeds them snacks and even talks to them, as most of us do our pets.

Allen said the biggest differences between store bought and farm fresh eggs are the washing process and the taste. Commercial eggs are cleaned with harsh chemicals, including bleach, while farm fresh are cleaned less abrassively, or not at all, if they are already clean. Farm fresh eggs have a richer yolk, in color and consistency, and the whites of the eggs are less elastic-like than store bought. Farm fresh are also likely far more fresh than the eggs you buy at the store.

Color is also something you’ll see different, between store eggs, that are usually white, and some farm fresh. Allen said the egg color depends on the breed of chicken. White and brown store bought eggs are so uniform in color because the chickens have been bred to lay the “perfect” eggs.

How to sell your home this winter

► Take advantage of serious buyers and less competition during the cold weather months.

By Sally Rummel
news@ctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Winter may be the season of white snow and cold temperatures, but it can result in lots of “green” for home sellers this time of year.

“Life still goes on during the winter months, with jobs changing, people moving, families growing,” said Tammy Tipton, a Realtor with Coldwell Banker Professionals in Fenton. “Don’t miss out on three or four months of possible selling time when the buyers who are out there are serious buyers.”

Experts also say that homes offered for sale in the winter sell quickly with less competition, and often at higher prices. “I’m in the process right now of selling seven homes this month,” added Tipton.

Here are some tips to help you sell your home in the winter months:

• Shovel snow off the driveway and walkway, and make sure there are no patches of ice. It’s important that prospective buyers can get to your home safely.

• Bring in the light. During the day, open your curtains and turn on your lights. In the evening, turn on all your lights inside and out, to give your home a welcome feel.

• Make sure your front door and garage doors are freshly painted to make your home look clean and neat.

• Put evergreens in pots around the door. A touch of green really helps create a pretty atmosphere on a gloomy day.

• Create a cozy feeling. Apple cider on the stove, fresh-baked cookies, soft music and a fire in the fireplace all contribute to a warm, inviting atmosphere inside from the cold.

• Photos of your home on the Internet are a key sales tool, so wait for a bright sunny day with clean snow to showcase your house.

• Clean gutters and make sure there are no places for ice dams to develop.

You want to show a prospective buyer that you are meticulous about your home’s maintenance.

Don’t wait for spring to put your home on the market. Winter offers the advantages of less inventory and more serious buyers.

Make smart decisions about your home in 2015

► The New Year is a good time to re-evaluate financial decisions regarding your home.

By Sally Rummel
news@ctimes.com; 810-629-8282

New Year’s resolutions aren’t only meant for your own self-improvement. Take a look at your home finances early in 2015 to see where you can make some positive financial changes. If you aren’t yet a homeowner, this New Year is a good place to start saving for a new chapter in your life.

RESOLUTION #1 Make an extra mortgage payment

You can dramatically shorten the life of your mortgage and totally change your financial future with this one easy step. Just making one-twelfth of an extra payment can shorten your term by years, saving you tens of thousands of dollars.

RESOLUTION #2 Pay off a second mortgage

If you have a vacation home or other second mortgage, tighten up your spending to write an extra check each month toward that loan to pay it off quickly. Freedom from that added debt and interest will be well worth the effort.

RESOLUTION #3 Refinance your mortgage

With mortgage rates expected to rise slightly in 2015, perhaps nearing 5 percent, you’ll have to calculate your long-term savings and compare them to the amount you’ll pay in closing costs to see if this is a good strategy for you in 2015.

If you plan to stay in your home for many years, well beyond that break-even point, you could end up saving a substantial amount, according to homebuyinginstitute.com

RESOLUTION #4 Check your property tax assessment

March is the month when many local municipalities offer Boards of Review, where property owners can contest the tax value given to their property through the assessor’s department. It’s important for property owners to review their property tax bill and take action if they believe their assessed value is excessive. Most property tax assessors’ websites have information for homeowners about assessment dates and appeals.
2015 still a strong year for homebuyers, sellers

Stable growth, fewer foreclosures and low-but-rising interest rates signal a healthier market in 2015

By Sally Rummel
news@ctimes.com; 810-629-8282

What does that mean for home sales in the tri-county area this year?

“This year will be the best year yet,” said John Wentworth of ReMAX Platinum in Fenton. “I’ve said that every year in the real estate business and I’ve been right every year. “It just keeps getting better. “Inventory will continue to grow, because there’s always movement in real estate.”

Patrik Welty of Legacy Realty in Fenton is also predicting a good, healthy year in real estate in 2015.

“The best predictor of the future is our immediate past,” said Welty. “We had a very stable fall season. On the supply side, we’ve hit the ground running with inventory. Barring any unforeseen circumstances, everything points to a good year in the market.”

Stability with a slight uptick in home values is the major prediction for Welty. “We might see an increase in home values of 5 to 10 percent, but nothing like the large double-digit increases we’ve experienced before,” he said. “I prefer nice, stable growth that’s supportable and sustainable, rather than huge increases that could lead to another housing bust.”

Welty sees the impact of fuel prices on disposable income as an interesting part of the economic mix. “Fuel prices are hugely related to modest purchases and the purchase of durable goods,” he said. “It’s a significant, positive uptick.”

Interest rates are still low, from an historical viewpoint, but signs point to an increase in rates, as the flip side of an improving economy. The Federal Reserve has indicated it will increase the federal funds rate next year, which has an indirect but significant effect on mortgage rates. Some are predicting the increase will come in mid-2015, and mortgage rates will increase ahead of that move, moving closer to 5 percent.

Other trends predicted this year include:

• More Millennials are buying homes. Young people born between 1981 and 2000 are the largest generation, and their impact as first-time homebuyers is only beginning to be felt. More than two-thirds of household growth in the next five years is expected to be from Millennials.

• Builders are breaking new ground, with the pace picking up in 2015 for single-family home construction.

• Foreclosure crisis closes up. It has been seven years since the housing bubble burst, but experts are predicting that 2015 will see an end to that era. Already there are fewer foreclosures and short sales in the mix of homes for sale in the tri-county area.

Not all streaming music services are created equal, and some cost more than others. However, know that the free ones don’t benefit the artist as much as paid subscriptions do.

STREAMING MUSIC

a $1.2 billion industry –

By Yvonne Stegall

ysteagall@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

It’s likely a strong growth in streaming revenues means a decline in CD sales. With the smaller number of artists reaching platinum within the year their album is released, it just shows that we live in a new era of music.

According to the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA), the first half of 2014 revenues were down for digital downloads 2.5 percent, to $2.2 billion at wholesale value on a year-over-year basis. At the retail level, the decrease in value was 4.9 percent to $3.2 billion. Streaming music services grew 28 percent in the first half of 2014 to $859 million, versus $673 million for first half of 2013. This category includes revenues from subscription services (such as Rhapsody and paid versions of Spotify, among others), streaming radio service revenues that are distributed by SoundExchange (like Pandora, SiriusXM, and other Internet radio), and other non-subscription on-demand streaming services (such as YouTube, Vevo, and ad-supported Spotify).

These streaming services contributed 27 percent of total industry revenues in the first half of 2014, compared with 20 percent for the first half of 2013.

Paid subscriptions grew to $371 million, up 23 percent on a value basis, but grew at an even more rapid pace of 43 percent by number of subscriptions. This difference is partially due to an update in the RIAA’s retail price markup estimate.

Paid subscriptions also mean that your favorite artists are paid for each listen of their track.

According to Spotify, “The important fact to note is that for every new Spotify user, we increase the amount of revenue we receive and, in turn, the amount of royalties we pay out to the industry.”

Spotify pays royalties for all of the listening that occurs on its service by distributing nearly 70 percent of all the revenue back to rights holders, meaning labels, publishers, distributors, and independent artists themselves. SoundExchange pays 45 percent of performance royalties directly to the featured artists on a recording, and 5 percent are paid to a fund for non-featured artists, typically session musicians and background singers. The other 50 percent of the performance royalties are paid to the owner of the sound recording, which can be a record label or an artist who owns their own masters.

Each streaming service has its own set payment rate. However, to ensure you’re giving the artist their due, you need to opt for paid subscriptions. Listening to their music for free is like your employer asking you to come in for an unpaid shift.

Comparison of some streaming music services

Spotify — Spotify is available in many markets across multiple platforms, offers 22 million tracks and there is a free ad-supported version of the service on mobile. The premium service is $9.99 a month.

Pros: Global, cross-platform, extensive library, free version on mobile.

Cons: No Chromecast support on mobile, limited number of tracks and devices for offline access.

Rhapsody — Remember Napster? Well, it still exists in Europe. It is owned by the same company as Rhapsody, which is their U.S.-only subscription streaming service. They have two service choices, uRadio (no on-demand) for $4.99 a month, and Rhapsody Premier for $9.99 a month.

Pros: Cross-platform, extensive library and Chromecast support.

Cons: U.S.-only, no Mac app, no free version, relatively expensive basic tier with no on-demand and limited audio quality.

Google Play Music — Google Play Music lets you upload up to 20,000 songs of your choosing (accessible across all devices), or for $10 a month, access its catalog of 20 million songs, listen to them of-line and create playlists as well as themed radio stations with unlimited skips.

Pros: Upload your own songs; listen to them on any device that supports Google Play and unlimited skips.

Cons: Some claim it has fewer perks than Spotify.

iHeartRadio — iHeartRadio is the only completely free service in the mix, with ad-free streaming of some 15 million songs supporting multiple platforms.

Pros: It’s completely free.

Cons: It works like an actual radio station, so you’ll have to listen to its music picks for whatever genre you’ve chosen to listen to.

INVITATION TO BID

LAWN CARE SERVICES BID

The City of Fenton, Michigan will receive sealed bids at the City Clerk’s Office, 301 South LeRoy Street, Fenton, Michigan 48430-3196 for lawn care services within the City of Fenton until Thursday February 5, 2015 at 11:00 AM.

Bids will be publicly opened and read at that time in the conference room of the Fenton City Offices, 301 South LeRoy Street, Fenton, Michigan. Bids should be submitted in sealed envelopes plainly marked “LAWN CARE SERVICES - CITY OF FENTON”.

Bids are being solicited only from responsible and established bidders known to be experienced and regularly engaged in lawn care work. Satisfactory evidence that the bidder has the necessary capital, equipment and personnel to do the work may be required.

Proposal forms and specifications are on file for the inspection of bidders at the Fenton City Offices, 301 South LeRoy Street and copies may be obtained by qualified bidders. Bidders can also go to www.cityoffenton.org to receive a copy of the bid.

The City Council reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to accept any bid, or portion thereof, which, in their opinion, is most advantageous to the City.

Single woman wonders why she picks duds

DEAR AMY:
I’m a single, childless woman in my early 30s who seems to always attract the wrong men, and I keep wondering how to break this pattern. I have an advanced degree, a good job and am financially secure. I keep meeting men who appear to have it all together. Before I knew it — it is revealed that they do not. Oftentimes they live with relatives (the last guy lived with his mother), they are hanging up on an ex-wife or girlfriend, they are often financially irresponsible, and/or have serious emotional issues. As an optimist I tend to believe it will work out in the end. It never does. Any words of advice for moving on and finding a suitable boyfriend? — Looking

DEAR LOOKING:
I can’t alter the percentage of single guys your age who have done time, live with their moms, don’t actually have jobs or are hung up on their exes. These guys will always be out there, ready and waiting for you to pick up the check. The biggest challenge for natural optimists is the perpetual surprise when things don’t work out. The trick is to run your own life so well that when your dating life isn’t great, you still have the rest of your life — your work, friends, creative interests, personal connections and passions. You still win, because you get to be with you — and you are enough.

Pancreatitis means giving up alcohol

DR. ROACH:
Don’t forget that although there are many medical causes of restless leg syndrome, varicose veins also can be a source of symptoms, and we have cured many people of symptoms with minimally invasive varicose vein treatments. We always recommend that if you have visible varicocities or strong family history of varicose veins, you should get an ultrasound to determine if you have venous insufficiency. The treatments have essentially no down time and can mean one less medication for many people. In addition, just because you can’t see your visible varicocities does not mean you do not have venous insufficiency. We have patients with beautiful legs whose ultrasound reveals large veins under the surface. — Melissa A. Sandman, M.D.

ANSWER:
Thank you for writing. Many people also have written about other causes and treatments for restless leg syndrome, so I wanted to talk a bit more about this important subject. In addition to the iron deficiency I mentioned and the varicose veins Dr. Sandman writes about, there are several other important causes, including kidney disease, usually when dialysis has started. Diabetics have a higher risk for RLS, which sometimes can be mistaken for diabetic neuropathy. Multiple sclerosis and Parkinson’s disease both are associated with RLS, and Parkinson’s is important because when medicines such as levodopa/carbidopa (Sinemet) wear off, it can mimic RLS symptoms. When dopa drugs are used long-term for RLS, symptoms can get worse, a condition called augmentation. Pregnant women are more likely to have RLS. Many drugs, especially antidepressants, can cause RLS. I had a reader tell me that hers was due to Benadryl she was taking for sleep. Magnesium deficiency is common in RLS, and several readers told me magnesium supplements stopped their symptoms.

45 MINUTE SKILLET LASAGNA

Recipe from alidaskitchen.com

INGREDIENTS:
• 28 oz. can diced tomatoes
• 1 T. olive oil
• 4 oz. water
• 1/4 t. red pepper flakes
• 4 garlic cloves, minced
• 1 lb. bulk, mild Italian sausage
• 10 lasagna noodles, broken into 2 inch pieces
• 1/2 cup grated mozzarella cheese
• 3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
• 8 oz can tomato sauce
• 1 T. dried oregano
• 1 T. salt
• 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
• 1/2 cup grated mozzarella cheese
• 15 oz. container ricotta cheese
• 3 T. fresh chopped basil

DIRECTIONS
1. Heat oil on medium in a 12 inch skillet. Add onion and salt and cook until the onion just starts to brown, (6 minutes)
2. Stir in garlic, oregano and red pepper flakes. Cook 30 seconds.
3. Add ground, bulk sausage and cook until no longer pink, (4-5 minutes).
4. Add pasta pieces on top of the meat.
5. Cover pasta with tomatoes and tomato sauce and 4 oz water, reduce heat to simmer and cover the skillet.
6. Stir occasionally until the pasta is cooked through, (20 minutes)
7. Remove from heat and stir in Parmesan cheese then sprinkle with mozzarella and place heaping tablespoons of ricotta on the sauce. Cover for 5 minutes. Sprinkle with the chopped basil then serve.
