Concert season heating up

► Summer music festivals with big-name performers just around the corner

By Emily Stocker

estocker@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

We are so fortunate here in Michigan to have amazing venues for live music experiences all year round, but there's something about seeing your favorite musician play outdoors in the warm sun that tops even the best indoor venue.

"It wouldn't be summer in Michigan without an outdoor Kid Rock show," said Jennifer Dumeah of Fenton Township.

Summer concert season is right around the corner and now is the time to buy those in-demand concert tickets before they're sold out. As a tradition, DTE Music Theatre (affectionately known by the slightly more older crowd as Pine Knob) kicks off the season on May 22 with Eddie Money.

Big names like Toby Keith on June 27 and American Idol's Kelly Clarkson on July 26 hold ticket prices from $21 on the lawn, to $91.50 for pavilion seating. Kid Rock's eight scheduled dates at DTE had some ticket prices set at $20 for all seats, which sold out in no time. Third-party tickets sites now have some seats listed for upwards of $400.

On May 29, the Palace of Auburn Hills welcomes the '90s boy band New Kids on the Block, along with Nelly and TLC. The Van's Warped Tour is scheduled for July 24, followed by Shania Twain and Motley Crue with Alice Cooper in early August, ending with 5 Seconds of Summer on Aug. 19.

Fenton Computers returns to downtown

►Local business puts customer first, shares knowledge of computers

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

It's the same business, but with a new location. Fenton Computers is now located at 119 North River St. in downtown Fenton, next to Headlines Barber Shop.

The business name reflects the simple language that owner Mike Oliver wants to share with customers when helping them with their technology questions.

“Most people aren't ‘computer people’ and we understand that,” said Oliver, who has been in business 11 years. That's why he and technician Irina Gorlik invite people to stop in and ask questions. “Technology is always changing. When we first started, we worked on mostly desktop computers. Now it's laptops, tablets and phones.”

But Oliver hasn't changed anything about the way he does business, putting the customer first and charging fairly for his services.

Educating customers about avoiding computer viruses is part of his daily work.

“I can't think of a better way to help people than to help them maximize the use of their computer,” he said. He also warns people against scams. “Never give anyone remote control of your computer unless you have a legitimate service contract. Know who you are calling for the right technical support. Look at a company's website before you click on a link.”

Tinkering with his own computer since he was 9 years old, Oliver is proficient in both PC and Apple computer repair, although an Apple repair may require hard-to-get parts. “I use an Apple MacBook Air for business,” he said. “Bring in any make of computer and let's take a look at it. We also make house calls for repair work, mostly for businesses.”

In addition to computer work, Fenton Computers installs and maintains surveillance systems and remote monitoring.

LONGEST SERVING ACTIVE BIG

EIGHT-TIME
National Coach of the Year

- One NCAA Championship
- Seven Big Ten & four Big Ten Tournament Championships
- Six Final Four appearances
- 17 straight NCAA tournaments
- 13 NBA draft picks, including six first-rounders
- Seven All-Americans, two Academic All-Americans
- One of five coaches all-time with seven Big Ten titles

5 fast facts about Izzo

► MSU's all-time winningest coach

Sources: msuspartans.com, heavy.com

Ranks fifth in pay among tournament coaches

Michigan State's Tom Izzo ranks fifth in total pay this season — $4,006,955 — among coaches in this year's NCAA men's basketball tournament, according to a USA TODAY sports analysis.

Grew up with former NFL coach Steve Mariucci

While growing up in Iron Mountain, Izzo met his best friend Steve Mariucci. They both attended Iron Mountain High and were teammates on the football, basketball and track teams. Following graduation, Izzo and Mariucci not only took their talents to the collegiate level at Northern Michigan University, but were also roommates. Izzo was a guard for the Wildcats all four years and as a senior he set the school record for most minutes played and was named a Division II All-American. After finishing college, both Izzo and Mariucci began their coaching careers.

Izzo's first date with his wife was a Michigan State basketball game

Apparently, Izzo wanted to get his future wife, Lupe Martinez, acclimated to the lifestyle of a coach's wife early. Like first date early. Lupe and Izzo's first date was when he invited her to the Big Ten Championship game between Michigan State and Purdue, according to PlayerWives.com. And the kicker — Izzo was working as the assistant coach.

Izzo has turned down multiple NBA coaching offers during his career

Following the 2000 season, where he led the Spartans to a national championship and 83 percent of his players who completed their eligibility left MSU with a degree, various NBA teams started knocking with offers. Izzo was pursued to be a head coach for teams such as the Atlanta Hawks, Chicago Bulls, Cleveland Cavaliers and New Jersey Nets.

"A Spartan for life."

In 2010, the Cavs came to Izzo with the opportunity to take over the program and possibly coach LeBron James. While Izzo thought about the offer for over a week, he finally approached MSU's Board of Trustees to let them know he's "a Spartan for life."

Not a hall of fame coach

Despite all of Izzo's success, both at the conference and NCAA Tournament level, he has yet to be named to the Basketball or Naismith Hall of Fame. In addition to his previously mentioned accolades, Izzo is MSU's all-time winningest coach and he's one of five coaches in history with seven Big Ten titles. And while he hasn't been inducted into the hall of fame — yet — Izzo is an eight-time National Coach of the Year, three-time Big Ten Coach of the Year and was a Henry Iba Award recipient and the Associated Press National Coach of the Year in 1998.

Music festival popularity on the rise

Music festivals bring music lovers out for not only one show, but a weekend of concerts, camping and fun activities. Fashion has emerged with a genre of festival clothing over the past few years due to the popularity of the events with young people.

Hart Plaza will host the first festival of the season this Memorial Day weekend. The Electronic Music Festival boasts more than 100 artists, interactive art displays and dozens of after-parties. Last year's attendance broke the 100,000-attendee mark.

The Downtown Hoedown is June 5-6 this year with main stage acts like Darius Rucker and Rascal Flatts. The new location of the event, West Riverfront Park in Detroit, has ticket prices from $35-50 each.

Electric Forest Music Festival's integration of music with art draws more than 60 music acts this year. The Rothbury festival is June 25-28 this year and attendees may camp within Sherwood Forest. The festival drew 32,000 people last year and has grown every year since its inception in 2011.

July 17-19 is Brooklyn Michigan's Faster Horses Country Music Festival. Tickets range from $185 to $785, which includes a three-day pass, VIP service and an open bar. Big names like Carrie Underwood and Brad Paisley guarantee a sell-out crowd.

The season ends with Arts, Beats and Eats in Royal Oak with more than 200 musical performances on 10 stages over the three-day festival.

The Palace also hosts eight dates in August for Marvel Universe Live, a live action arena tour of your favorite action hero. Eight Disney on Ice: Treasure Trove shows in October are followed by nine shows by Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey Circus this fall.

Ford Field has some huge country names this summer — Taylor Swift on May 30, Kenny Chesney on Aug. 22 and Luke Bryan Oct. 30. For all the teenage fans, One Direction will be there Aug. 29 and, just so every genre of music lover is covered, AC/DC will perform at Ford Field on Sept. 8.

Freedom Hill will have rockers of every era in attendance with performers like Judas Priest on July 15, Boston on July 16, the Beach Boys and Temptations on Aug. 9, Primus on Aug. 2 and Huey Lewis and the News on Aug. 21. Tickets range from $10 to $95 for premium shows.

Comerica Park has surprisingly few concerts this summer. The Rolling Stones on July 8 and the Zac Brown Band on Sept. 12. The events are sold out, but if you want to attend, you'll have to pay hefty prices as third-party ticket sites have tickets starting at $200.

Kids 'learn by doing'

►Art Fair and Family Math and Science Night at Argentine Elementary draws kids and families

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Butterflies, bird feeders, reptiles and more transformed Argentine Elementary Early Childhood Center into a natural learning habitat last Friday, March 27 for the school's annual Art Fair and Family Math and Science Night.

"Budding scientists" learned about the world around them through habitats and minnows, butterflies, worms and bird feeders, plus activities with wind-socks and tornado bottles. Students were also able to match foods with the colors of the rainbow.

Kids, parents and extended family roamed the halls and classrooms, exploring math through number concepts, measurements, shapes and matching.

For Mar Nature Center brought reptiles to observe and seeds for planting. Displays of the children's artwork, from painting to sculptures, filled the hallways and media center.

Teachers and staff ended the evening with a song dedicated to the children and their families. "It was a fun night for both parents and students," said Superintendent Ed Koledo, who attended the event with both of his sons. "The black-lit Shark Room was definitely our favorite. Running a close second was the minnow tank. Argentine is such a special place for our kids. They absolutely love it here, and events like this prove to me why."

This custom built home by Weir Building Company features many of the upscale amenities that characterize builder Chris Weir's homes in his $350,000 to $1 million price range.

Thinking about building a home?

►Ask yourselves some important questions first

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Your family has lived in an older home for many years and you've begun to outgrow the space. You dream of building your own new home together, creating an oasis for your family that fits all your needs and wants.

Before you go out and buy expensive home plans or visit an architect, talk to a builder first, advises Chris Weir of Weir Building Company in Fenton Township.

"A builder has a very good idea of what a client will need for size, style and finishes and can confirm that their wants and needs for their home will match their budget," said Weir, 43, an area builder for more than 15 years. "It's better to know this up front than to try to find a builder who will build the dream house you have on paper that you might not be able to afford."

Here are a few questions to ask yourself before building a home:

• Can we afford it? While the numbers may add up on paper, there are many extra costs in home construction that you might not initially account for. Be sure you have some wiggle room in the budget for those unexpected expenses. Pad your budget by at least 10 percent of the total cost to allow for these unexpected expenses.

• Do we have the time and patience? Having a home built rather than purchasing an existing house requires a much lengthier amount of time. The average length of time for a Weir custom-built home is between six months and a year. The typical price range is between $350,000 and $1 million. If you're in a bigger rush than that, buying a move-in ready home may be the best option.

• Do we have a location? Look around at land for sale in your area and see what you can expect to pay. If you already have a lot on which to build, that will determine some of the characteristics of the house, so it's best to know this early in the planning process. "You need to know how much you should be investing in the land," said Weir. "If you've got a $400,000 budget for your home, you can't afford to spend $150,000 of it on a lot."

You also need to consider some of the costs of the lot, such as permits, power and sewer hookups, any excavation and landscaping that must be completed as part of the building process.

• What are our wants and needs? As a couple, you can make this list together, deciding what home features are "must haves" and which ones are negotiable. The first thing to do is communicate these to a prospective builder, so you can budget accordingly.

• Is our lifestyle stable? Building a home will involve an emotional attachment to the project, so it's a better fit for people who want to put down roots. If a job or education will take you elsewhere, you might not have much time to live in a home that required a lot of blood, sweat and tears.

• Do we have a builder? "Choosing a builder is like a marriage," said

Weir. "There is so much time and money invested."

Find a builder's most recent projects and see if his style matches yours. If possible, tour the finished homes of a specific builder and choose one with tastes and philosophies similar to your own.

"Call the municipality and find out if a builder you're considering has had any complaints," suggested Weir. "Find out how long they've been in business under their current name."

• How do we keep a good relationship with our builder? Once you've selected a builder, communicate expectations with each other on the front end of planning.

"From a client perspective, most people who run into trouble with a builder saw signs of trouble in the beginning," said Weir. "If a cluster of reputable builders comes in with one price range, don't go with a builder who has priced the project 25 percent less. That's a red flag for trouble."

• Have we weighed the pros and cons? Take your time to make a decision to build a home, and consider all the options. If the benefits outweigh the issues of time, patience and budget, you're ready to build your own home.

“Choosing a builder is like a marriage. There’s so much time and money invested.”

Be ready for the 'what ifs?' in life

►Get the right homeowner's insurance to cover not only your home, but also your liability

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

One homeowner with a metal roof found that the snow had fallen down the slippery slope of the roof and crushed his backyard deck. Another unlucky client experienced a small fire at their home; the wind caught it and carried flames over to the neighbor's home.

"Unlucky" situations like these are far from unusual. "They happen all the time," said Barbara Walker of Hartland Insurance Agency in Hartland Township.

"While shopping around for the best homeowner's insurance policy, the most important aspect of your search should be coverage more than price," she said. "Too many times, people could've spent just $30 for an endorsement on their policy that would've taken care of a situation at home, either the physical structure or liability. To save such a small amount of money on a premium isn't worth the risk of not having coverage when you need it."

Endorsements that homeowners should consider adding to their policy are those that cover the backup of a sewer or drain, sump pump failure, roof damage, etc. "Things happen in the home that you don't have control of when you're gone," said Walker.

Many homeowners also assume that their coverage limits automatically adjust to their home's rising or falling market price, according to consumerreports.org. What you need to consider is replacement value, or the cost of labor and materials required to rebuild. That's often significantly higher than your home's market price, and it rises annually.

Consequently, 61 percent of homes in the U.S., about 80 million, are underinsured by an average of 18 percent, according to one company that tracks rebuilding costs for insurers.

Homeowners need to ask their insurer for a customized estimate of their home's replacement cost, taking into account its unique features, construction details, age and any costs of meeting new local building code requirements.

Even if your coverage is correct, a standard homeowner's policy will likely leave you without sufficient protection from life's "what ifs?" To protect against the surge in material and labor prices that often follow a natural disaster, you'll have to buy an extended coverage rider. You'll also pay extra for an ordinance or law endorsement rider to pay any extra cost of rebuilding your house in compliance with local building codes, according to consumerreports.org.

You can also pay extra for coverage

“Things happen in the home that you don't have control over when you're gone.”

Barbara Walker

METRO CREATIVE GRAPHICS

Shop around for the best homeowner's insurance policy to fit your needs, but consider coverage more than price.

for a sewage backup, or for hurricane/wind/hail/flood or earthquake insurance if you're exposed to those risks. Coverage for furniture, clothing, and electronics is standard, but you'll need extra coverage for expensive jewelry, furs, silver or artwork.

Liability protection may be even more important than protecting the assets of your home, according to Walker. You have more liability issues with children, pets, "toys" like trampolines, swimming pools, hot tubs, etc.

Cyber scams, identity theft and Facebook bullying (if it involves your child and someone sues you) are new liability issues that come under your homeowner's coverage. "You want to make sure that things that are really important to you are taken care of, so you can sleep at night," said Walker.

Tips on homeowner's insurance

1. You're a statistic. To an insurer, you're not a person; you're a set of risks. An insurer bases its premium (or its decision to insure you at all) on your "risk factors," including your occupation, who you are, what you own, and how you live.

2. Know your home's value. Before you choose a policy, it is essential to establish your home's replacement cost. A local builder can provide the best estimate.

3. Insurers differ. As with anything else you buy, what seems to be the same product can be priced differently by different companies. You can save money by comparison shopping.

4. Don't just look at price. A low price is no bargain if an insurer takes forever to service your claim. Research the insurer's record for claims service, as well as its financial stability.

5. Go beyond the basics. A basic homeowner's policy may not promise to entirely replace your home.

6. Demand discounts. Insurers provide discounts to reward behavior that reduces risk. Americans waste money every year because they forget to ask for them.

7. At claims time, your insurer isn't necessarily your friend. Your idea of fair compensation may not match that of your insurer. Your insurer's job is to restore you financially. Your job is to prove your losses so you get what you need.

8. Prepare before you have to file a claim. Keep your policy updated, and reread it before you file a claim so there are no surprises.

Mooreville PLAN 60-005

Arched garage door openings, brick veneer, and multipaned windows lend a European look to the Mooreville, a contemporary duplex with a traditional flavor. Each two-bedroom unit offers nearly 1,100 square feet of living space in a mirror-image floor plan.

Entering, you step into a vaulted living room that's completely open to a flat-ceilinged dining room at the rear. The rectangular window bay that brightens and expands the space toward the street could be outfitted with a window seat, left as is, or filled with potted plants. For families that enjoy decorating a Christmas tree, this spot can't be beat!

Woman plans dream wedding, chooses wrong guy

DEAR AMY: I am a 30-year-old woman who has been planning her dream wedding for as long as I can remember. I have also always wanted to be a mom. My boyfriend of seven years does not want to ever get married or have children. He is 32 and happy with the way things are. We own a home together and are financially secure. All of my friends are getting married and I am not getting any younger. Should I stay with my boyfriend, hoping he will change his mind, or should I pack my bags and leave? — Desperate to Be a Bride

ASK Amy
BY AMY DICKINSON

DEAR DESPERATE: First, I think you should ask yourself why you have cast your lot with someone who doesn't want any of the same things you want. Having a house in common isn't much to go on, in terms of sharing your basic values. People don't usually change their views over something so fundamental as marriage and children, so you're staying with him just seems delusional. Cash out your share of this property, pack your bags and go. As you say, you're not getting any younger.

Hand sanitizers vs. hand washing

DEAR DR. ROACH: One encounters many forms of "hand sanitizer" products these days: in medical waiting rooms, restrooms, public places and in our kitchen. These are waterless, very quick drying products; we even have them in our automobile. When one has many daily occasions to clean the hands, is it better (for your skin) to use soap and water, or the modern hand-sanitizer products? — N.M.G.

To your GOOD HEALTH
BY KEITH ROACH, M.D.

KEITH ROACH, M.D.

ANSWER: The jury is out on which is more effective, if you compare good technique with one against the other. Both are effective at reducing bacteria on the hands. However, alcohol-based sanitizers are easy to use, portable, fast and are less irritable to the hands than repeated washings. There is better compliance with them, and so they are more effective in the real world. Sanitizers are not effective against all germs. They do not kill the spores of Clostridium difficile, a cause of severe diarrhea. However, soap and water wash the spores off and are effective where sanitizers are not, so soap and water should be used in cases of known or suspected C. diff diarrhea. Sanitizers also are not effective against norovirus, another infectious diarrhea. They also can't remove grease.

PAW'S CORNER

Agility training for beginners

Q DEAR PAW'S CORNER: My dog "Moe" is a very active Australian Shepherd. I love going out and throwing the Frisbee for him to catch. I'd like to teach him to do more, but a friend told me Australian Shepherds are just too hyper to train. Is he right? — Larry C., Omaha, Nebraska

A DEAR LARRY: Australian Shepherds are very active and can get hyper when they don't get enough exercise. But they're also extremely smart and very trainable. You have to stay on top of their training though, because an Aussie will look for a loophole at every chance. Moe sounds like a great candidate for agility training. You've probably seen it on television: dogs speeding through chutes, weaving around poles and leaping over small obstacles. Learning to handle each obstacle provides both physical and mental stimulation, something that active dogs like shepherds need. Professional trainers who offer agility classes abound in every major city. Shop around and ask your vet or friends about trainers they'd recommend. Meet with trainers in person to make sure you and Moe are comfortable with them. While you're looking, you can start Moe on the path. Pick up a book on agility training at a bookstore, the library or online. Purchase or build a couple of basic agility obstacles, like a jump bar, a tire or a low table (for pause training), and begin teaching Moe to respond to commands off-leash (in a secure area, of course).
