STAND-UP PROVIDES FUN AND FITNESS ON AREA LAKES AND RIVERS

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282 Stand-up paddle boarding (SUP) may be a relatively new concept as a sport, but many cultures throughout history have stood up within their canoes and upon rafts for thousands of years. The more modern recreational activity known as SUP actually combines the skills of surfboard riding and canoe paddling, by people who grew up with those skills in Hawaii in the 1960s.

It's a much newer sport in the tri-county area, having become popular on area lakes and rivers in the past three to five years.

"It's a lifestyle," said Whitney Burnash, 28, an ACE-certified SUP and fitness instructor through Silver Spray Sports in Fenton. "You're outdoors exploring nature. It's relaxing and calming."

The versatility of the sport is one of the reasons for its growing popularity. "You can ride on a calm lake or river or be more adventurous on waves or rapids," said Burnash. "Some people even use it for fishing or lounging on, like a raft."

Fitness is another reason so many

Mary Radtke of Rose Township leads this pack of women in a race around Belle Isle in 2013. She has been the fastest woman in the Midwest Race Series four years in a row. "It's pretty exciting for me," she said.

people are enjoying the sport. "Instead of sitting in a kayak or canoe, which is all upper-body, you're getting a full-body workout," said Mary Rising of Action Water Sports in Tyrone Township. "It's a nice core exercise and it works on your balance."

Burnash emphasizes fitness in her lessons, adding yoga and Pilates moves to her regular instruction for getting on the board and maneuvering turns.

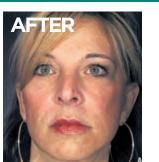

You can also race.

Just ask Mary Radtke, 47, of Holly Township, who is one of the elite racers in the Midwest, racing for Michigan board maker Blk Box Surf. She's also a SUP instructor with her own company, SUP Edu. "It's an incredible sport," she said. "It's also an incredible lowimpact workout. I've beat young men who are very fit and half my age. It's a strength-to-weight ratio kind of deal." VILLARREALS CELEBRATE 60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Ramiro and Margaret Villarreal of Holly celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary June 25. Villarreal and the former Margaret Leib of Holly, were married in Holly on June 25, 1955. They have six children; Roy Villarreal of Holly, Ramiro (Pam) Villarreal of Swartz Creek, Consuelo (Scott) Craig of Davisburg, Kathy (Mark) Charboneau of Holly, Rosita (Matt) VanCamp of Holly and Rita (Jeff) Coryell of Holly. They have 16 grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

CELEBRATE 90TH BIRTHDAY

Ray Dillard will celebrate his 90th birthday this Sunday with family and friends. He was born July 3, 1925 (almost a firecracker!) in Parma, Missouri, the 10th of 11 children. The Depression caused the family to move so many times that Dillard attended High School in 1943. Ray married Elizabeth Stirling July 15, 1944 and they celebrated 621/2 years together before her passing in December 2006. They had two daughters; Sherrie (Bob) Krug and Kathy (Greg) Weisgerber, six grandchildren (two deceased), five great grandchildren and one great-great grandson. He worked at Chevrolet Manufacturing, retiring 37 years later from General Motors Corporation in Detroit. He has been retired 35 years. He is active in the Masonic Order and many Numismatic Organizations. He has designed an elongated coin for his party reading - 90 going on 100!

Whether it's an easy skill to acquire or takes quite a bit of practice and strength may depend on who you ask.

John Davidson of Fenton, who tried it just recently for the first time on Silver Lake, said the workout was much more intense than he thought. "It's fun, you get outside out in the water," he said. It's good exercise and not that expensive."

His advice?"Take a lesson."

Burnash, who will be demonstrating the sport at this Sunday's Riverfest at Bush Park in Fenton, said, "If you can stand on land, then you can learn to stand-up paddle board, as long as you have the right board and the right equipment. I've never had a person not finish the class or not be able to do it."

Interested stand-up paddle boarders should expect to pay about $1,000 for a quality lightweight model, plus about $100 for a paddle. They are also available for rent at Silver Spray Sports.

"The weight of the board is one of the most important aspects of buying a board," said Burnash. "It should weigh under 30 pounds, otherwise it's hard to transport." She also advises that anyone 12 or older should be on a 12-foot board. "Don't get sucked into a 10-foot board," she said. "The shorter it is, the slower you go."

Rising advises buyers to get a better brand at a pro shop. "It will weigh 15 pounds less than the one you get at a big box store," she said. "They can be cumbersome to carry."

TIPS ON BUYING A PADDLE BOARI

TRY BEFORE YOU BUY

Stand up paddling doesn't require much gear, but it can be a fairly expensive initial investment. If possible, rent a few different kinds of boards, or go to a demo event before you buy, so you know exactly what kind of board you want.

IS IT HARD TO LEARN?

With the right board and flat water, stand up paddling isn't hard. Experience in a canoe or kayak will help. CATEGORIES OF BOARDS

Boards come in a variety of lengths, widths, thicknesses, and construction, and while there are some niche board categories, all SUPs are designed for either flat water or surf, or sometimes a little of both. You'll need some idea of the type of water you want to paddle. Surf: shorter boards that turn well and are naturally at home in the waves

Family recreation: durable boards with width for stability

Cruise: long boards, often with room for cargo; at home on flat water

Fitness and race: long, narrow boards built for speed in any water conditions

Yoga: wide, stable boards; often made with full deck pads for better grip in various postures WHO IS GOING TO USE THE BOARD?

Are you the only person who's going to use the board, or will your family and friends want to hop on too? Do you have experience and great balance that lets you paddle a more advanced board? Will you have to load/ unload/carry a board by yourself? When shopping for a board, be sure to take all of these things into consideration to make sure you find the best board possible for your needs.

HEIGHT & WEIGHT

Height is important in paddling dynamics. For ex-ample: if you're short, a too-wide board will force you to reach farther to the side to get your paddle into the water, which will be awkward and tiring. Each stand up board is also designed for a specific range of paddler weights. If you're new to paddling, you'll want to be on the lighter end of the recommended weight range WIDTH

Perhaps the most important dimension of a board is its width. A wide board is more stable, while a narrow board is faster. Don't underestimate stability—a few extra inches of width can make a board fun to paddle for everyone, while a narrow, less stable board might frighten some folks off the water. LENGTH

Length affects how fast a board can cruise and how easily it turns. Generally, a longer board travels faster and straighter. A shorter board turns faster, which is ideal if you want to catch waves. THICKNESS & VOLUME

The volume of a board is determined by its length, width, thickness, and shape. The higher the volume, the more weight the board can support.

SCHOOLS OF CHOICE 105 - 105c OFFERED IN LINDEN COMMUNITY SCHOOLS FOR STUDENTS IN GRADES 6-12

The Linden Community School District is accepting applications for enrollment for the 2015-16 school year for Grades 6-12 students who do not reside within the district's boundaries pursuant to Sections 105 and Section 105c of the State Aid Act. Fenton grad saves dogs in fire

■GoPro records event. has more than 1.2 million views on YouTube

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792 A YouTube video has reached over 1.2

million views of a Fenton graduate and a few friends kicking in doors and saving animals in an apartment fire in Rapid City, South Dakota June 20.

Grant Krause, 20, a 2013 Fenton High School graduate, is an air traffic controller in the Air Force stationed in South Dakota.

He was driving back to his friend, Spencer Butler's, apartment when they saw smoke coming from the building a little before 7 p.m. "It was a pretty cloudless day so (the smoke) was pretty noticeable," he said. "We didn't realize the roof was on fire until we drove back there," Krause said.

Everyone was out of the apartments that were on fire, but Krause and Butler wanted to make sure no one, or no pets, were left behind in the entire building.

Butler, 25, from Temperance, carried the GoPro video camera around, and Krause is the one seen in the green shirt who shouldered down a door. He said his shoulder ached that day, but felt fine the day after. Viewers can see them running up stairs through smoke, banging on doors and kicking them down. "It was kind of an odd feeling. I wouldn't describe it as scared. It was more of a heightened sense of awareness," Krause said.

While kicking in doors, they came across three dogs. Two were returned to their owners, but the third one raced out of the building to escape the fire. As of Friday morning, the owners were still looking for it.

One person was injured and was taken to the hospital for smoke inhalation.

Airman 1st Class

"I would have felt really bad if we showed and up and watched and then later found out that three dogs were in the building," he said. "I'd like to thank the firefighters.'

The Rapid City Fire Department arrived about 10 minutes after Krause and Butler. Two other fire departments also responded. In the video, viewers can see part of the roof on the apartment building collapse.

"It's kind of scary when you're 50 feet away from where it collapsed," Krause said.

After graduating from Fenton in 2013, Krause worked in contracting for a year and then joined the Air Force because he wanted to pursue a career in air traffic.

Money generated from the video is being donated to the families who were displaced because of the fire. Anyone interested in helping the families can contact the Security First Bank in Rapid City at (605) 718-8060 and mention the Fire Relief Fund.

Local woman talks about what 'triggers' her eating disorders vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823 Michelle, 42, always knew that she had an eating disorder, and she was fine with that. As long as it kept her skinny, she really didn't care. Her eating disorder started when she was 15, when her "first love" broke up with her.

By Vera Hogan

"The day he broke up with me we were at a football game," she said. "When I got home, I walked in and my mom was standing in the entryway. I went right to her bawling and hugged her.

"As I was hugging her, she said to me 'I told you, you didn't look good enough'," Michelle said. "I remember I just stopped crying, was stunned. I still remember exactly what I was wearing. I haven't worn a sweater since that day. I absolutely hate them now.

"My ex immediately started dating a pretty girl who was 'big boned,' so I am not sure why this was my trigger as he obviously liked someone bigger," Michelle said. "Anyway, right after that I stopped eating. I was determined to be 'better' than her and look better. So I had to be as skinny as possible."

Whether it was about her hair, her makeup, her clothing or personality, Michelle said her mother always compared her to every other girl.

"I got to a point where the second I met someone, I would come up with 10 things I didn't like about them so I could defend myself against them," she said. "Not eating made me skinny and gave me power. I felt like I was powerful and better than others because they had to eat and I didn't. I had more control and was way skinnier than they were, so therefore I was better than them."

Michelle said she ended up wearing a size zero and weighed 102 pounds at 5-feet, 7-inches tall.

"I was rarely above 115 (pounds) in high school," she said. "My mother never thought I was good enough, lovable enough, pretty enough. I was never enough for her and I'm still not."

Michelle said throughout high school she was super skinny, and that her dad, her friends and boyfriends would beg her to eat. "My mom, however, encouraged me to continue what I was doing," she said.

"Once I started into my bulimia, I was at a normal weight and then later a little heavier than normal. Then, as of a few years ago, I became very fat," Michelle said.

"Once I was in treatment and would tell people, the first question I would be asked would be 'Oh, what diet did they put you on'," she said. "I would tell them I'm not allowed to be on a diet, ever. They didn't get I ruined my body from having an eating disorder since I was 15. It still upsets me because people don't get that I could die. They just think I should stop eating and diet."

Michelle said she took prescription diet pills for 10 years. "This probably messed up my adrenal system and metabolism," she said.

Then in 2004, Michelle said her father decided to buy some Mountain Dew Code Red. "I saw it in the frig and decided I wanted soda," she said. "Then I wanted it more. So at that point, I decided I needed to start throwing up so that I could drink soda.

Michelle said she never wanted help.

"I knew for years and years I probably needed help, but I didn't want it because this was how I stayed at a decent weight, which I still thought was fat," she said.

After gaining 70 pounds, Michelle sought medical advice, was honest about her eating habits, and was referred to an eating disorder counselor at the hospital. Michelle said she asked the counselor there how it was possible to get fat when she throws up all the time.

"She said your body gets smart and starts absorbing calories the second you start eating, knowing you are going to throw it up," Michelle said. "I never knew that. I still weigh the same even after four years of treatment and eating normally." Michelle said she wasn't able to stop until the heart of one of her stepmother's relatives stopped. The family member had an eating disorder.

HEALTH.COM

"She ended up in a coma and was in a coma for a few months," said Michelle.

Today, Michelle tries not to focus on her weight and being overweight, even though some men have been cruel to her because of it.

Because of her eating disorder, Michelle is now in the position of managing her recently diagnosed diabetes. She also has been told she has Anxious-Preoccupied Attachment Disorder, which is what she believes all of her issues are about.

"The way my mom was to me as a child made me develop that disorder, so I am trying to get past that disorder, too," she said. I'm much different than I was though. I wish I had gotten help years ago." ANOREXIA

Anorexia nervosa — often simply called anorexia — is an eating disorder characterized by an abnormally low body weight, intense fear of gaining weight and a distorted perception of body weight. People with anorexia usually severely restrict the amount of food they eat. They may control calorie intake by vomiting after eating or by misusing laxatives, diet aids, diuretics or enemas.

BULIMIA

Bulimia nervosa, commonly called bulimia, is a serious, potentially lifethreatening eating disorder. People with bulimia may secretly binge eating large amounts of food — and then purge, trying to get rid of the extra calories in an unhealthy way. For example, someone with bulimia may force vomiting or engage in excessive exercise. Sometimes people purge after eating only a small snack or a normal-size meal.

Stepdaughter's tantrums create family challenge

DEAR AMY:

I have a lovely 16-year-old stepdaughter. I've been married to her daddy since she was 4. We have two other children together but she has always been treated fairly and as a full member of our household, despite only seeing her every other weekend. We've tried to be kind and friendly to her mom but our efforts have always been rejected (to put it mildly). Recently, she has developed a lot of anger issues and has loud, tantrum-like outbursts where she curses out her dad and says very hurtful things to him. Then she will refuse to see us. The first time this happened, we forgave her and she and her dad had a long conversation about how to have a discussion or disagreement without the tantrum. A month later she did it again (about being expected to do chores). Rather than talk to us she yelled, cursed and said nasty things to her dad. Dad and I agreed that this time she needed to suffer the consequences. We decided she needed to initiate an apology and ask before we let her return to our house, but I don't think she'll do this. Maybe she needs to graduate and be away from mom's influence before she can see her way back. Her mom has long been trying to sever her relationship with us. Can you shed some insight on what we can do here to help her? We have suggested therapy but she has refused. She can't go through life like this. - Sad Stepmom

DEAR K:

You are in a very tricky spot because while you want your daughter to understand and absorb the natural consequences of her behavior, you don't see her often enough to provide the consistency she needs. I understand your desire to punish her by banishing her from your household, but this is the opposite of what she needs, which is more of you. If she refuses to see you, you will have to respect her choice, but she needs more compassion from you, not less. It is when people are at their most unlovable that they need love the most. You should not demand an apology from her so long after the fact, because you will not likely receive it, and then you will both remain on opposite sides of her anger. React calmly. Say to her, "We're sorry you are in such a tough spot and we would like to talk to you about it when you're calm." If she chooses to stay away, keep in touch with her in a positive vein and attend school and extracurricular events, even if it is awkward for you.

Walking nearly as good as jogging

To your

DEAR DR. ROACH:

If you walk briskly for a certain time and distance, is that not just as good for you as jogging, if you are going for the same time? — A.

ANSWER:

It depends on what you mean by "good." If you mean what I think you do, in terms of overall health and maybe living longer and feeling better, then yes, a brisk walk is nearly as good for you as jogging. Jogging probably is better for preventing osteoporosis, since it gives more impact to the bones, but on the other hand it is harder on the joints. If your goal is to get faster and win races, then you need to practice going faster. But walking is nearly as good for most aspects and is easier on the body than jogging for most people.
