SWEET CORN SALES ARE AT THEIR PEAK RIGHT NOW

By Vera Hogan

vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

The old adage that corn should be knee high by the Fourth of July isn't necessarily true. It may have been a fact a few decades ago, when planting dates were later in the year and today's weed control technology was not in place.

Farmers are planting earlier in the spring than in prior years, and this has been a good year as corn growers and sellers are already harvesting their yield and selling them at farmers markets and roadside stands.

For many years, Eichelberg Farms at 11154 Linden Road (just north of Thompson) in Fenton Township has been a popular spot for the corn-loving public to pick up their corn and other produce.

According to owner Dwight Eichelberg, he started farming in 1978 with half an acre. "I'm not a big grower, my operation is small," he said.

When he started in the corn business, he did so with two types of new sweet corn, extra tender and augmented (extra juicy and tender). "No one else had this type of corn for six or seven years," Eichelberg said.

If the ground is very cold, he covers his corn crop with plastic. He covers the crop with cloth throughout the season to protect it from the elements. "I'm the only one in the United States who does that," he said.

WHEN TO PICK CORN

Corn is ready to be picked as soon as the ears have completely filled out. This goes for sweet corn and roasting ears. You can tell when this happens by feeling the end of an ear. If it's rounded or blunt rather than pointed, the ears are ready. The silks also dry up when the ears are almost ready to be picked.

Source: garden.org

HUSK IF YOU MUST

OK, we have all seen them, the big bins in the grocery stores next to the sweet corn in the produce section. The bin implies that it is acceptable to peel the husks and silk away from the corn. That would be true if the bin is actually used. Quite often, customers peel away the husks and silk completely, and then leave the ear on top of the other corn, shucked husk and silk, if they find it to be unacceptable. That not only creates a big mess, but it's unsanitary and dries up the corn kernels. Husk if you must, but please be considerate of other corn lovers.

BOIL, NUKE OR GRILL YOUR COBS

Boiling is the classic way to prepare sweet corn. You can either use a wide, flat pan and lay the corn on its side, or use a taller stockpot to boil a big batch at once. Either way, fill the pan with enough water to cover the corn and bring it to a boil. According to one Marriott Hotel chef in Chicago many years ago, adding a cup of white milk to the water makes the kernels "poof" up during the boiling process.

Saying bye to the bad buzz

■ Getting rid of bees — one of the season's most annoying insects

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

The walls of your house are supposed to protect you from the outside world, but one outside menace likes to make a home in your wall.

People are going to deal with yellow jackets and wasps during the end of summer and fall, not honeybees, said Howard Russell, an entomologist at Michigan State University. They nest in trees, shrubbery, the ground, in walls, and in attics.

Russell said to "Think of what kind of risk you want to take trying to get rid of them." If there's a hive of yellow jackets in a tree and you need to use a ladder, Russell recommends not doing it yourself.

If yellow jackets have made a hive in the ground, Russell said one natural remedy is letting them die in the winter, as long as they're in a place where no one walks.

"If it's in the middle of the lawn where you mow, eventually they will take offense and they will come after you," he said. He recommends pouring insecticide dust in the hive.

"Ones in the ground can be easily controlled by pouring an insecticidal dust, like Sevin Garden Dust," he said. This insecticide works so well because it's slow-acting.

"As these yellow jackets come and go from the colony, they pick it up and spread it throughout the core of the colony, which leads to the colony death," he said.

If yellow jackets have built a hive inside one of your walls, spraying insecticide dust in the opening will take care of them. Although, Sevin Garden Dust isn't meant to be used inside structures.

Local pest control exterminator Marshal Emmendorfer of Marshal's Pest Control said if there's a nest in a tree, you can get rid of it yourself and "hose it down. Spray it, spray it, spray it."

Most wasps and yellow jackets aren't making hives in trees, however.

"If you've got a hive where you can see the wasps, you can get a can of wasp spray but what most people are getting now are wasps going into the side of the house. Then you should call a professional," he said.

He said that once they make an opening in the wall, they don't like to go out that way. "So they go out the back door which is inside the house," he said.

People often try aerosol spray to rid the house of the insects, but that's only effective for about 60 seconds, he said. It only kills the ones that are sprayed.

He recommends using an exterminating powder that lasts 30 days. Emmendorfer uses Tri-Die Dust, a product only licensed pest exterminators can use.

WASPS

In general, wasps can be distinguished from bees by their lack of body hair and thinner, elongated bodies. Differentiating between paper wasps, hornets, and yellowjackets is a bit trickier. All three are types of Vespidae wasps, and share certain physical and behavioral traits: narrow wings that fold longitudinally when at rest; larvae reared on dead or living insect prey; nests constructed of recycled wood fibers; and the ability to sting repeatedly. Paper wasps live in colonies of less than 100 individuals, while both yellowjacket and hornet colonies can number well over 100 Vespids.

SWEET CORN

When asked how many ears of corn he sells on average during the season, Eichelberg laughed and said, “I have no idea.” But one can assume that it is a lot.

His customers come from as far away as Detroit to pick up his corn.

“We are now in what we call the ‘hum drum days of August,’” he said. “That’s when people start getting tired of eating corn all the time. But I sell it until Oct. 29, because I’m the only one that covers it.”

Eichelberg was asked about the difference between “peaches and cream” and yellow corn. “Peaches and cream is just a yellow and white corn, rather than just yellow,” he said. “If I sold only peaches and cream I wouldn’t have a customer in the yard.”

The peaches and cream variety that came out in the late 1960s has been totally changed, he added.

Eichelberg does not provide corn to any stores or restaurants. He sells it and other produce such as tomatoes, string beans, yellow squash, peppers and zucchini from a lean-to with a gable next to his barn. The time will soon be coming when Eichelberg sells his famous long-handled pumpkins.

In the year 2014, farmers in the United States grew more than 14.2 billion bushels of corn on 83 million acres of land. Michigan corn farmers harvested the largest crop on record in 2014, with a total production of more than 355 million bushels.

Last year, the national average was 171 bushels per acre while the average yield in Michigan was estimated 161 bushels per acre, according to the USDA.

The majority of corn that is exported out of Michigan goes to the Southeast United States and is fed to livestock.

Distillers grains are a co-product of the ethanol industry, which are fed to livestock and displace 18 million bushels of corn.

Shuck the outer husk and silk from the corn. Dissolve a table-spoon of salt in the water and add the corn, and milk if you like. If your corn is very fresh, cook it for three to five minutes. For corn that’s a few days old, let it go for six to eight minutes.

The microwave method is great if you just want to cook a couple of ears of corn and don’t want to mess with the boiling water. Just leave the corn in their husks and microwave them two at a time on high for four to six minutes, depending on the age of your corn. Let them cool enough to handle and then strip off the husks and silk.

Roasting on the grill gives the corn a smoky flavor. Peel back the husks, but leave them attached at the stem. Remove all the silk and then brush the corn with olive oil (butter can sometimes burn). Cover the corn back up with the husks and secure them closed with a piece of string or aluminum foil.

Roast the ears of corn over a medium-hot grill, turning occasionally, until the outer husks are charred and toasted. This usually takes about 15 minutes. Let the corn cool enough to handle, then strip off the husks and eat.

A new popular way to grill corn is to wrap bacon around the ear. Preheat an outdoor grill for high heat. Sprinkle each ear of corn with Cajun seasoning, salt, and pepper, and wrap each ear with two slices of bacon, covering the ear as completely as possible. Wrap the ears in aluminum foil, twisting the ends tightly to seal. Place the wrapped corn on the preheated grill, and grill on high heat until the corn is hot, about 10 minutes per side. Turn the heat to low, and grill the corn until the bacon is cooked and the corn is tender, about 45 minutes.

Joe and Janet Miesle, owners of Hunters Ridge Golf Course, turned the former dairy farm into a successful and scenic rolling golf course.

Twenty years of golf at Hunters Ridge

■Pristine, natural 18-hole course situated on Centennial dairy farm in rural Howell

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

You don’t have to travel far to find world-class golf in Livingston County.

Now in its 20th year of operation, Hunters Ridge Golf Course in Howell has come along way from its original roots as a dairy farm in the Joe and Janet Miesle family, yet the family pride in stewardship over this land is exactly the same.

“It had been a dairy farm for over 100 years before we converted 160 acres into a golf course 20 years ago, hiring golf course architect Jerry Matthews,” said Janet. “We’re always eager to make sure that everyone who plays golf here has the experience they deserve.”

Maintaining the land’s natural beauty while presenting some of the most challenging golf in the area has made Hunters Ridge a golfer’s destination. “People love the natural quietness of this course,” said Janet. It’s a half a world away from the noise and distractions of the suburbs.

Here, golfers are playing to an audience of deer, sandhill cranes, pheasant, rabbits and birds, while enjoying a premium playing experience, noted by Golf Digest magazine with a 4.5-star rating.

With 68 bunkers, six ponds and traditional Scottish heather rough, Hunters Ridge offers something for every level of golfer. “Hole No. 17 is our signature hole with a tiered fairway off the tee box and an elevated green,” said Janet.

In addition to its 18-hole public golf course, Hunters Ridge offers a pro shop, and driving range. To arrange a tee time, call (517) 545-4653. The course is located at 8101 Byron Rd.

SUMMARY

■ Hunters Ridge Golf Course, an 18-hole public course in Howell, is observing its 20th year in 2015.

ONE THIRD OF all abortions in the United States are done by Planned Parenthood, which is subsidized by U.S. taxpayers to kill children and now harvest their organs. You can custom order abortions now and specify whether you want an intact fetus or specific fetal tissue.

THERE’S A BIG old branch hanging down on Finch Drive, that everybody has to drag their cars across and our county will not come and cut it down. It’s pretty sad when we pay all this money for a road commission and the homeowners have to take it upon themselves to take care of the roads.

NO U.S. TAXPAYER money goes toward abortions at Planned Parenthood, according to Senator Elizabeth Warren. That organization promotes women’s health with mammograms, birth control, cancer preventative methods, and sexual health information. Only 3 percent of what Planned Parenthood does involves abortions.

I DON’T THINK we should be so concerned about the next election for president. The standard has been set by the Obama administration for mediocrity. How could we do any worse? Only one word. Clinton.

REGARDING BALTIMORE, ALMOST 200 murders this year, 17,000 abandoned homes, hundreds of burned and empty businesses, and Mayor Mosby who supports criminality, lawlessness and incompetence. She’s part of the problem. But now she’s asking the government for money to help her fight violence. I think the government should just stand down.

MICHIGAN VOTES

WHAT YOUR LEGISLATORS ARE CONSIDERING

MichiganVotes.org is a free, non-partisan website created by the Mackinac Center for Public Policy to provide concise, non-partisan, plain-English descriptions of every bill and vote in the Michigan House and Senate. With one click, you can approve or disapprove of key votes by your legislators using the VoteSpotter smart phone app. This report was released Friday, July 31.

The House and Senate are out for several weeks. Therefore, this report contains several recently introduced bills of interest.

House Bill 4422: Authorize Woodward streetcar property owner subsidies Introduced by Rep. Andy Schor (D), to authorize "business improvement zone district" subsidies financed by a tax increment financing scheme for property owners near a proposed Woodward Avenue streetcar line in Detroit. This would "capture" from local governments the extra local property tax revenue that (supposedly) results from property value increases generated by the scheme's selective subsidies and other spending, and use the money to repay the debt incurred by spending. Referred to committee, no further action at this time.

House Bill 4428: Require biannual recertification for government employee unions Introduced by Rep. Gary Glenn (R), to require government employee unions to be recertified by a majority of the employees in a workplace bargaining unit at least once every two years, as determined by a vote with a secret ballot. Referred to committee, no further action at this time.

House Bill 4429: Exempt schools from "prevailing wage" mandate

Introduced by Rep. Gary Glenn (R), to exempt school construction projects from the state "prevailing wage" law, which prohibits awarding contracts to contractors who submit the lowest bid unless the contractor pays "prevailing wages," which are based on union pay scale reports in a particular geographic region. Referred to committee, no further action at this time.

House Bill 4435: Mandate restaurant allergy notices

Introduced by Rep. Peter Lucido (R), to require restaurants to post a notice that is visible to the public and says, "Before placing your order, please inform your server if a person in your party has a food allergy." Referred to committee, no further action at this time.

House Bill 4466: Require detailed police shooting and use-of-force reports

Introduced by Rep. Stephanie Chang (D), to revise the monthly crime reports local police agencies are required to submit to the state police so that they include the number and type of use of force complaints made against officers; the number of shooting incidents involving officers; the disposition of use of force and shooting incident investigations; the racial, ethnic, and gender demographic data of individuals who made use of force complaints and individuals involved in police shooting incidents. Referred to committee, no further action at this time.

House Bill 4475: Require disclosure of corporate "economic development" subsidy recipients Introduced by Rep. Bill LaVoy (D), to require the Department of Treasury to disclose the names of particular businesses and developers granted subsidies and tax breaks under the Michigan Economic Growth Authority law repealed in 2011, and how much they're getting. The bill was introduced after it was revealed that these deals have generated $9 billion in unfunded taxpayer liabilities, payable over the next 20 years. Under current law, the identity of these corporate subsidy recipients is kept secret. Referred to committee, no further action at this time.

Jamestown PLAN 30-827

The mid-size Jamestown looks invitingly solid, familiar and comfortable. Living spaces are all on one floor in this contemporary ranch-style home, except for the deep bonus room upstairs. Eye-catching gables and an array of nostalgic multi-paned windows face the street, even spanning the tops of both doors to the three-car garage. Tapered columns, seated on stone veneer bases, highlight the covered porch.

When sharing costs, does a couple count as two?

DEAR AMY:

I recently went on a weekend getaway/retreat with several co-workers (not officially a work event). I was driving one of the cars, and I brought along a co-worker and her boyfriend. The trip cost roughly $90 in gas. I would have expected each passenger (myself included) to contribute a third. But my co-worker offered only $45, saying, "There's our half." I try to avoid pettiness, and don't want to cause a rift with a co-worker over $15 — after all, it's more about the principle than the money — but I also want to be more aware of what the rules are when splitting costs with a couple. — Not Cheap, Just Curious

DEAR CURIOUS:

Couples sometimes behave as a monolith — but just because they behave that way doesn't mean they should also be treated as such. If the three of you had taken a train, you would have each had to pay your own fare. If you had taken a cab, you would expect to split the fare three ways (presumably). If you three had shared a meal, you would have each paid your share. The main cost advantage in being a couple is when it comes to sharing a bed — not a ride. If you were renting an apartment and you took one room and the other couple shared a room, then you would split the cost 50/50. The wisest way to handle any sort of expense sharing situation is to establish the parameters up front. You say, "Are you cool with splitting the cost of the trip three ways?" They might negotiate a slightly different percentage and — depending on whether you needed the money and wanted the companionship, you could decide if this would work for you. Don't try to collect this money now, however. This lesson only cost you $15, which is a pretty good deal.

AMY DICKINSON

Arthritis leads to fibromyalgia

DEAR DR. ROACH:

I am a 56-year-old female. I recently have been having terrible pain in my joints. It is so bad at night that I can't sleep. I recently went to a rheumatologist because I had an elevated rheumatoid factor (it wasn't extremely high). I was told I have arthritis and a high risk for rheumatoid arthritis. I was then diagnosed with fibromyalgia. I was shocked and embarrassed! I had always thought that fibro was not a real disease. I feel bad and tired almost every day, and I am so sick of it! — S.S.

ANSWER:

Some of my colleagues still doubt it, but I think that fibromyalgia certainly is a real disease. There is no doubt that there are a large number of people with chronic pain in the muscles and soft tissues who meet the diagnostic tests for fibromyalgia, which are all based on history and exam — there's no blood test or X-ray for fibromyalgia, but that doesn't mean it isn't real. The current thinking is that fibromyalgia is due to alterations in the perception of pain by the central nervous system. The most common symptom is aching in the body, usually in the muscles and joints. Fatigue and poor-quality sleep also are nearly universal in fibromyalgia.

Depression is highly prevalent in people with fibromyalgia, and in my opinion, the depression is more likely caused by the chronic pain and fatigue than the other way around. My opinion is that it is better to have a diagnosis of fibromyalgia because, even though fibromyalgia isn't completely understood, it is a starting point for understanding and treating chronic pain. Tricyclic antidepressants are the most common initial treatment of fibromyalgia, because they affect the way pain is processed. They are usually started at far, far below the effective dose for depression. Feeling a sense of control over the pain, continuing to work and exercising more are all associated with a better outcome in fibromyalgia.
