How to make extra money in your spare time

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Craft time isn't just for fun.

One Fenton woman, Karla Hull, 50, works as an administrative assistant by day and sells repurposed items in her spare time with her business Tin Can Treasures, LLC to make some extra cash.

"I repurpose all sorts of things and try to keep a vintage theme," she said.

Hull paints and distresses old pieces of furniture, turns coffee filters into flowers and wreaths, transforms old Yellowbook pages into paper cone wreaths or they're modpodged into Christmas ornaments, and she turns tea cups into bird feeders.

Hull also turns old burlap sacks into pillows. She recently started doing upholstery, and she makes jewelry, like pendants from vintage silverware and old keys. "I love giving new life to something old and giving it a different purpose," Hull said.

Her favorite items to make are the pendants and wreaths, and she does custom orders.

Tin Can Treasures earns her about $300 a month on average.

Nine ways to make extra cash

1. Make and sell things

Crafts can be used to make money. Popular websites like eBay and Etsy allow people to show, describe and sell their work. Many people sell homemade clothes, accessories, greeting cards, items for your garden, and many other crafty products.

Using these online sites as a way to market and sell your products is also a great way to start a business by building a brand. You can put as much time into your products as you want.

You can also use zazzle.com or cafepress.com.

2. House or dog sit

Some people who travel for Labor Day like to vacation resting assured their home is safe. House sitters will often stay overnight in a house, or simply visit the house a few times a day to make sure everything is in order. With houses that have pets, house sitters become pet sitters, too, and will feed and walk the pet.

3. Freelance

Identify skills you have that other people don't and sell your services. You can be a freelance editor, writer, graphic design artist for online companies and blogs. Some are paid on commission and some are paid hourly. It depends on your employer and how much work you do.

Put your resume on upwork.com or guru.com to find people who need your skills.

4. Donate plasma

You can donate plasma and earn up to $200 a month. The Food and Drug Administration allows people to donate twice in a seven-day period with two days between donations. The amount of money you make depends on how much you donate, which depends on how much you weigh. Heavier people can donate more but it often takes longer, according to octapharmaplasma.com. Contact local clinics to find out about their plasma donation process.

You can participate in a clinical trial and test drugs that haven't gone on the market yet, or simply change your diet for scientific research. The amount of money you make depends on the trial. To search for clinical trials, visit clinicaltrials.gov.

During summer, kids lose a lot of knowledge they gained over the school year. Be a reading or math tutor for kids to earn a little extra money.

5. Become an at-home customer service rep

Many companies outsource their customer service representatives and pay people to answer customer service calls from home. Some companies are non-profits like ACD Direct, who pay based on the amount of minutes you're on the phone.

You can even work for Apple by becoming an at-home advisor and help people with their Apple electronics.

Make sure you have a land-line and a quiet space because some companies, like Needle that specializes in helping people online shop, require no background noise. You can earn $7.50-$16 an hour on average depending on the company, according to ivetriedthat.com.

6. Use your smartphone

Smartphones are expensive, so why not get some money out of using them? There are many free apps you can use to earn some extra cash.

iPoll is an app for Apple and Android products where you take surveys and answer questions about products or services. The app does market research so users can earn money by taking pictures of displays in stores.

Gigwalk is an app for Android and Apple users that gives users money for checking inventory levels for area stores.

ReceiptHog is a market-researching app that pays users for taking and sending pictures of their receipts. The company creates research reports from the data.

The amount of money you make depends on how frequently you use these apps.

7. Take online surveys

Anyone with an opinion and access to the Internet can make money by taking online polls at iPoll.com. The site offers a $5 sign-up bonus and pays based on how many polls you take.

You'll answer questions about products and services you use every day on a smartphone, iPad, or computer.

Opinionoutpost.com is another online site that gives users money in exchange for feedback and opinions. You'd answer questions about electronics, politics, sports and many other topics in exchange for cash or vouchers redeemable for popular brands.

8. Be a tutor

During summer, kids lose a lot of the knowledge they gained over the school year. Be a reading or math tutor for kids to earn a little extra money.

If you know how to play a sport, you can offer private lessons to as many clients you feel comfortable with.

People benefit more from one-on-one interaction, so you'd be offering a special service a normal class couldn't.

9. Become a mystery shopper

Mystery shoppers get paid about $5 -$20 per visit for entering certain stores, buying something, and reviewing the company and customer service. Companies usually provide scenarios the shoppers use, like asking employees at the store about certain products and reporting back about how helpful they were and if they engaged in conversation, according to forbes.com.

It can be a time commitment because usually the reports have to be filed within 24 hours of the visit.

Visit secretshopper.com for more information.

She started her business three years ago and had a booth at the Fenton Farmers Market two years ago, where she sold items out of a vintage camper.

"I've always had a desire to create and in doing so, it brings me joy. Having the extra cash helps a lot," she said. These items aren't only sold online at Facebook, Etsy, and eBay, Hull's friend in Ludington carries her jewelry at her store, The Curly Haired Girl and some of her furniture pieces are sold at The Pink Peony in Milford.

She also sells items through "word of mouth and great friends," Hull said. Some weeks are busier than others for Tin Can Treasures, and she wants to dedicate more time to it.

"I try to work on things a couple nights a week after work," she said. "Weekends are better for spending bigger chunks of time on things, like painting." Even her boyfriend, Troy, shares the same passion and they make a great team.

"He is great at 'the hunt' for furniture items and building all sorts of things like benches, birdhouses, wrought iron gates, and many other items. I love to put on the finishing touches," she said.

Hall wants to learn how to watercolor, but hasn't made the time yet.

"I would love to get into making altered journal pages," she said, adding that it would be a great way to repurpose old books.

"I would like to continue my little business and grow it into something more prosperous," she said.

CELEBRITIES BY TRAGEDY

► Coping with personal tragedy is one of the most difficult obstacles we face in life. These stars are examples of how it is possible to process, heal and move on from the sadness that affects our lives. Source: viralnova.com, ranker.com

JENNIFER HUDSON |

In 2008, Hudson lost her mother, brother and young nephew when her eldest sister's estranged husband shot them down in a fit of rage. She set up a charity foundation in her nephew's name, the Julian D. King Gift Foundation. The charity provides support and positive experiences for children of varying backgrounds in order to enable them to grow into productive, confident and happy adults.

LIAM NEESON |

In 2009, Neeson lost his wife, actress Natasha Richardson, after she suffered a fatal skiing accident during their family's vacation to Montreal. She remained on life support long enough for family members to say their goodbyes, after which Neeson allowed for the donation of her heart, kidneys and liver to those in need.

CHARLIZE THERON |

While still living with her family in South Africa, the Oscar-winning actress witnessed her mother shoot and kill her abusive and alcoholic father in an act of self-defense when she was only 15 years old. The actress found strength and confidence from embracing her mother's protective instincts rather than allowing the disturbing event to derail her life.

KELSEY GRAMMER |

Kelsey's father, Frank Allen Grammer, Jr., was shot to death on his front lawn by a deranged cab driver for absolutely no reason. The man had no connection to Frank whatsoever - showed up at Frank's house, lit the family car on fire to lure him outside, then shot him to death. Just for the heck of it. Then, when Kelsey was 20 and had just been expelled from Juilliard, his younger sister Karen was waiting for her boyfriend in a Red Lobster parking lot when a gang of thieves showed up to rob the place. When they spotted Karen, they decided they couldn't leave a witness and brutally murdered her to cover their tracks. Just five years later, Grammer's two half-brothers, Stephen and Billy, were killed in a bizarre scuba diving accident wherein one of them was probably eaten by sharks. Because the universe just couldn't stop shitting on Kelsey Grammer, his good friend and longtime producer David Angell was killed in the terrorist attacks on September 11. And Ben Novack, one of Kelsey's best friends for over 40 years, was murdered by his own wife in a double-homicide inheritance scheme.

THE KENNEDYS |

Joseph P. Kennedy's family has been plagued with tragedy. His eldest son, Joseph, Jr., died in combat in 1944 and his daughter Kathleen died in a plane crash in 1948. His second son, President John F. Kennedy, was assassinated in 1963, and John's brother, Senator Robert Kennedy, was assassinated in 1968. In 1984, Robert Kennedy's son David died of a cocaine overdose. Another son, Michael, died in a skiing accident in 1997. And in 1999, JFK, Jr., his wife, Carolyn Bessette, and her sister died when the small plane he was piloting crashed into the Atlantic Ocean.

THE HEMINGWAYS |

At 29, Ernest's literary career was just taking off when his father shot himself. Ernest went on to earn a Nobel Prize, Pulitzers, wealth and international fame, but in 1961, he killed himself with a shotgun at 62 years old. Five years later, his sister Ursula, who struggled with cancer and depression, committed suicide with an overdose. Sixteen years after that, Ernest's only brother, Leicester, shot himself after learning diabetes would cost him his legs. Then, in 1996, Ernest's granddaughter, Margaux, deliberately overdosed on barbiturates on the 35th anniversary of his death.

What you need to know about immunizations

■ Whooping cough is most dangerous for infants, adults should get boosters

By Vera Hogan

vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

Watching TV a few weeks ago, people may have seen for the first time the commercial involving a grandma holding a new baby. Suddenly, sweet little old grandma's head turns into the "big bad wolf," glasses and all.

The commercial, of course, is to highlight the dangers of whooping cough, or pertussis, and the importance of adults getting booster shots for this preventable disease.

According to the Genesee County Health Department, cases of pertussis, or whooping cough have increased in children, teens, and adults in the last few years. Some infants too young to be fully protected by vaccination have died.

Dianne Duby-Krein of Holly is a registered nurse at Hurley Medical Center in Flint. "The reason that the childhood diseases from the past are no longer such a threat is because of vaccines," she said. "All parents should educate themselves on what is best for their child. Some parents opt out, but if they have heard a child with whooping cough they might change their minds."

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), whooping cough is a highly contagious disease that can be especially serious — even fatal — for infants. More than half of babies under the age of 1 year who have whooping cough are hospitalized.

Whooping cough spreads easily from person to person through coughing and sneezing. Some people who spread whooping cough may not know they have it.

Older folks who have a new grandchild or one on the way, should talk to their doctor or pharmacist about ways they can help protect themselves and their families from whooping cough, including getting vaccinated.

The CDC recommends everyone, including those around babies, make sure their whooping cough vaccination is up to date.

Immunity wears off over time and people may no longer be immune to whooping cough from previous vaccines they have had. Even if someone has had whooping cough before, the "natural immunity" does not provide lifelong protection.

The CDC recommends a "booster" vaccine called Tdap for children, at age 11 or 12, as well as for all adolescents and adults who did not receive the DTaP vaccine as a preteen. This vaccine helps to prevent whooping cough, as well as tetanus and diphtheria.

The CDC recommends getting the vaccine at least two weeks before coming into close contact with an infant.

Whooping cough has never been eliminated in the United States. Babies

FIRST VACCINATIONS

The following is a list of the diseases babies will be protected against through a regular vaccination schedule:

HepB:

hepatitis B, a serious liver disease

DTaP:

diphtheria, tetanus (lockjaw), and pertussis (whooping cough)

PCV13:

pneumococcal conjugate vaccine protects against a serious blood, lung, and brain infection

Hib:

Haemophilus influenzae type b, a serious brain, throat, and blood infection

Polio:

polio, a serious paralyzing disease

RV:

rotavirus infection, a serious diarrheal disease

Influenza:

a serious lung infection

MMR:

measles, mumps, and rubella

HepA:

hepatitis A, a serious liver disease

Chickenpox (Varicella):

Booster shots for many of these diseases are recommended in children, teens and adults. Contact your health care professional or your county health department for more information.

too young to get vaccinated are most at risk for severe illness from whooping cough. In recent years, there have been reported whooping cough cases and large outbreaks of this disease in different parts of the country.

As area children prepare to return to school, health officials encourage parents to have their children immunized against all preventable diseases.

In January, a new law took effect in Michigan making it more difficult for parents to opt out of getting their children vaccinated.

Michigan parents will still have the right to refuse the required shots for their children. But they will have to be educated by a local health worker about vaccines and the diseases they are intended to prevent.

Parents who still choose to opt out of getting their children vaccinated will have to sign a universal state form that includes a statement of acknowledgment that parents understand they may be putting their own children and others at risk by refusing the immunizations.

For more information on vaccinations for babies, children and adults, and dates and times to receive immunizations, visit the Genesee County Health Department's website at www.gchd.us.

Fenton Township residents are adjusting to the recently implemented Republic Services trash collection system, according to the Fenton Township Board of Trustees.
Operations Manager/Deputy Clerk Tom Broecker reported that a few homes were missed during the initial cart delivery system due to problems with the Supervisor Bonnie Mathis said the company's performance delivering the trash cans was very poor, however, the homes that were missed initially have been taken care of.

Trustee Shaun Shumaker expressed concern about the changes made to the list of recyclables after the contract was approved.
Broecker reported that residents seem to be adjusting to the new program and complaints have dwindled down to pre-implementation levels.

ASK THE MECHANIC

Chris Wilkinson,
Certified Mechanic

Q: I have a 2000 Dodge Neon which recently started a humming noise. It didn't affect anything on the driving, just the noise. However, after pulling out of my house it started jumping and making a loud sound, almost like something was falling off the car. Nothing is hanging down, nothing is falling off. It doesn't matter if I'm hitting the gas or brake. It will only do it once in a while. Today, while driving around town, it only did it once. I noticed that if I'm pushing the brake when it happens, the pedal does jump a little. The whole car jumps but doesn't seem like its shutting off or anything. I can't get it into a mechanic until next week and wondered if there is something I can do myself. Please help. -Crystal

A: Crystal, This sounds like a wheel bearing to me, but could be other things like an axle shaft, steering, suspension or brake problem. The way it sounds I would not recommend driving the car until you are able to have someone look at it. To check for a bad wheel bearing, you will need to jack up the front end and support with jack stands. Then, grab the top and bottom of the wheel, trying to move it in at the top and out at the bottom. Go back and forth, you will need someone to look behind the wheel to see where the movement is and confirm that the lower ball joint or tie rods are not loose. Sometimes a wheel bearing will not show any movement and we need to run the vehicle in drive while it is jacked up, listening with a stethoscope for noise. Be very careful if trying this, as we need to get the wheels spinning up to 60 mph sometimes to hear the noise.

Dedication draws 120 people

■ Argentine cemetery now has an historical marker

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

About 120 people attended the dedication for an historical marker at the Argentine Cemetery on Aug. 15. The dedication, planned by the Argentine Township Historical Commission, honored the pioneer families of Argentine and Linden, the history of the township, and the people buried at the cemetery.

Ancestors of the pioneer families were in attendance. Ralph Collins, a descendent of the Lahrings, planned his trip to Michigan around the dedication, said Beth Carr, president of the Argentine Township Historical Commission.

State Rep. Joe Graves also attended.

The Gaines Community Band performed at the ceremony, and the local VFW did the Pledge of Allegiance.

Afterward, a public reception was held, where books on the history of Argentine Township were available for purchase.

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | SUBMITTED

More than 100 people take part in a dedication for the newly installed historical marker at the Argentine Township cemetery on Aug. 15. The dedication honors the pioneer families and history of Argentine and Linden.

Viewed from the front, there's no clue that the Linfield is basically a hexagon with wings. But once inside you see it at once. You find yourself standing in a window-rich, vaulted great room where six pie-shaped sections of ceiling slope up to a lofty central apex. This plan is designed for construction on a down slope to the rear. That puts the entrance at ground level, while elevating the panoramic deck that wraps across the rear, one flight up from the ground.

Young employee has rude awakening working for ‘dream’ company

DEAR AMY:
I am one year out of college and I don’t think I can take my job much longer. When I was 10 years old, if you had asked me where I wanted to work, I would have said Corporation X — it’s a dream company, and that’s where I work! But, ugh — after a year of working 14- to 18-hour days, five to six days a week, for $10.50 an hour, I am exhausted and still living paycheck to paycheck. Here’s the kicker, though: I might work an 18-hour shift, but I will only be given three hours of work to do. The rest of the time I just sit at my desk and wait. When I do have something to do I love my job! Honestly, if my job paid better, gave me benefits, I worked normal hours and they constantly had work for me to do, it would be the perfect job. What should I do? Should I stick it out for a few more years in hopes of getting slightly more reasonable hours? Or should I call it quits and cut my losses and try to get into a graduate program in search of a new career path? — Exhausted

DEAR EXHAUSTED:
Your best course of action is to use your extra 15 hours of time during an 18-hour shift in a way that will improve your experience at work — and impact your future. Notify your supervisors of your capabilities. Pitch ideas for ways you could be more productive and useful to the company. Be proactive. It’s your life. Take charge of it. If you feel certain you have exhausted opportunities at Corporation X (or if you simply don’t want to work there any longer), leverage your employment at this company into a job at a company that will value you more and compensate you better. Whether you take another job or decide on graduate school (or both), don’t leave until you have something else lined up.

Swelling linked to vascular surgery

DEAR DR. ROACH:
My husband had his aorta replaced in 2012 and has trouble with sink-in marks on his legs at the bottom. It doesn’t matter how much I pay for a pair of his socks, or how loose they fit, his legs still get the marks. He is 79 and has no other health problems. Would you have any idea what could be causing this? His heart doctor thought it was his blood pressure medicine, and at that time, he was taking 10 mg of amlodipine in the morning. He now takes lisinopril for his blood pressure and levothyroxine for his thyroid. — R.M.M.

ANSWER:

it means that there is some swelling (edema) in the loose tissues of the legs. Although leg edema can result from serious problems with the heart, kidneys or liver, or even from blood clots, it is far more likely that it is not any of these serious conditions. After a major vascular surgery, it is common to have a bit of swelling in the legs. In fact, most people nearing their 80s have some degree of swelling, usually from imperfect valves in the veins or lymphatic vessels that don’t work as well as they did 50 years earlier. Amlodipine (Norvasc) and medicines like it often cause a degree of swelling that is not dangerous. A careful physical exam and a few blood and urine tests are all that’s necessary to be sure that the leg swelling isn’t being caused by a potentially dangerous condition.
