■ Outdoor volleyball league at local restaurant stays busy even in colder temperatures

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Fenton — The sun sets as someone dives into the sand, clasping their hands and extending their arms, hitting the white and yellow volleyball. It flies over the net. Another man jumps, brings his arm back, preparing for a spike.

He gets the point.

The Barn in Fenton is alive on Sundays, especially during the first Sunday of the five-week fall die-hard volleyball league, that began on Sept. 20.

The two sand courts in the back of the restaurant, visible from U.S. 23, have lights for when it gets too dark, and 40 volleyball players wait for their turn while eating and enjoying some adult beverages.

Some of the 10 teams in this fall league returned from the summer league.

Mike Soyka, who supervises the league, said it's shorter than the eight-week summer league because of the weather.

"It's going to get awful cold in the next couple weeks," he said.

Players don't seem to be bothered by the cooling temperatures. They warm up, pushing sand around with their feet, volleying the ball back and forth before someone moves to the back of the court, getting into position to serve the ball.

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | TIM JAGIELO

A player leaps to block during a Sunday night game last week. (Lower, left) The two courts are separated by nets to protect players, visitors and cars in the parking lot.

This league, part of the World Volleyball Cult, also hosts outdoor leagues at Cobblestone Bar & Grille on Tuesdays and Sharkey's Sports Bar in Burton, as well as indoor leagues around Flint. Soyka said the die-hard league is very popular.

"In the summer and spring, almost every night of the week is busy at Cobblestone and Sharkey's," he said.

Each team pays $100 to enter. They are four-person coed teams, and each team is guaranteed to play three matches against three different teams a night, six games total. First team to 17 points wins.

“We thought it would be fun to come to the bar and drink and play volleyball.”

Windows 10: should you upgrade?

■ Software has new features, but still has some Windows 7 and 8 qualities

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

After the unpopular and not user-friendly Windows 8, Microsoft is offering the latest software upgrade, Microsoft 10, for free for a year.

Most people will upgrade from Windows 7, if they upgrade at all. Windows 10 includes some Windows 7 features, Windows 8 features and some new ones, and many people are questioning if they should upgrade.

"If you have Windows 7 and you like it, don't upgrade it to Windows 10," said Irina Gorlik, a computer technician at Fenton Computers. "It's going to be a big change. If something works, why change it?"

Gorlik said that although Windows 7 and Windows 10 are alike, if you have Windows 8, you should probably upgrade.

Windows 10 is faster than Windows 7 at starting up, and has increased hardware acceleration, according to trustedreviews.com, which gave it eight out of 10 stars. Power management has been improved so the computer's battery lasts longer.

The start menu is back, Gorlik said, unlike Windows 8, which didn't have one.

"It just looks different, but you can get everything you have with Windows 7 or 8. They're just more user friendly than Windows 8," she said.

While the search menu was organized and efficient in Windows 7, it only searched the operating system for the typed-in keywords. The search menu on Windows 10 searches for the keywords on the Internet and on your computer.

The live tiles from the start screen of Windows 8 appear in the search menu.

“Microsoft Edge is completely different than Internet Explorer... When you read an article, it will actually make the letters bigger.”

Irina Gorlik

computer technician

AVAILABILITY

- Computers with Windows 7, 8 or 8.1 can upgrade.
- Windows 10 Home and Windows 10 pro are free for personal computers and tablets for a year.
- For everyone else, Windows 10 Home costs $119 and Windows 10 pro costs $199.
- Upgrades are available online and in stores.

Another feature is Cortana, the user's digital personal assistant. Gorlik said it's like Siri on iPhones.

If you have a device with a microphone, you can ask Cortana to put appointments on your calendar and remind you of important dates. Cortana performs a web search, rather than giving you a straight answer like Siri.

One of the best new features on Windows 10 is the multiple desktop capability, Gorlik said. "Basically, you can work on a desktop and then create another desktop and then switch between them," she said. Apple has this feature and it's now available for Microsoft.

With Windows 8, the tiles were full screen, but not with Windows 10. "It's not really taking over the full computer when trying to use an app, so it's very nice," she said.

The notifications tab in Windows 10 is neatly shown with the task bar. It shows alerts and messages from any Windows programs like mail, security programs or brightness.

"It has a lot of fun features," Gorlik said.

However, not all computers will be compatible for Windows 10. Gorlik said she's had to downgrade some computers back to Windows 7 because the drivers weren't compatible with Windows 10.

Files are saved during the transition, but it's recommended to back them up on an external hard drive.

"Before you do the update, go to the manufacturer's website and see if your model has available drivers for Windows 10," she said.

NEW FEATURES

A new web browser, Microsoft Edge, comes with Windows 10.

"I did notice it's faster," she said. Users still have the option of using other browsers like Google Chrome.

"Microsoft Edge is completely different than Internet Explorer," she said. For example, it's more user friendly. "When you read an article, it will actually make the letters bigger."

DELICIOUSLY PUNNY RESTAURANTS

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792 Sources: ranker.com and delish.com

BREWD AWAKENING COFFEEHAUS

Have you ever been rudely awakened? This coffee house in Lowell, Massachusetts serves coffee, tea, iced drinks, and smoothies. It also hosts poetry nights.

FOR HEAVEN'S CAKES

You won't get exasperated with these sweetcakes. This store, in Thousand Oaks, California, competed on the Food Network's "Cupcake Wars" in 2010. They sell 99-cent cupcakes with flavors ranging from chocolate bomb, red velvet, vanilla with buttercream, and lemon.

LORD OF THE WINGS

Getting barbeque wings isn't as hard as getting giant eagles to carry you from Mount Doom at this eatery in Egypt.

THAITANIC RESTAURANT

Everyone can fit on the floating devices at this restaurant's two locations, in Washington, D.C. The Thai food isn't as expensive as the food on the Titanic, however.

LORD OF THE FRIES

There aren't any little boys living by themselves and creating their own society in this restaurant in Melbourne, Australia. Although, the restaurant did used to be a traveling food van serving at festivals. Now, they have a storefront and sell fries with international sauces.

TEQUILA MOCKINGBIRD

No one is on trial at this bar in Ocean City, Maryland. They serve more than 100 varieties of tequila.

ESPRESSO YOURSELF MUSIC CAFE

The type of coffee drink you prefer is representative of your person. This cafe in Powell, Ohio hosts music events every day.

BEAN ME UP

Make it a double, Scotty. This coffee joint in Kernersville, North Carolina will give you the willpower to fight some Romulans.

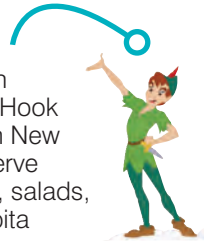

SUFFICIENT GROUNDS CAFE

This cafe in Little Rock, Arkansas not only serves hot and cold drinks, but they also offer sandwiches, salads, and more puns. The menu concludes online by saying "Thanks a Latte."

PITA PAN

You won't run into Captain Hook in this cafe in New York. They serve wraps, pizza, salads, drinks, and pita sandwiches.

THE WIENER'S CIRCLE

This hot dog joint makes sure everyone feels like a winner. They serve the finest Vienna beef in Chicago.

THE CODFATHER

This Phoenix, Arizona restaurant makes authentic English fish and chips and hand-made sausage rolls. Their logo features a font similar to "The Godfather."

THAI ME UP

This noodle restaurant in Pittsburgh sells reasonably priced sandwiches, dumplings, salads and more Thai food. Perhaps Anastasia Steele and Christian Grey would eat here.

CUSTARD'S LAST STAND

This ice cream shop in Lee's Summit, Montana, is a great history lesson for anyone who wants frozen custard, ice cream, or sundaes.

LARD HAVE MERCY

The glory of God can't save you from the artery-clogging power from the deep-fried food this restaurant serves. In Austin, Texas, they sell comfort food like tacos, ribs, and chicken.

LIFE OF PIE

You won't hallucinate the delicious wood-fired pizza at this restaurant in Portland, Oregon.

FRYING NEMO FISH & CHIPS

This restaurant takes the family friendliness out of a popular Disney movie. Marvin and Dori might never be able to be Nemo, but patrons can find good fish here in Port Campbell, Australia. They finally arrived in Australia, but not the way the planned.

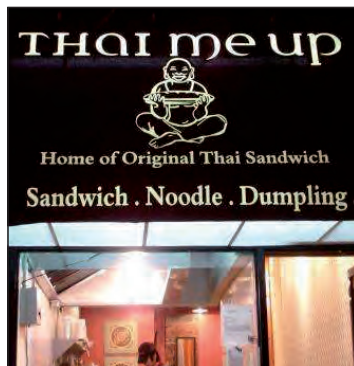

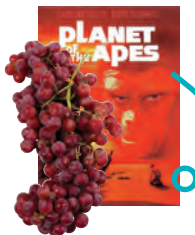

GRILLENIUM FALCON

This grilled cheese sandwich's food truck features the Millennium Falcon made out of cheese on the side of the truck. Located in Arkansas, this eatery will have you saying "I love you." It will respond, "I know."

PLANET OF THE GRAPES

In London, this wine bar pounds on its chest in celebration of the delicious wine. They have more than 300 wines and a menu that changes daily.

VOLLEYBALL

Some teams wear matching shirts, and some simply wear shorts and a T-shirt. Team names tended to be funny play on words.

Winner of the summer league, Beach Better Have My Money, came back for the fall league, and scored at least two wins on Sunday.

Beach Better Have My Money team member Justin Kelly of Fenton has played volleyball for three years, but this is his first year playing on a team on four.

"There seems to be a lot better competition," he said. "It's a lot more fun than the 6's I used to play. It's exciting."

He said no one holds grudges when it gets competitive.

Team Dat Ace Doe also returned from the summer league. Nick Stafford, 25, of Fenton said they're excited to keep playing.

"It's something to do on the weekends to stay active. We thought it would be fun to come to the bar and drink and play volleyball."

Ashley Norman, 27, said it's fun for them to hang out together and Danielle Vaughn, 24, said, "I wanted to be able to meet new people and stay active. We did a lot better than we have been."

Angela Cuppermoll, 23, started playing in the league last season in July, and said the league is a really good idea for the restaurant.

"It's brilliant, really," she said. "It brought a lot of business. We obviously played a second season, which is amazing. I think The Barn bought a business that wasn't doing so well and now it's thriving really well. We get to drink and be in the sand."

SUMMARY

■ Players aren't bothered by the cold at the outdoor, sand volleyball league at The Barn on Sundays. Patrons are free to use the courts any day of the week.

Trap Neuter Return

Trap, Neuter, Return (TNR) is a unique program to the area. There are millions of community cats killed in shelters because they are unadoptable. TNR is recognized as the most humane and effective strategy for reducing the community cat population. Anyone caring for a colony of feral or stray cats may fill out an application to have the cats fixed at a low cost.

Parkcrest PLAN 30-561

The Parkcrest is a bright and spacious single-level home with a wealth of formal and informal gathering spaces. It's traditional and contemporary at the same time, inside and out. Brick veneer, multipaned windows and an arched entry give the home a familiar inviting look, while the roof lines, framed columns, and extended window heights are more modern. Inside, formal rooms flank the vaulted entry, which leads directly into the expansive informal great room, kitchen and nook at the rear.

Couple tussles over engagement ring

DEAR AMY: My husband and I have been arguing about this for the past year. I picked out my engagement ring and wedding band before my husband ever asked me to marry him. I love my rings and there is absolutely nothing wrong with them. While my mom was going through cancer treatments, she gave me her wedding set (the diamond is a very old family diamond). I asked my husband if we could get the diamond put into a new setting and wear the new ring with my original wedding band instead of my engagement ring. I was honored that my mom entrusted me with her wedding set (since my parents are still married) and since the diamond is a family diamond I would love to be able to wear it instead of hiding it away in a jewelry box. I believe that by still wearing my wedding band with the new ring it is a good compromise.

ASK Amy

BY AMY DICKINSON

AMY DICKINSON

I'll be wearing what my husband put on my finger when we got married as well as wearing an old family stone. My husband thinks that because I asked to do this that I don't like my rings anymore or that they don't mean anything to me. — Ringed Out

DEAR DISGUSTED: Your engagement ring belongs to you. It was a gift from your husband and now it is yours. Unlike wedding bands, the engagement ring symbolizes a question (“Will you marry me?”) that has already been answered and a promise fulfilled. Many women choose not to wear their engagement rings every day post-marriage. But rather than scrap this ring entirely, is there a way to incorporate your family stone and your engagement stone into a new setting where both stones are present? Whatever you decide, this should not be a test of your relationship. Offer him lots of reassurance instead of arguing about it.

No harm in taking nitro for angina

DEAR DR. ROACH: Could you write about the effect that angina, stopped quickly by nitro, has on one's system? My husband takes Imdur (30 mg) twice a day to control angina, although he still experiences it several times a week, necessitating a nitroglycerin pill. Sometimes angina comes from exertion, such as climbing stairs a few times or doing home-maintenance chores. He is 89 and in relatively good health. He has had bypass surgery and several catheterizations, with eight stents. He doesn't need a cane or use oxygen. His cardiologist suggested EECF, which my husband does not want to endure, believing the medicines are working fine. His quality of life is good — angina does not interfere with going out and enjoying himself. Is he taking angina too lightly because he can stop it by popping a nitro? — M.W.

the blood supply is fixed due to a blockage in the heart, the heart simply can't get enough oxygen above a certain level of exercise. If the person with angina stops exercising, the demand for oxygen goes back down below what can be supplied, and the angina goes away. Medications like isosorbide (Imdur) and nitroglycerine work by dilating the blood vessels in order to increase supply. These medicines also dilate veins, which reduces the demands on the heart. Stents are designed to keep blockages open. Nonetheless, there are many people who continue to have angina despite what can be done with medicine and stents. EECF (enhanced external counterpulsation) is a new technique. Cuffs wrapped around the legs are synchronized with the EKG and squeeze strongly when the heart is at rest. This forces blood backward through the arteries and into the blood vessels of the heart. It takes 35 hours of EECF over four to seven weeks to get benefits, and about 70 percent of people had improvement from severe angina to mild or none. EECF is a big investment of time, and is usually reserved for people whose angina is more disabling than your husband's. At 89, your husband certainly is entitled to say he is doing fine the way he is and not wanting further treatments.

ANSWER: Angina pectoris literally means “chest pain,” but in my experience people with angina due to blockages in the arteries of the heart are more likely to complain of pressure or tightness than actual pain. Angina occurs when the heart's demand for blood oxygen exceeds the supply. If
