MORE DEATHS IN JANUARY THAN ANY OTHER MONTH

Surprising facts reveal that you are more likely to die on Christmas, New Year's or your birthday than any other day

By Sally Rummel
news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Here it is, the final day of January. If you're reading this, you have already dodged the bullet of death through the month that claims the most people's lives. With the passing in January of legendary rocker David Bowie, "Harry Potter" actor Alan Rickman and musician Glenn Frey of The Eagles, to name a few, death came to the forefront of celebrity news and reminded us all of the fragility of life — especially this month.

More people die in January than any other month, according to mortality charts provided by the National Center for Health Statistics. The chances of dying also rise on the two big holidays that just passed — Christmas and New Year's.

Three days emerge every year as the deadliest for deaths from natural causes: Dec. 25, 26 and Jan. 1. Experts aren't quite sure what causes it, but it affects nearly every age and disease group, and both men and women, according to a study recently reported in the Wall Street Journal.

Hard to believe, but true...

You certainly hear more about shark attack deaths than statistics about deaths from falling coconuts, but believe it or not, more people are killed each year from:

- 1 Falling coconuts, account for 150 deaths worldwide each year.
- 2 Mosquito bites, account for two million deaths each year because of malaria carried by mosquitos.
- 3 Autoerotic asphyxiation, which kills 600 people per year.
- 4 Icicles, which kill 100 people annually in Russia alone, from being impaled by huge ice chunks.
- 5 Falling out of bed, which will kill 450 people in the U.S. alone, giving new meaning to the phrase, "getting up on the wrong side of the bed."
- 6 Vending machines, which will fall, crush and kill 10 to 13 people a year, so make sure you don't shake them.
- 7 Tap water, when scalding hot, will kill 43 people this year.
- 8 Animal chauffeurs, such as horse-drawn carriages, which kills about 120 people each year.

Eggs from birds that are not raised in cages, but in floor systems usually in an open barn. The hens have bedding material such as pine shavings on the floor, and they are allowed perches and nest boxes to lay their eggs. However, they may still be at close quarters with many other hens — just not in cages.	Free-range eggs are laid from hens that have the opportunity to go outside. Smaller farms may keep birds outside under a canopy area. They may travel in and out of a barn at free will or spend some portion of their day roaming outdoors.	Organic eggs are laid from hens that may be kept in any kind of caging system, but generally are cage free. They eat an organic feed and don't receive vaccines or antibiotics.  SOURCE: WEBMD.COM	Vegetarian eggs are laid from hens that are only fed a vegetarian diet — free from meat or fish by-products. Hens are kept in cages or indoors and do not peck at any grubs or worms.	Pasteurized eggs are eggs in their shell that have been put through a pasteurization process where they are heated to 140 degrees Fahrenheit for three and a half minutes. Eggs are not required to be pasteurized.

WHAT YOU LIKELY DON'T KNOW ABOUT eggs

U.S. produces 75 billion eggs per year — on average each American eats 250 per year

SUMMARY
■ Eggs are used in the majority of recipes, especially baking, and have one of the highest nutritional values of any food.

By Hannah Ball
hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792
You eat them in the morning, use them while baking, and Labradors can carry them in their mouths without breaking them. Everyone is familiar with eggs, whether they're white or brown, but how much do you actually know about one of the most popular ingredients and building blocks of food?

Fragile?
Eggs are easy to break when cracking the side against a hard surface, but are nearly impossible to break when applying pressure to the entire egg by squeezing the ends in one palm. According to quora.com, the egg won't break as the pressure applied is spread throughout the entire shell because of the curved form. It will not break if squeezed tip-to-tip despite the added pressure, because the ends are the strongest parts of the egg. There are many YouTube videos of people trying, and failing, to break an egg. Labradors can carry them in their mouth without breaking them because the dogs are so gentle, according to a-zanimals.com.

“Eggs are easy to break when cracking the side against a hard surface, but are nearly impossible to break when applying pressure to the entire egg by squeezing it in one palm.”
Quora.com

WHICH CAME FIRST?
One popular debate with eggs is which came first, the chicken or the egg? According to livescience.com, the egg did. Fossilized remains of three dinosaurs sitting on nests suggests that daddy dinosaurs often took care of eggs. They possibly sat on eggs from more than one mother because polygamy is common in the animal kingdom, according to livescience.com. The analysis of the study suggests daddy dinosaurs took care of the eggs before certain dinosaurs developed the ability to fly, and long before birds evolved from dinosaurs.

MORE FACTS
• The biggest known egg laid was 9.1 inches in diameter.
• An average hen will lay about 250 to 270 eggs a year.

• When blood vessels are visible in an egg, it means a small vessel ruptured in the yolk. However, this does not mean it's unsafe to eat.
• An egg white is cloudy when it's very fresh and more clear when it's aging. The egg is spoiled with it looks pink or iridescent.

An average American eats about 250 eggs a year, according to lifehack.org. The United States produces about 75 billion eggs per year, about 10 percent of the world's total, according to livescience.com. China is the world's biggest supplier of eggs by producing about 390 billion per year, which is about half the world total. Approximately 60 percent of eggs are bought by consumers, 9 percent are bought by the food service industry, and the rest are used to make products like marshmallows and cake mix.

Familiar face to lead Holly community center

■ Director of Holly Township Parks and Recreation becomes new director of the Karl Richter Community Center

By Vera Hogan

vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6795

Toni Brinker now wears two important hats in Holly — director of Holly Township Parks and Recreation, a position she's held since 1990, and director of the Karl Richter Community Center through June of 2017.

Brinker replaced Nick Klemp, who was promoted within the Holly Area Community Coalition where he worked in addition to KRCC, leading to his resignation as the KRCC director.

The village finance committee considered options to either allocate more funds for a salary to make the KRCC director position more attractive, or consider a shared-services agreement.

The committee recommended a shared-services agreement first, as the KRCC was intended to be a self-sustaining enterprise with minimal support from the village's general fund.

Brinker's pay for the new job has been structured so that she gets a percentage of the money that comes into KRCC through classes, etc. She gets a percentage, the parks department will get a percentage, the school district gets a percentage, etc. There is no minimum. She is doing this because she believes in the Holly community and the need for good leadership at KRCC.

"The village of Holly and the township Park Commission have entered into a shared service agreement, which will allow me to provide services at KRCC," Brinker said.

Brinker started her duties on Jan. 13.

"I felt I needed to get right to work so that I could continue to move KRCC forward," she said.

Brinker said she is committed to being physically at the KRCC site eight hours a week and additional hours as needed.

"I am always available via phone," she added. "My hope is that I will be able to grow the center to the point that we will need to hire additional help, and possibly even share the services of the programming specialist between KRCC and the parks."

Brinker has taken stock of her new responsibilities and said, "I am looking at what currently exists and trying to streamline their processes and bring a little more organization to the center."

On how she came to get the job, Brinker said, "I was approached by (Village Manager) Jerry Walker and I took it to the Holly Township Park Commission. The Parks Board felt it would be a good fit for me and them."

"It would provide us with another avenue to grow our class offerings for the Holly community," she added. "I could provide the community center with my experience at the same time."

Brinker said this is great way to provide shared services between the village and the Holly Township Parks Commission.

"I have started to plan future classes and offerings," Brinker said. "If anyone is interested in offering classes, they can reach me at KRCC (248) 459-0380 or at the parks office at (248) 634-1758."

"I felt I needed to get right to work so that I could continue to move KRCC forward."

Director of Holly Township Parks and Recreation and the Karl Richter Community Center

About Toni Brinker

Toni Brinker is a graduate of the Michigan State University School of Education. She currently holds a CPRP (Certified Parks Recreation Professional) certificate, which is issued by the National Recreation and Parks Association. She has been employed as the Holly Township Parks and Recreation director since 1990. She has one daughter, Cassidy Brinker, who is a 17-year-old senior at Fenton High School.

DEATHS

Last year, the spike was particularly noticeable, when nearly a third more senior citizens died than normal in the first two weeks of the new year in 2015.

While experts attribute the high rate of passing during the months of December through March to the effects of winter and flu season, even states with warmer climates like California, Texas and Arizona have mortality rates that spike in the winter.

How could that be when it's so much warmer there than here? Experts surmise that it might be because of the depressing effects of the loss of daylight during winter months, and the change in people's behavioral habits including diet and exercise. Respiratory infections leading to heart disease deaths are also common across the climates, especially during peak flu months.

It might not be your job that's killing you. It might be your time off. Just slightly more deaths occur on the weekends than weekdays, perhaps attributed to factors like alcohol and accidents.

That may also explain why you're 25 percent more likely to die on your birthday, or soon after you get a paycheck, according to a study reported in Men's Health magazine. One of the authors of the study says that risky behaviors involving alcohol, driving and stress are probably the cause.

What time of day are you likely to die? Thanks to a meaningful shift in your body's circadian rhythms, you're most likely to pass at about 11 a.m., if you're already near death's doorstep.

Since death and taxes are the two most certain parts of your life, you can be 100 percent sure that your life on this earth is going to end some day (and that you will pay taxes until your dying day).

If you could know ahead of time, would you like to know the exact date you will face your earthly demise?

The Death Clock

seems to think so. An Internet site that shows your life is slipping away second by second, the Death Clock allows you to check out your own life expectancy, by the second, by answering a handful of basic questions: date of birth, gender, Body Mass Index, smoking status and your general state of mind (from Normal to Sadistic).

This writer got the news that she'd be leaving this earth on Feb. 4, 2049, at age 93. Not wanting to place all her bets on one site, she also did quick calculations on the Northwestern Mutual Life Expectancy Calculator and "How Long Will I Live" site, both giving her 95 years of earthly life, if actuary charts mean anything.

On a much more optimistic note, the month of August is only six months away, and that's the month you're least likely to meet the Grim Reaper.

EGGS

The process

A hen will lay an egg every 24 to 26 hours, according to livescience.com. The shell, which is made of calcium carbonate, forms in the uterus of the hen, while the yolk develops inside an ovary. During ovulation, the yolk is released and the shell forms around the yolk and the egg white, which is made mainly from a protein called albumen.

Eggs laid are at approximately 105 degrees Fahrenheit and exit large-end first.

Color

While American eggs are usually white, eggs in England are generally brown, according to livescience.com.

The pigment depends on the hen's color. White leghorn hens, which lay white eggs, are the most common in the United States, while Rhode Island Red hens lay brown eggs.

White eggs and brown eggs have no significant differences, according to livescience.com.

The color of the yolk depends on the hen's diet. If a hen eats more grain with yellow and orange plant pigments, the yolk will be more vibrant in color.

Advantages

Eggs are one of the cheapest, most nutritious food items with the highest quality protein you consumers can buy, according to the Egg Nutrition Center.

Yolks are one of the few foods with a naturally good source of Vitamin D.

One single large egg contains approximately 70 calories and 5 grams of fat, according to the Egg Nutrition Center.

Protein in eggs has the perfect mix of essential amino acids humans need to build tissues, second only to mother's milk for nutrition value.

Meet Kenny Allen

- Michigan Wolverines' starting placekicker
- Has NFL dreams
- Fenton graduate

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Kenny Allen had to patiently wait for his time to shine as a member of the University of Michigan football squad, but his patience paid off during the 2015 season. The senior was named the starting placekicker for the Wolverines at the start of the regular season, and he took full advantage, converting 18-of-22 field goals and all 46 of his extra-point attempts. The 2012 Fenton graduate's career isn't over at Michigan just yet. Allen will be returning to Michigan's football program for a fifth season in the fall of 2016. Allen's long-term goals go beyond kicking for the Wolverines. He's hoping to have a shot at kicking in the National Football League.

Looking back at your season, how would you describe it?

I think it was surreal. I didn't expect any of this to go the way it did. Having it go the way it did, I feel so blessed and I'm so excited for this off-season so I can get ready for next year.

What was your biggest memory of the 2015 football season?

I think my biggest highlight this year was celebrating with my team after we won the (Citrus) Bowl game (against) Florida.

What is it like playing in a bowl game?

It's a great thing. You finish the regular season and you have all these practices, it's freezing and you want to get to wherever you are playing to get to warm weather. When you get there it almost feels like another camp. You put all this hard work and effort into it and then the game happens. It's a great feeling when you play together and win, knowing all that hard work was for that moment.

What did Michigan head coach Jim Harbaugh bring to the team this year?

"He (coach Jim Harbaugh) brought passion and a drive which was instilled in all the players. His personality made guys want to get up there, compete and try that much harder."

Kenny Allen
Fenton graduate and current starting U of M football placekicker

He brought passion and a drive which was instilled in all the players. His personality made guys want to get up there, compete and try that much harder.

How does it feel knowing you are coming back again next year to play football?

It's a great feeling to know that the coaches want me to come back and like the work I did this year. It's just awesome to have one more year to play with my team, play at Michigan. It gives me another year to reach my goals.

What are your goals for next season?

We always have the same goals — the Big Ten championship is first and foremost.

Does that goal seem more obtainable since Harbaugh has come back to the program?

No, every year when you are at Michigan you think to yourself we are going to compete for this championship. This season there is a little bit different feeling but everyone still has the (win the Big Ten championship) mindset.

What are your individual goals for next season?

I'd say to kick more touchbacks and to kick more field goals.

What about after school. Are you thinking about the NFL?

Yeah, the NFL would be awesome. I have to finish out college at Michigan. If something like that was to happen, I definitely would and want to pursue it. It's in the future so still got time.

What does it mean to you being from Fenton?

Fenton is a great place. It's where my mom was raised and mom's dad was raised. A lot of my family is from here. All my good friends are from here. It's a great town. Everyone is so supportive

Chris Wilkinson,
Certified Mechanic

Q: I have a 2004 Dodge Neon manual transmission. I was going down the road and all of a sudden I heard a pop. Now it acts like the car is in neutral, you can shift it into gear but it won't go when you let out on the clutch.

- Shoney

A: Shoney, It sounds like you have had an internal transmission failure or an axle shaft come apart. These cars are known for the differential pin coming out and damaging the case of the transmission. You will need to have it up in the air enough to get to the back side of the transmission. Look at the small curved cover for any kind of damage or leaking fluid. When you have the car jacked up you should also look at the front C/V axles and make sure the boots are intact and not twisted or torn. You can also try rotating the tires while in gear and jacked up to see if the axle shafts spin on both ends like they should. The tires should be difficult or unable to rotate.

Monumental loss causes man to question profession

DEAR AMY: I lost both of my parents (they died three days apart) earlier this fall. I am an only child, and my parents were a huge part of my life. I inherited a large estate and I'm employed as an administrator at a high school. Dealing with the loss of my parents, raising a young family with a supporting wife, dealing with probate and juggling my work responsibilities have been overwhelming at times. My question is, should I step down from my administration job and just go back to teaching in the classroom in order to focus on the other aspects of my life? What makes this decision difficult is that my administration job is my passion, and I was just notified that I will be honored as the administrator of the year for my region. Should I wait while the dust settles from the fallout of the loss of my parents before making a decision? — Struggling in California

DEAR STRUGGLING: I am so sorry for your monumental loss. This terrible series of events happened some months ago; immediately after losses there is a lot of tension, and the adrenaline of getting through these shocking days can keep you moving forward. When things slow down, the stress and grief can hit very hard. My instinct is that you should not make a huge change right now. The general guideline is to wait a year before making big decisions after a life-changing loss. You should seek immediate relief, perhaps in the form of a shorter-term respite from your job (of a few weeks' duration) during which you could either take a leave or cut your hours way down. While I can imagine that contact with young people can be energizing and positive, the classroom might not be the best place for a stressed and grieving educator. Seek professional grief (or group) counseling, look into meditation practices, read (if you can), exercise outside every day and hold your wife and children close. It can be very challenging for giving and generous people (like you) to learn self-care, but treating yourself with loving kindness will help you to heal.

Can heart surgery cause hot flashes?

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have had hot flashes, similar to those experienced by post-menopausal women, ever since my coronary bypass in 1990. I can be sitting quietly in a chair reading or at my computer, and suddenly I find myself dripping with perspiration. I also have had panic attacks, with increased heart rate and other physical symptoms. A few years ago, a 24-hour EKG showed heart-rhythm irregularities and that my heart stopped briefly while asleep. If these idiosyncrasies of my autonomic nervous system are a consequence of my time on the heart-lung machine for the bypass, I'm not complaining — just curious. You said that studies have been done on almost everything. Is this one? — W.S.B.

ANSWER: I found that a lot of people complain of similar symptoms. I also found that indeed, the autonomic nervous system (the part of the nervous system that regulates temperature, sweat, blood pressure and many other critical aspects of body function without our being consciously aware of it) can be adversely affected by cardiac surgery. Some authors have suggested that the autonomic nervous system changes are one mechanism by which people are more likely to have depression after cardiac surgery. I found several possible explanations why the ANS changes with bypass surgery, but no clear consensus. I would want to be sure that there are no other causes of these symptoms. It sounds like you have had an extensive evaluation, but I certainly would be concerned about a sudden fast heart rhythm, such as atrial fibrillation.

Easy Cheesy Broccoli, Kale, Carrot Soup

- INGREDIENTS:
- 1 T. Olive Oil
  - 1 medium Yellow Onion, diced
  - 1 1/2 t. minced Garlic
  - 1/2 C. Nutritional Yeast
  - 5 Carrots, peeled and sliced into 1/4 inch rounds
  - 8 C. Hot Water
  - 1 package Bear Creek Cheddar Broccoli Soup Mix
  - 8 oz. Broccoli Florets
  - 2 oz. chopped Kale Leaves

- PREPARATION:
1. In a large stock pot or cast iron soup pot, heat the olive oil over medium heat. Add the diced onion and saute for 5 minutes, or until golden and fragrant. Add the garlic, nutritional yeast, and carrot and saute for an additional 3 minutes.
  2. Slowly pour the hot water into the pot, whisking with a wire whisk. Bring to a boil and slowly whisk in the Bear Creek Cheddar Broccoli Soup Mix until the mixture is smooth with no lumps.
  3. Add the broccoli and kale to the soup. Simmer uncovered for 10 - 15 minutes. Serve.
