Marine patrols promote safety on area lakes

■ Average statistics are one to two drowning accidents a year

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

While recreational boaters and swimmers kickoff summer this Memorial Day Weekend, the Genesee County Sheriff's Office Marine Patrol will begin its season of patrolling area waterways to keep everyone safe.

Tri-county area lakes average about one or two drowning accidents per season, according to Undersheriff Chris Swanson, who heads the Marine Patrol division. "It's not uncommon, unfortunately. Without a doubt, alcohol is the cause of most boating and swimming accidents."

Ten seasonal deputies will focus their patrolling efforts on Lake Fenton, Lobdell, Ponemah and Silver lakes, as well as the Holloway Reservoir in Lapeer County.

Their official patrols begin Memorial Day Weekend and run through Labor Day Weekend. These marine patrols are

The stop was more for training and demonstration purposes than any actual boating violations.

“The most common sense piece of advice I can offer boaters and swimmers is to wear life jackets, and don't drink and drive.”

Tool Box Tip #3

Sitting for extended periods can contribute to health problems later in life.

Research suggests that two minute walks each hour can help reverse the negative impact of sitting for long periods of time.

8 SENIOR PRANKS

that went too far...

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

It seemed like a good idea at the time. That's probably what these seniors said after their senior pranks resulted in criminal charges, principals being suspended without pay, and sheriff deputies being fired.

Filling a teacher's classroom with balloons is harmless, but not all senior pranks go off without a hitch or consequences.

Here are eight senior pranks that weren't so funny to school administrators or police:

Sources: newmediarockstars.com, inquisitr.com, naplesherald.com, wreg.

1 In Maryland a few years ago, a few students filled their school with an estimated 72,000 live ladybugs at 3:30 a.m. They set off a silent alarm and police arrived. It took janitors several hours to vacuum up the ladybugs. The students were charged with crimes ranging from disruption of school activities to burglary in the fourth degree.

2 In Wentzville, Missouri, two students were arrested for vandalism and destruction of property after they tried to uproot three large trees on school property. They had planned to move them from the school atrium to the softball field, but ended up damaging the roots and destroying the trees.

STUDENTS COULD FACE CHARGES FOR SENIOR PRANK

3 Six students in Jamestown, New York were arrested after sneaking into their school, tying locker doors together with string, spreading glitter around the building, and throwing pieces of paper around the hallways. They were arrested after bragging about it on social media.

4 Sixty-three students in Teaneck, New Jersey caused thousands of dollars in damages to their school after flipping over desks, urinating on carpets, smearing Vaseline on doors, and taping raw hotdogs to lockers. They were charged with trespassing, burglary, vandalism and more.

5 Two students at South Iredell High School in North Carolina are facing a felony charge and 25 months in prison after putting alarm clocks in lockers set to go off at different times in the day. It sounded like bombs ticking and the North Carolina bomb squad was called in.

6 Last year, 100 students were banned from graduation, a principal was suspended without pay, and a sheriff's deputy was fired after students vandalized their high school in Madisonville, Tennessee by filling the hallway with trash, hay, urine, and dead animals.

7 A police officer in Florida had to use pepper spray on two students who were fighting after taking a senior prank too far. Students organized a water balloon fight, which got out of hand. The students did not listen to the officer's requests for them to stop fighting.

8 This year, nearly half of a graduating class at a school in Osceola, Arkansas aren't allowed to walk at graduation and face criminal charges after 34 students spray painted the walls, flipped over furniture, urinated in a classroom, set crickets free, spread butter, eggs, baby powder, cereal and trash all over the school. Other students tried to clean up the mess but the superintendent said all students who entered the building when they weren't authorized are being held liable.

a public service, with safety as their primary goal. These deputies do not carry weapons and they have to be licensed and CPR-certified. Many of them are college students with career aspirations in criminal justice.

Their primary goal is to remind people of the rules to keep everyone safe on the water, and to protect the property of lakefront residents. "We want to make sure you have flotation devices, lights and fire extinguishers on your boats for safety," said Swanson.

"People pay a lot of money to live on the lake," he added. "As long as they play it safe, we want to be there to support them, while maintaining marine laws and sober driving. We don't want you to drink and drive. We see it countless times. Bad things happen when you operate a boat and get drunk."

Sheriff Robert Pickell is adding additional precaution by urging both swimmers and boaters to wear life jackets.

"The last two drownings we've had were not due to boating accidents, but people trying to swim across the lake," said Pickell. "That's a long distance to swim, in addition to other hazards that a swimmer may face while attempting to cross the lake. Boaters may not always be paying attention and looking for swimmers. I'm also concerned about boaters who drink to the point of being 'buzzed.'

Remember, 'Buzzed driving is drunk driving.'

The most common boating infraction is expired boat tags, because even though a tag will say 2016, they expire on March 31 of this current year.

Any marine violation is a misdemeanor. "It's different than the motor vehicle code," said Swanson. "It's actually a stricter violation."

Died in December of 1944 during the Battle of the Bulge

By Vera Hogan

vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

What is your real name and where are you from? My real name is etched on the headstone of every soldier's grave in American cemeteries, including all of those in your beautiful local communities. We are everywhere.

Where were you fighting when you died? I was one of the 19,000 American soldiers killed during the Battle of the Bulge in Europe in December of 1944. We fought under the leadership of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton. What happened is Adolph Hitler attempted to split the Allied armies in northwest Europe with a surprise blitzkrieg. Caught off guard, we fought desperate battles to stem the German advance. As the Germans drove deeper into the Ardennes, a region in southeast Belgium that extends into Luxembourg, Germany and France, in an attempt to secure bridgeheads, the Allied line took on the appearance of a large bulge, giving the battle its name. Total allied casualties were estimated to be 110,000, making it the bloodiest battle for American troops in all of World War II.

Besides the obvious, losing your life, what do you regret the most? I regret having to leave my lovely young wife and our precious little children. They did not deserve to lose their husband and father to such a hateful war, and be forced to rebuild their lives without me. However, I look in on them from time to time and am very proud of who they are and what they have accomplished as a family over the years. What I don't regret is having served my country with dignity and honor. I, like many other Americans, felt it was my duty. If I had to do it again, I most definitely would.

Do you think America does enough for its veterans? Well, it is disturbing to me that many veterans still have difficulties getting the jobs, services and medical care they need. Their wellbeing should be the priority for the rest of their lives. You have no idea what they went through and what some are still going through in their nightmares. It saddens me that after my war, the Korean War, Vietnam conflict and subsequent battles had to happen. Vietnam veterans in particular are very sensitive to their experiences. They did not get the heroes' welcome they should have when they returned. I understand many of them today refuse to discuss their experience. If you know a Vietnam vet that doesn't want to talk about it, don't make him. Just say 'thank you.'

When you look at us today, what makes you happy? Oh, there are many things. First, I am very happy that my wife found love again with a great man, who has loved and cared for her and my children as if they were his own. I am also very happy about the project called 'Wounded Warriors,' and the 'Invictus Games,' which have given veterans with permanent injuries a reason to carry on with life. Prince Harry's mother is quite proud of him for creating such a noble cause. Lastly, I look forward to Memorial Day every year, when hundreds of people visit me and my fallen comrades in cemeteries throughout the nation. As they did every year with their mother and stepfather when they were still alive, my son and daughter still come to see me every year and participate in the ceremony with their spouses and my grandchildren. And now my grandchildren are having children. Each new arrival brings me a great deal of joy. I wish they know how much I love and marvel over all of them.

What do you think of the war on terrorism? I can't say much about that because it's an ongoing battle that unfortunately is not going away anytime soon. I can say, however, that terrorist

ASK THE MECHANIC

Chris Wilkinson,
Certified Mechanic

Q: When driving forward the right front wheel makes kind of a scraping, growling, grinding noise, but at higher speeds (40+) the noise stops. I also hear the noise when slowing down while I'm pressing the brakes. When I turn right I can still hear the noise, but when I turn left I can't.

- Rabi

A: Rabi, This is most likely a wheel bearing going bad. If you jack up the front wheels and try to move the top and bottom of the tire in and out it should give you an indication as to which one it is. Sometimes we have to run them on a hoist and listen with a stethoscope to determine the exact one causing the noise. You should fix this as soon as possible so that it does not cause any further damage to other parts or become serious enough to be dangerous.

Staff Reporters Vera Hogan and Hannah Ball share their thoughts on

SMARTPHONES

Look me in the eye, not at your phone

There is a TV commercial that shows a young couple having dinner at home. They're eating with one hand and in the other is a Smartphone, and their eyes are glued to the screen. The only evidence that they are communicating at all is they are playing 'footsie' under the table.

Vera Hogan
Staff Reporter

When my sisters and I were growing up, our parents only had to give us a look when our manners weren't up to their standards.

We said 'please,' 'thank you,' 'excuse me,' and you always looked someone in the eye when they were talking to you — always. It was rude to be looking at anything else.

Today, and I'm not just picking on the younger generation, it seems people of all ages have their face in their phones all the time.

Sometimes I will say, 'Excuse me, am I disturbing you?' And, without looking up, they'll say, 'No, it's OK, I'm just: reading a text, sending a text, playing a game, googling something, checking the weather, checking my email, reading Facebook posts ...'

I actually don't care if people want to stare at their phones, but when I'm speaking with someone, I want their undivided attention.

My husband and I got our first cell phones a couple of years after we got married. Our two adult sons got their first cell phones when they were 11 and 9, and I can remember exactly when. The day after the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks.

We never ever wanted to be out of touch with our boys again — ever.

Our sons know better than to sit in our presence with their faces in their smartphones, especially if we're talking to them. That sometimes warrants a light smack under the chin followed by, 'Hey, I'm talking to you buddy!'

Cell phones are wonderful communication tools. They also serve other useful purposes — alarm clock, camera, calendar, calculator.

Smartphones offer even more. But all phones are a tool — not our entire world of entertainment.

I love to visit with people, but when I do, I want them to look me in the eye.

Smartphones are not evil

Young people do have manners even if we spend too much time on our smartphones.

As a 22-year-old kind-of adult, I'm a hardcore millennial who freaks out when her phone isn't in her line of sight. Ninety-five percent of the time, I think that's a good thing.

Hannah Ball

When I got my first phone, I was told to absolutely not lose it. It's your way to contact police and Mom in case of an emergency.

It's still true.

It's the world's most popular medium of communication. I have many ongoing online conversations with friends, family, and contacts for stories.

I can fact check something on my phone, and show people what nonsense Donald Trump is spewing now.

I'm on Facebook a lot, and a year ago, I would have said it was too much, but not anymore.

Facebook is where I get the majority of my news. According to neimanlabs.com, 70 percent of users use the site for news every day. That's hardly a bad thing.

It's cheap excitement when I'm not satisfied with the world. Too often I'm still bored watching TV or sewing, and want another source of entertainment.

Older generations didn't have these gadgets growing up, but I grew up with TVs, and knew how to use a computer and cell phone by age 11. It's ingrained into my life.

I learn new things online every day. I can watch a video tutorial on working with worbla and EVA foam, or learn about Ireland's Great Famine in the 1800s that caused major emigration.

We hold the world's information in our hands. I utilize it.

Although, because of the instant access of communication, it's also rude not to respond to someone who texted, messaged, or emailed you. With great technology comes great responsibility. I feel like I'm disappointing someone when I ignore my phone and when I don't.

You should always have your phone on you, right? So why shouldn't you always respond? I, and everyone with a smartphone, face this pressure every day.

Condemning smartphones is ridiculous — their usefulness depends on how you use them.

Wayne Macklin has been in the heating, ventilation and air conditioning business (HVAC) for almost three decades in Livingston County, and has recently opened a new office in Fenton.

Macklin Mechanical, with field operations and a sheet metal shop in Brighton, opened its residential division in Fenton on April 1 at 1447 North LeRoy St.

"Our family moved to Fenton in 2013, and we love living in this area," said Macklin, a Hartland native. "This office is the face of our new residential division, and is our main office headquarters. This is the hub of our residential sales, service and installation."

This new local business is truly a family affair, with Macklin's wife, Shawn, working in accounts payable and marketing. His oldest son, Riley, handles all sales and estimating. His son-in-law, Chad Gardner, is a field foreman and Shawn's aunt, Kim Piedra, is office manager.

The new showroom features the latest technology in Bryant heating and cooling products. Macklin Mechanical can also provide other brands by customer request. "We service all makes and manufacturers," said Macklin.

The office is open Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., with 24/7 service available for customers who need emergency assistance. For more information, call 810-714-9500.

'I'm a survivor'

■ Linden woman is keynote speaker for Relay for Life Survivor Ceremony

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Diane LaBree, 63, is a survivor, in every definition of the word.

Diagnosed with uterine cancer on Jan. 31, 2008, the same day her husband retired, she decided they should celebrate his milestone that day and worry about her cancer the next.

That positive attitude has served her well in every aspect of her life, from beating cancer to going back to college in her 60s to earn two associates degrees.

LaBree will be the keynote speaker for the Survivor Ceremony on Saturday, June 4 at 12 p.m., followed by a luncheon. She will join other survivors in the Survivors Lap, taking the first lap around the track to celebrate their victory over cancer, cheered on by other Relay participants.

Survivors also enjoy a catered luncheon and get a free T-shirt for their participation.

LaBree became active in Relay for Life in 2008, when her employer invited her to come out to the Relay event in Grand Blanc and walk the Survivor Lap. "I lost my parents and grandparents to cancer," said LaBree. "I walk for myself and for all of them."

She became so passionate about her involvement in Relay for Life that she has volunteered as a resource and mentor for 11 different Relay events, trained by the American Cancer Society. "I've also been the Survivor Ceremony speaker for the county-wide Relay for Life kick-off," she said.

LaBree is also a strong advocate for early detection of cancer, knowing that's what saved her own life. "Mine was caught very early," she said. "The minute I had a symptom (post-menopausal spotting), I went to the doctor. The earlier you catch it, the better your chance at a positive outcome. Early detection is key."

For more information about Survivorship activities at Relay, contact LaBree via email: mrsturtle5@charter.net.

Diane LaBree of Linden is not only a cancer survivor, but also a recent college graduate with two associate degrees.

THE PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

(Never been known to fail). Oh most beautiful flower of Mount Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, blessed mother of the son of God, Immaculate Virgin. Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the sea, help me and show me you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth. I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity. HOUSE PLAN OF THE WEEK

Paisley
First Floor	908 sq.ft.
Second Floor	613 sq.ft.
Living Area	1521 sq. ft.
Garage	502 sq. ft.
Dimensions	40' x 48'

Paisley PLAN 30-852
Multipaned windows, decorative corbels and shake-textured gable ends give a comfortably familiar country-style look to the otherwise contemporary Paisley. Slender porch posts add to the ambience. Its compact design makes this four-bedroom home economical to build, as well as to heat and maintain. Entering, you step into a small but lofty two-story entry. During daylight hours, this stairway is naturally illuminated by a good-sized window on the second level.

1919-2016

Dorathy Pepper Fagan - age 96, of Kissimmee, FL, formerly of Holly, died peacefully Friday, March 18, 2016 at Celebration Hospital, Celebration, FL. The daughter of Dora Sievers and Louis Pepper. Dorathy Ann Pepper Fagan was born in Libertyville, IL, on March 28, 1919. She attended Illinois and Wisconsin schools, graduated from Whitewater State Teachers College in 1940 and received her master's degree from the University of Michigan. Dottie, US Navy Ensign, met her future husband, Robert William "Bill" Fagan, USMC Air Corps, when they were both stationed at Santa Barbara. They were married in Santa Barbara in 1945 and would spend the next 62 years working together in education and business. Dottie taught in Fenton for a year and then at Holly High School, in the business department until 1974. Dottie was well known for her smile, her love of golf, reading, bridge, needlework and gardening. She had an inquisitive mind, a competitive spirit, a ready smile and a love of good company. She and Bill traveled extensively with Nomads and Elder Hostel (Road Scholar) and to reunions with military groups, making lifelong friendships with people from all over the world. Winters were spent in Myrtle Beach and then in Kissimmee, FL, with Bill and new friends. In 2008 Dottie moved to Good Samaritan Village, Kissimmee, FL, where she enjoyed card games with friends, trips, reading, watching football, basketball and golf on TV, and communicating with friends on the phone and email. Thanks also to the "wonderful" people at Celebration Hospital and the "marvelous" Dr. Hussaini! Memorial services will be held at 2 PM Sunday, June 5, 2016 at the Dryer Funeral Home, Holly. Military honors and burial will follow at Hadley Cemetery, Holly. Visitation will be from 1-2 PM before the service. After a false accusation, aunt now wants to move on

DEAR AMY:

A while back, an heirloom necklace of mine went missing. The only person to visit me recently had been my adult niece. I asked my niece why she took my necklace, and told her to return it immediately. My niece kept denying she had even seen my necklace. I was furious with her for lying to me. I went to the police and pressed charges against her for stealing. A few weeks later I found my necklace in the pocket of a coat I had forgotten about. I had wrongfully accused my niece of stealing from me and had pressed charges against her. I'm ashamed to admit that I also insulted her as a parent, her young children and blasted her on several social media sites during those weeks. We live in a small tight-knit community, so word traveled quickly. I was told by another family member that my niece told them she could not even go to the store now without getting dirty looks. I have, of course, dropped all charges against her and told her I made a mistake. I said, "Let's put this ugly incident behind us and forget it happened." My niece will not speak to me. Her husband told me that my accusations have caused my niece a great deal of anxiety and she's been sleeping poorly, and having migraines because of what happened. I just want everything back to how it was before all of this. A close friend suggested that since I publicly humiliated my niece, a public apology would be a good place to start. I'm ready to drop the whole incident and forget it ever happened, and see no need in continuing to refer back to it. — Older but Not Wiser

DEAR OLDER:

You didn't hesitate to press charges and then spread this falsehood through social media and the community. So I guess your, "Let's forget this whole thing happened" philosophy only kicked in when you were at risk of embarrassing yourself. Yes, you should apologize publicly. What you shouldn't do is to repeat the false accusation when you make your apology. [I am often surprised at how often political candidates (for example) repeat alleged falsehoods before refuting them.] So yes, you should apologize to your niece personally and privately, and while you are doing so, ask her how she would like you to word your public apology. Then — if you're lucky — everyone involved might be able to forget the whole thing happened, but I doubt it.

DEAR AMY:

"Wedding Worried" described her irritation at being her friend's maid of honor. I did this, too. I was a lightning rod for my bride's irritation about everything, and everything irritated her. On the day of the wedding, she was awful. Everything went off as planned, and afterward she said she didn't know why, but I irritated her during that time. She said she was sorry for how she behaved. We're still friends. — J

DEAR J:

Being a maid of honor is a tricky and thankless form of friendship hellfire. At least you got thanked.

Pancreatitis requires total abstinence

DEAR DR. ROACH:

I went to the emergency ward this weekend with severe chest pains and bloating. I was sure I was having a heart attack. After tests, a CT scan revealed I had pancreatitis (they mentioned a number 222 for some enzyme or something); also, my potassium was low and sodium was critically low, at 113. I am 62, 5 feet, 9 inches tall and weigh 210; I have Type 2 diabetes with an A1C of 6.7 and high blood pressure. I was discharged after four days with no restrictions other than to eat light and refrain from alcohol 100 percent for the rest of my life to avoid another occurrence. I had never heard of pancreatitis, and it was devastating news to me. I make wine, and have for years. I do not drink anything except wine, and the thought of never being able to drink again is very disturbing. Is there a possibility that I may be able to drink wine again in the future? The doctor's assessment seemed pretty harsh to me. — J.C.

ANSWER:

Acute pancreatitis is an inflammation of the pancreas, an organ that makes digestive enzymes and insulin. Acute pancreatitis can be very severe, even life-threatening on occasion. There are many causes, but the most common in North America are gallstones and alcohol. The diagnosis is made from the history and physical exam, and an elevated pancreas enzyme level, usually amylase or lipase. These often are elevated into the thousand range. A CT scan also can help confirm the diagnosis. Before concluding that alcohol is the cause of the pancreatitis, it's important to make sure there is nothing blocking the pancreatic and common bile duct, such as a stone or tumor. The CT scan is good, but if there is doubt, an endoscopy may need to be performed. If your doctor determined that the cause is alcohol, then I'm afraid I have to agree that no amount of alcohol is safe. Drinking even modest amounts of wine, even months or years later, could bring about pancreatitis again. In addition to the pain and suffering that go with an episode, the more episodes of acute pancreatitis you have, the more likely you are to develop chronic pancreatitis (with constant pain), pancreatic insufficiency (leading to inability to properly digest food) and worsen your diabetes.

Strawberry Lemon Cream Cheese Bars

The perfect summer dessert!

DIRECTIONS:

- Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Lightly grease an 8 x 8 inch pan with cooking spray.
- In the bowl of a food processor (or in a medium mixing bowl if not using a food processor), lightly pulse the all-purpose flour, whole-wheat pastry flour, powdered sugar, 1/4 teaspoon lemon zest, and salt. Add butter pieces and pulse just until mixture is crumbly and resembles coarse cornmeal. (If not using a food processor, cut butter pieces into the dry ingredients with a fork or pastry blender.) The mixture will feel dry to the touch. Press the mixture onto bottom of the prepared pan. Bake 20 to 22 minutes, until lightly browned. Set aside to cool for at least 15 minutes.
- Meanwhile, in the bowl of a standing mixer fitted with the paddle attachment (or a large mixing bowl), beat together the cream cheese, Greek yogurt, and granulated sugar until smooth. Add the egg and beat just until blended. Mix in the fresh lemon juice, cornstarch, vanilla, and remaining 1/4 teaspoon lemon zest. Beat well.
- Spread preserves over the cooled shortbread. Pour the cream cheese mixture over preserves, spreading to edges. Bake an additional 28 to 32 minutes, or until the cheesecake appears set on top and only jiggles slightly when you wiggle the pan. Let cool on a wire rack for 1 hour. Cover and chill 4 to 8 hours. Cut into bars and garnish with whipped cream and fresh strawberry slices.
- Store leftover lemon cream cheese bars in an airtight container in the refrigerator for up to two days. To freeze, leave bars ungarnished, wrap tightly in a double layer of plastic, and freeze for up to 1 month. Let thaw in the refrigerator, then top with fruit just before serving.
