Don't like your hair? Blame your parents

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

You're either thanking your mom and dad for your golden tresses, or wishing you hadn't inherited your mom's coarse, frizzy hair or your dad's receding hairline.

Either way, your hair says a lot about where you came from and who you are today. Although your hair characteristics may seem to physically favor one side over the other, you get the same amount of genetic information from both parents, according to genetics.thetech.org.

For each hair trait — texture, color, hairline, etc. — both parents contribute equally, four hair-color genes for a total of eight.

In general, dark hair is dominant over light. But parents can pass on a number of ranges of shades, depending on the pigments they have in their hair and how they mix.

A dark brown pigment, eumelanin, can result in light blonde hair in small amounts, or produce black hair, in large amounts with tightly packed

■ Justin Murphy earns bronze medals at Junior Olympics National Championships

By Grant Cislo

intgern@tctimes.com; 810-210-6491

Justin Murphy, 19, a senior set to graduate this Sunday from Fenton High School, competed at the 2016 Men's Gymnastics Junior Olympics National Championships in May. The event took place in Battle Creek.

This was Murphy's fifth time competing in the championships. He placed sixth overall this year while earning a bronze medal in both the pommel horse and vault as well.

"I've been at the last four Junior Olympic Championships. Freshmen year I was just happy to be there, happy to qualify," Murphy said. "My sophomore year I wanted to try to make the finals and I was successful in one event.

"I did alright, I did not place too high,

CHAMPION IMAGES PHOTOGRAPHY

Fenton High School graduate Justin Murphy will focus on the pommel horse and vault, in addition to his studies at the University of Michigan this fall.

it was my first time making day two of the event finals. Junior year unfortunately, on my first day I got hurt. I broke my ankle which required surgery, so I did not really get to see how I would have done."

Murphy said he was finally able to be healthy around state championships. "I was second in the state. I had a great nationals and was able to finish sixth in the country," he said.

The pommel horse and vault are two of Murphy's best events. The pommel horse and vault will be the two events that he will focus on at the University of Michigan.

"Michigan has always been number one on my list. It's a great academic school, it's close to home, and I just think it gives me the best opportunity both athletically and academically to succeed," said Murphy.

He will study business and hopes to get into the Ross School of Business. He would like to go onto law school as well.

Murphy loves the challenge that gymnastics brings. It allows him to have an opportunity to constantly learn new skills while at the same time perfecting certain skill sets.

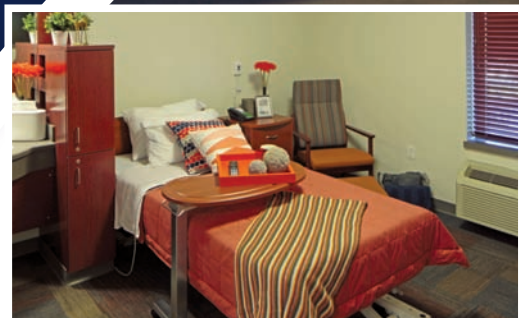

One piece of advice Murphy would like to share with young inspiring gymnasts is to always believe in yourself. "If you're able to believe in yourself then you can accomplish anything you want as long as you work hard, but it has to come from that belief in yourself," said Murphy.

HAIRSTYLES

SINCE THE '50S

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

One identifiable aspect of any decade is the most popular hairstyles. Some are short and curly, some are straight and long, and some are coming back in style while some have never left.

Men's hairstyles haven't changed as much as women's, but everyone remembers the mullet.

Here are popular hairstyles since the 1950s.

Source: instyle.com, elle.com

Rita Hayworth

Cher

Farrah Fawcett

Sara Jessica Parker

Jennifer Aniston

Miley Cyrus

Blake Lively

1950s

For women, the loose curls were popular, made famous by Rita Hayworth during the 40s and 50s.

For men, Elvis' style was in, with his tight on the sides and tall on top look.

1960s

The end of the '50s and most of the '60s were all about the flip, structured curls, the beehive and anything that fell in between. The most popular, however, was the short, above-the-brow fringe that Audrey Hepburn made famous.

For men, it was the Beatles-inspired shoulder-length shaggy hair.

1970s

Everything changed in the '70s with Priscilla Presley's voluminous blowout, and Cher's perfectly-straight long hairstyle.

Farrah Fawcett's long, big waves, often called the "shag" haircut, were a hit in the '70s as well, inspiring women to grow their hair out and try for those big waves.

For men, the '70s was an acceptable time to have more facial hair.

1980s

In the '80s, bigger was better and hair was no exception. Sarah Jessica Parker's voluminous ringlets with a mini-pooch were a hit.

For men in the '80s, the slicked-back, businessman look became popular.

1990s

When Jennifer Aniston cut her hair for the show "Friends," her hairstyle, known as "The Rachel," became as popular as the hit show.

The 90s grunge era for men boasted longer hair that's helpful when head banging to music.

2000s

Some speculate that Meg Ryan's short shaggy layers with pale highlights were inspired by "The Rachel." The look was a hit.

For men in the early 2000s, the spiky coiffeur look took the crown as the most popular men's hairstyle, along with taking longer than their female counterparts to do their hair in front of the mirror.

2010s

It's too early to pick the defining hairstyle of this current decade, but Miley Cyrus' short cut with blunt bangs are in the running, along with long, wavy curls and perfectly straight, long hair.

During this decade for men, the man bun has become widely accepted in pop culture, along with a longer-on-top, short-on-the-sides cut.

Q: What could be wrong with my truck? It won't start up and it is spitting gas out of the front manifold. - Sydney

A: Sydney, I would need to know more information about your truck. For example year, make, model, and engine size. However, I have seen this type of problem on several Chevrolet and GMC model trucks with a 4.3 vortec motor. It usually ends up being leaky fuel lines or fuel pressure regulator under the upper intake manifold. If this is the case, you should replace both while you are in there. This way you don't have to open it up again if the part that is not leaking goes bad after you repair the current leaking part.

IN YOUR LIFE

■ From lighted LED golf balls to apparel and gift cards — here are the latest gadgets

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

With golf being such a popular sport, it's likely you have golfers in your own family who would appreciate being remembered on Father's Day with something other than a tie or aftershave.

Like so many of America's 24 million golfers, your husband, dad or grandpa probably enjoys the smell of fresh cut fairways, the crisp sound of a well-placed shot and the taste of a cold drink after the round. The fact that he's a golfer opens up a whole new world of possibilities for gifts, especially this coming Father's Day.

The first gift idea that comes to mind is to invite your golfing husband, father or grandfather for a day out on the links, either on Father's Day, June 19 or on another day of your choice. You can make an entire day of celebration with a barbecue afterward, enjoying the fellowship of family and good food.

Your present could also be a gift certificate to a favorite golf course, or one that your guy would love to play, but hasn't yet.

Here are a few other golfing gift ideas in different price ranges:

$50 and under

Think golf balls, LED lighted golf balls for a late evening round of golf, golf shirts or shorts, head covers, personalized club links, trunk storage, putting mat, golf gift basket with treats and snacks, Swiss Army golf tool, to name a few

$50 to $100

You can buy a certificate for a pro lesson for your favorite golfer, wireless Bluetooth speakers for enjoying your playlist, a club fitting session, putting laser, golf practice net, and more.

Over $100

This is the price point for many fun, techie-type golfing gifts, from laser rangefinders ($300 on up) to GPS range-finder watches ($125 on up), golf shoes like the Nike TW'14 worn by Tiger Woods at the Players ($130 and up), Sky-Pro Swing Trainer from SkyGolf (about $150), among others.

Over $500

Think about a dream golfing trip to North Carolina, a trip to the Masters in Atlanta, Georgia, or another over-the-top golf experience. There are many dream golf destinations in Michigan, too — from Treetops Resorts in Gaylord to the Inn at Bay Harbor in Petoskey.

Dad, we love you!

■ Show the men in your life that you appreciate them this Father's Day

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Father's Day is a week away and you don't want to wait any longer to get the dad in your life something special.

On Sunday, June 19, show your father or husband that you appreciate them with a thoughtful gift. Instead of ordering gifts online, shop local to help your community.

Kevin Begola, owner of Bridge Street Exchange, said, "I always tell people to buy him something he wouldn't buy himself."

"I think a lot of guys have a hard time spending money on personal things they think they just don't need or maybe something nice that they wouldn't normally buy."

Father's Day is the biggest time of the year for Bridge Street Exchange other than Christmas.

"We really specialize in unique things," he said, adding that their clothing sells well but a lot of gift items are also popular.

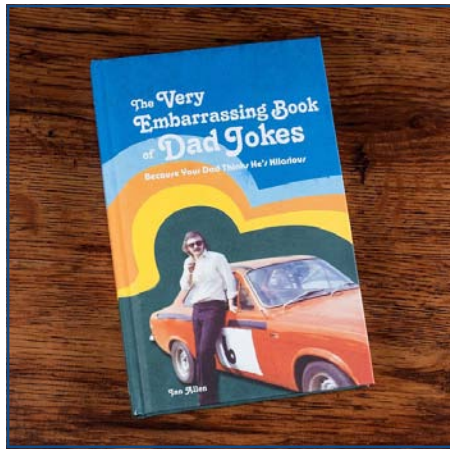

Begola was surprised last year when they sold many expensive watches for the holiday. The shaving creams, after shaves, and cologne are also popular Father's Day gift ideas.

Titanium-Buzz, Begola's online ring company, is known for their wedding rings but people also buy rings in Bridge Street Exchange during this time of the year. "A lady bought a ring for her husband a few days ago," he said.

At Taylor Hardware in Fenton, Operations Manager Brian Edwards said, "We've got all kinds of stuff for men." They have Milwaukee power tools, lawn mowers, and other power equipment, like chainsaws.

"I would say specifically for Father's Day, tools would be the number one thing," Edwards said.

Maghan Placek, computer-aided designer for Sawyer Jewelers, said the store "definitely" gets busier for Father's Day.

WWW.GETTINGPERSONAL.COM

This book of dad jokes would make for a hilarious Father's Day gift idea.

"We do a lot of the M-clip, the money clips," she said. "They can be engraved, customized."

They also sell many crocodile leather wallets that have radio frequency identification (RFID), which helps protect against identify theft.

"The RFID block any sort of signals that are trying to steal any kind of information," she said.

Sawyer's is the only company in the area that sells Masonic jewelry, which Placek said is very popular with the older generations.

"We do Citizen watches, which don't need batteries. They are solar powered," she said. "One thing not many people know is that once you change the battery in a watch, the watch is no longer waterproof or resistant."

Medawar Jewelers in Fenton also has numerous gift ideas. "Watches are always great gifts for dads," said assistant manager Marie Marsh. They sell many cross necklaces and dog-tag style necklaces during this time of the year, along with bracelets and rings. They even have Detroit Tigers themed jewelry.

Marsh said the most popular Father's Day items are watches, money clips, tie bars, and cufflinks.

"Cufflinks are really hot this year," said owner Ronny Medawar. "We sell more watches than anything."

“I think a lot of guys have a hard time spending money on personal things they think they just don't need.”

More gift ideas

Another popular Father's Day gift idea is getting tickets to a Detroit Tigers baseball game. The Tigers might not be having a spectacular season, but that doesn't mean you can't have a fun time at a game.

Tickets to a concert for his favorite band would also be a fun, family activity.

If your dad likes playing euchre or poker, he would enjoy personalized playing cards. You can order cards printed with family pictures, dog pictures, or pictures of your dad from Goin' Postal in Fenton.

Beer is a popular drink during summer, and your husband or dad would enjoy drinking his favorite kind that can be found at many local retailers and breweries.

Books also make a great gift for anyone. If your dad frequently watches Fox News, Bill O'Reilly's new book "The Day the President Was Shot," about the attempted assassination of Ronald Reagan, comes out June 21 and is available for preorder at Fenton's Open Book.

The book, "The Very Embarrassing Book of Dad Jokes: Because Your Dad Thinks He's Hilarious" would be a great gift for any dad who likes to make jokes. This can also be pre-ordered at Fenton's Open Book.

■ WE WILL NEVER know what actually happened to create the Flint water debacle. The only thing we know for sure is that we will have to pay for it.

■ I STILL BELIEVE a bathroom for 'transgenders only' is the way to go. That should not bother those folks. This country has bigger problems to solve don't you think?

■ DOES EVERYONE REALIZE that people who live in Flint cannot sell their homes? My friend retired so she could return home to family in Shreveport, LA. Now she can never leave Flint. Think about that happening to you.

■ CONSERVATIVE AND LIBERAL are terms created by the media. Many of us are in between and support concepts from either side. What are we called?

■ LIBERALS ARE FUNNY. They cry about killing an animal endangering a human life but say nothing about the thousands of children aborted and killed every year.

■ WHICH IS WORSE, liar or bully? Of course, the liar, as they will continue that forever as it can't be cured. For the bully, there's always going to be someone bigger and stronger to keep them in line.

■ YOU CAN AFFORD to build the parking lot but it's definitely cheaper to have the DDA build it. City politics at its best.

pigment granules. People with large amounts of pheomelanin have red hair, ranging from “strawberry blonde” to bright red to reddish brown. Very blond hair has the least amount of pigment and the fewest pigment granules spaced farthest apart.

Your hair’s texture, straight, wavy or curly, as well as the thickness of individual strands of hair, is determined by multiple genes. Different genes influence hair texture and thickness in people of different ethnic backgrounds. It is the interaction among these genes, not any single gene, that determines the character of your hair.

People with fine hair are always looking for ways to add volume and people with coarse hair are always trying to “tame their mane” and keep the frizzies at bay. “The ideal hair texture seems to be somewhere in the middle,” said Brigitte Baker, master stylist at Serendipity Wellness Spa in Linden.

It is not only your genetics that can influence your hair texture and thickness. Hormones, certain medications and chemicals, such as hair relaxers, can alter the characteristics of a person’s hair. Hair texture and thickness can also change with age.

SUMMARY

■ Your hair is either your “crowning glory” or a “mane to be tamed,” and you have genetics from your parents to thank or blame.

Baker suggests regular hair cuts to keep split ends at bay and shampooing every three days to maintain your mane’s natural oils. Your hair grows at an average rate of one-quarter to one-half inch a month, so it requires patience if you’re trying to grow it out. Still, it’s important not to skimp on regular hair cuts and trims.

“If you don’t get your hair trimmed often enough, we end up having to take off more length because of the damaged split ends,” said Baker. “Also, don’t overdo chemical treatment, because that can really damage your hair.”

Today’s high-tech color, relaxers, flat irons, Brazilian Blow Outs, extensions and other treatments can change your hair from brown to blonde or frizzy to straight, but they’re all temporary fixes.

“To straighten your hair, you have to use heat, either a flat iron or a round brush and blow dry,” said Baker. “Relaxers also involve heat and chemicals, which can be very damaging to your hair month after month. The Brazilian Blow Out is less damaging because it combines keratin with amino acids rather than chemicals.”

Keratin is a protein that is naturally in your hair, so keratin-based treatments are more restorative than damaging. Smoothing treatments usually last nine to 12 weeks and cut drying time in half, another big advantage for people with coarse, curly or wavy hair.

“Everyone wants hair they can’t have. That’s the biggest problem,” said Baker.

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | TIM JAGIELO

While stylists still use foil to color hair, the latest trend is to brush color on, for a more artistic look.

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | TIM JAGIELO

The chemicals used to color hair have improved, according to Baker.

SHADES OF GRAY

If you want to see how well you’ll sport your own gray hair someday, just look at your parents. They are the best indicators for when your hair will turn gray and whether it will be a beautiful silver mane or less distinct salt and pepper.

Graying is age-related. As we age, hair follicles produce less melanin, the pigment that gives your hair its hue. Naturally occurring hydrogen peroxide can also build up in the hair, bleaching the color.

Typically, Caucasians start going gray in their mid-30s, Asians in their late 30s and African-Americans in their mid-40s, according to WebMd.com. Half of all people have a significant amount of gray hair by the time they reach 50.

“People with dark hair tend to get gray hair faster than soft blondes and browns,” said Brigitte Baker, master stylist at Serendipity Wellness Spa in Linden. “Gray also blends in better with blonde hair, so it doesn’t show as much.”

A Caucasian is considered to be prematurely gray if his or her hair turns gray by age 20.

You can choose to embrace the gray with a sleek new cut and highlights to make the transition, or you can conceal the gray with highlights, permanent color or spray-on airbrush hair makeup.

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | TIM JAGIELO

It can take two hours for a coloring session, from start to finish.

Redheads

are a unique few

BY VERA HOGAN

If you have red hair, you are a rare breed. Less than 2 percent of the world's population has red hair. Of the approximate 7.4 billion people on earth, that's approximately 140 million redheads.

Here are some interesting points about natural red hair and those who have it:

- Red hair is a genetic mutation. Both parents must be carriers of the mutated MC1R gene to be able to produce red-haired children, of which there is a 25-percent chance if they don't have red hair themselves.

- Scotland boasts the highest percentage of natural redheads at 13 percent. Ireland comes in second with 10 percent.

- Red hair can occur in any ethnicity. It occurs more frequently (2 to 6 percent) in people of northern or western European ancestry, and less frequently in other populations.

- It is a real chore to try and dye red hair. Because it holds its pigment tighter than any other hair color, red strands need to have their pigment stripped before being dyed by bleaching which, of course, damages the hair.

- Each strand of red hair is generally thicker than other shades, which compensates for the fact that redheads have less hair. Redheads are said to have on average 90,000 strands, while blondes have 110,000, and brunettes have 140,000.

- Red hair will never turn gray. It simply fades to white via rose gold when the time comes.

- Blue eyes and red hair forms the rarest combo on earth. Most (natural) redheads will have brown eyes, followed by hazel or green shades.

- Redheads can change temperature quicker because, according to research, they are more sensitive to hot and cold pain. It has nothing to do with their mythical "fiery temperament."

- Redheads are more likely to develop skin cancer. Because of their commonly fair skin and sensitivity to ultraviolet light, redheads are more likely to develop skin cancer. The International Journal of Cancer reported in 2010 that natural redheads are approximately two and a half times as likely to develop the dangerous cancer as people with other hair colors.

- Redheads can produce their own Vitamin D. They can't sufficiently absorb Vitamin D because it's down to their lower melanin-concentration. Redheads internally produce their own Vitamin D when they're exposed to low light conditions.

- People with red hair are more likely to be left-handed. Recessive traits often happen in pairs so commonly people with the gene for red hair also possess the trait for left-handedness.

- Climate change is threatening the gene. Given that red hair doesn't adapt to warm climates, the gene could, at some point, become extinct.

Friend’s meals are stretching bounds of hospitality

DEAR AMY: I have been “best friends” with a never-married woman for 25 years. She does not like to cook and, consequently, eats poorly. My husband and I invite her to join us for a meal at least once a week, if not more. We enjoy her company and I know she gets lonely. She is very well-off financially, which brings me to my question: How can I stop feeling resentful that she never reciprocates by occasionally treating us to a meal out? Not only does she never host or treat us, but she never even brings a bottle of wine to share when she dines at our house. A couple of years ago she offered to pay for a steak dinner (that we had invited her to) at a restaurant. When the bill arrived, she gave my husband money for the steaks and we ended up paying the bar tab (she also drank). I feel petty parsing our friendship in this way, but I’m starting to “keep score” and I don’t like that.

to bring over a bottle of wine, a dessert or ingredients for her favorite meal. This only requires that you be brave enough to ask for what you want. Assign a job — whether it is meal prep or cleaning up. This would engage her more in your effort (and might teach her some kitchen skills). Cut in half the number of dinners you host for her (this should cut your resentment in half). Alternatively, you can simply choose to always be generous. Understand and accept that this is built in to your relationship with this person, and simply make a decision to feel good about it.

Your generosity is something laudable about you, and so you should celebrate it.

DEAR AMY: I would like to weigh in on your terrible advice in response to “No More Letters,” whose parents read letters she had written to her grandmother (after the grandmother’s death). That is like reading a diary! It is a terrible breach of privacy. — Appalled

DEAR APPALLED: Actually, it is not like reading a diary. A letter sent to someone becomes the recipient’s property. I agree with you (and others) that the parents should not have read these letters, but unlike others, I understand the impulse to do this. I’m glad the parents returned the letters to their daughter.

Losing weight, exercise best options to delay surgery

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a female in my 60s, and for the past couple of months I have been having some discomfort and swelling in my right knee. I am slightly overweight and have osteoarthritis. I have no pain when walking, but when leaning over, I get a tight pain in the front of the leg, below the knee. I saw my orthopedic doctor, who told me that the cartilage is worn away, and said that I would need a knee replacement. I was given a cortisone shot, which helped the pain. Would losing weight help me avoid surgery? I take an anti-inflammatory and rubbed Bengay on the knee, which helped. I went for another opinion from a second orthopedic surgeon, had more X-rays taken and was given the same diagnosis. Is there anything more I can do to avoid having a knee replacement soon? — C.W.

tion. However, there are some things you can do to delay the need for surgery, as well as to feel better. Losing weight is important, if you are carrying more than you should. Your body weight is multiplied when you are going up and down stairs, so losing even a few pounds means much less pressure inside the knee. Anti-inflammatories and Tylenol reduce pain but don’t affect the progression of disease. Bengay, topical anti-inflammatories and capsaicin creams help some people. Steroid injections are a good option for some: Hyaluronic acid shots, such as Synvisc, help many as well. Exercise, however, definitely improves both pain and function. Walking a little bit farther each day means being able to walk still more without pain. A joint-replacement surgery shouldn’t be undertaken lightly. Not everybody has a good outcome, and an infection in an artificial joint can be devastating. However, it has been my experience that most people who have gotten a joint replacement wish they had done so sooner, so don’t suffer for too long if these treatments aren’t helping. The arthritis booklet discusses osteoarthritis, along with rheumatoid arthritis and lupus.

ANSWER: Osteoarthritis of the knee can cause permanent loss of the cartilage. Once the cartilage is gone, the knee replacement is by far the best option to reduce pain and improve func-
