We asked some Facebook friends locally and from around the country to share their thoughts on men versus women drivers.

"That's kind of a hard question to answer," said Donna Zeman of Niles, Illinois. "With everyone having cell phones today, there are just as many men on their phones as there are women while driving, and it doesn't matter that Fenton Twp. — The sixth-annual FirstTry Triathlon was held at Byram Lake's Clover Beach (Linden County Park) in Fenton Township on Saturday. This year's event saw 193 participants come out and compete.

This race featured a wide variety of people, from ages 10-68, but a challenged athlete competed as well. Angel Irvin of Lansing came out to compete in this year's race. Irvin, 26, is a victim of cerebral palsy and is unable to use her legs.

"She is the one that makes sure I do not drown or crash my bike. She is my cheerleader. She did the whole thing with me as nuts as that is," said Irvin. "I like competing in triathlons because it proves that I can be physical even though I have to do it from a wheelchair."

This was Irvin's first triathlon. She plans to compete in this triathlon next year as well as at Hawk Island — a triathlon that takes place at the Hawk Island County Park in Lansing.

The triathlon consists of three different courses — swimming, biking, and running. The race starts with a 300-yard swim in Byram Lake, transitioning into a 9.1-mile bike loop and then finishes with a 2-mile run. The event started with the participants swimming out and back in Byram Lake and ended across the street from the beach parking lot where the participants ran to cross the finish line.

People from all over the state came to compete with many local citizens competing as well. This year's first place overall winner in both the FirstTry and FastTry event was Randall Wood of West Olive with a time of 37:16.1.

Wood, 35, has competed in many triathlons in the past and drove to Linden from the west side of the state. Wood was a fan of this year's triathlon and plans to participate in next year's event as well.

"This was cool, it is a great venue," said Wood.

Fenton native Lisa Veneziano competed in this year's triathlon and was successful for yet another year. Veneziano, 51, was a FastTry participant and was the first-place female overall winner and placed 11th overall with a time of 46:53.9.

"I'm more a runner than anything, so I've started to do more triathlons just to challenge myself to do something out of my comfort zone because like I said, I am not a swimmer," said Veneziano.

Veneziano said she absolutely plans to participate next year. She believes it is a good cause, it's a hometown race, and it gets people out there to try something they are not used to.

Fenton also had a couple of residents compete for their first time. Ann Henley, 51 and Suzie Cherney, 42 both were First-Try participants in this year's race.

Cherney finished with a time of 102:57.2 and Henley finished at 103:43.9.

Cherney and Henley both set goals of finishing the race under an hour and a half and they did just that.

"I have always wanted to do a triathlon and I like the idea of doing three things instead of just running," said Cherney.

Other participants also shared their FirstTry Triathlon experiences.

Lake Orion resident Judith Finneren participated and it was her first time competing in a triathlon. Her motivation to compete was her daughter, who has participated in many triathlons and hopes to one day compete in the IRONMAN World Championship in Kona, Hawaii.

Finneren's husband was also part of her motivation. Finneren's husband was killed in a biking accident in 2011. "He was the real inspiration. Tomorrow is Father's Day and this was for him," she said.

In addition, a father-daughter duo competed in the event as well. Caydence and Doug Watkins of Highland finished the race together.

For more information on the race, including participants' times and results, visit FirstTryTriathlon.com.

A tri-county area couple was preparing for the worst on Dec. 31, 1999 because of the potential threat of global chaos.

Months and years ahead of the year 2000's arrival, people were warned of the potentially devastating effects of Y2K's possible computer glitches.

This couple, who asked to remain anonymous, built a 15- by 30-foot bomb shelter addition to their home, with 1-foot thick walls and ceilings, to prepare for Y2K. They began to store huge amounts of food, water and other necessities in the shelter, in case they would have to live in survival mode for several months.

While Y2K came and went without global disaster, the experience created for this couple a mindset for "doomsday prep," planning for a future apocalypse.

"We were never really scared," said the woman. "We were more excited. I was actually hoping something would happen. It was pretty disappointing."

Sixteen years later, this couple has become more involved than ever in storing food, cooking/storage equipment and medical supplies in preparation for a future apocalypse. My aching back!

■Some surprising things that cause back pain

By Vera Hogan

vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

Men may think it's no big deal to sport a big fat, fully stuffed wallet in their back pocket. What they may not know, however, is that wad could be what's causing their backache.

When they sit on that wallet, one buttock is slightly higher than the other. Over time, this can cause pelvic misalignment and spinal twisting that can lead to chronic back pain.

Flip-flops may be comfy footwear in the summertime (and covers you for that "no shirt, no shoes, no serve" policy), but when it comes to the strain on your back — you'd be better off walking barefoot.

These casual slip-ons give almost no support. The thin soles are a common cause of heel and arch problems. The lack of heel support forces people to take shorter steps and to scrunch up their toes to keep the flip-flops on. both of which can lead to pain in the knees, hips and lower back.

Doing so might "double your pleasure, double your fun," but chewing gum can cause back pain. Too much jaw action stresses the temporomandibular (jaw) joint, which stresses the muscles throughout your back, leading to tension and pain.

When "things aren't moving," neither are you. Constipation is a common cause of back pain. A lack of regular bowel movements causes buildups of inflammatory wastes that irritate the large intestine, which in ave you ever noticed how much people are like trees? Read on and see if you agree with me that trees and humans have a lot more in common than most people realize.

If I Were King...

Random Royal Thoughts

Let's start with a small town — any small town. Most likely it began a couple of hundred years ago when one or more people chose to settle in a particular location. Soon, a structure of some sort appeared on the landscape. As time passed, this building attracted travelers and other settlers who stopped and visited and, in some cases, stayed. Over time the original building expanded, others were added and eventually that single structure evolved into a village, a town or a city.

Now think about the forest or woods near your home. One day, thousands of years ago, a single tiny tree burst out of the ground. As time passed, the tree grew and its fruit fell to the ground, which reproduced more trees. This small grove of trees then attracted birds and other wildlife who carried the seeds of other trees and bushes. Eventually this single tree evolved into a forest.

As these towns and forests grow larger, the uncanny similarities between the individual residents of each becomes more obvious. For example:

Oak trees — Don't we all know a person that, like an oak, is immovable and iron-willed, the personification of strength and character — a model for all to emu-

Fruit trees — Those subdivisions you see popping up everywhere — they are the human equivalent of orchards. Much like young fruit trees, the homes are basically identical in size and appearance, symmetrically positioned in a logical, but predictable, pattern.

Weeping Willows — That whiny, weak person that breaks down under any kind of strain? The human equivalent of Weeping Willows.

Maples — An attractive, colorful species found in all but the harshest climates. It's sturdy appearance belies a weak interior that tends to snap under undue pressure. Sadly, the most common species of both man and tree.

Evergreens — The human equivalent

We get to experience of African-Amerthe beauty icans. While strikingly different at of four first glance, a closer distinct inspection reveals that beneath their seasons outward appearsometimes ance they are basically identical to all all in one the other species. day. 77

Ornamental trees — Like so many of the celebrities we venerate in today's world (models, film stars) they really contribute nothing of value - no wood, no fruit, no shade, no shelter for birds, insects or animals — their only value lies in their appearance.

Trees and humans also share some personality traits. Some trees dominate through sheer size, robbing smaller trees of lifegiving sunlight. Others use their wits, such as the Black Walnut, whose fallen fruit kills the vegetation (competition) below it. Don't we all know people with similar character-

My point is that we can learn much about coexistence from nature and the ecosystem for instance nesting birds that keep their host tree healthy by eating disease-causing insects. Or the regenerating seeds of fruitbearing trees and bushes that are spread through the fur, feathers and excrement of the birds and animals they feed — nature's entire ecosystem is designed to work together for the betterment of all.

Seems to me there's a lesson to be learned in there somewhere.

A SANDERS-STYLE political revolution and a vote for Clinton are incompatible. Hillary is a corporate, big-money politician — the antithesis of political change. Citizens who want change cannot justify a vote for Clinton. Honor the political revolution; vote Bernie Sanders by write-in next November.

A NEW YORK Post article (May 22, 2016), said that in just two years Hillary Clinton collected over $21 million in speaking fees. These fees were paid by Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley, Deutsche Bank, Fidelity Investments, UBS, Bank of America and several hedge fund companies. Look it up.

WHY IS IT we Americans think we owe all these illegal aliens Social Security, welfare, jobs, free food and anything and our incompetent leadership bends over and gives it to them?

THERE EXISTS A four-point plan for Hillary Clinton to increase gun control if elected. She is going to increase gun prices, background checks on good, law-abiding citizens, overturn gun ownership laws. Lastly, she is going to increase the liability for sellers and manufactures of guns.

TYPICAL RESPONSE FROM Obama. In the aftermath of another terrorist attack, his advice is that 'Americans need to examine themselves."

I WAS IN Jet's Pizza and someone noted I was a Vietnam veteran. Everyone applauded. I was deeply moved. Times have changed. Thank you so much.

A HOT-LINER wrote that the paper should be ashamed of printing the hate-filled lies and pure ignorance. Where else would liberals express their ideas? I like to read their factless name-calling. It shows the world how intelligent they really are.

FENTON CITY SHOULD wake up and install parking meters in downtown areas. The typical meter in an average downtown generates $3,400 per year. That means 200 of them would generate $680,000 per year.

ANY TRUTH TO the rumor that the city of Fenton was selling the LaJoice properties to Bernie Madoff?

AMAZINGLY AND IRONICALLY, Hillary wore a $12,500 designer jacket at a speech about inequality.

BLOOD DONORS, THANK you for the terrific blood drive on June 14 at Holly Calvary UMC in Holly. Twenty-four units were successfully harvested, which will save up to 72 Michigan lives. Our next blood drive will be Aug. 16.

IRAQ WAS A strong and stable country? Clearly, you've lost touch with reality. How/why the war started does not matter. Fact remains, Obama inherited a secure Iraq in the midst of developing an inclusive democracy. His decision to abandon Iraq inflamed Middle East instability.

ISLAMIST TERRORIST ATTACKS Americans in Orlando. Obama's responds in kind by also attacking Americans: the NRA and Republicans.

WHY IS IT liberal media is so intent on exonerating Islam? Orlando killer clearly professed allegiance to ISIS. Islamic terror doesn't fit progressive worldview of 'Islam good, America bad.' So media bends over backwards to protect Islam. Pathetic.

CONGRESS PASSING NEW 'gun control' laws provides the illusion of action. Any solution to violence must address the cause of violence - the evil that lurks in the hearts of men. The FBI investigated the Orlando shooter and failed to take action. The FBI failed to see the evil.

THIS PAST WEEK on Torrey Road, people were stopped to help a snapping turtle that had been hit. The driver who hit the snapper, texting on her phone, never stopped, and left the creature alive, suffering terribly. It could've been a child. Stop texting and driving.

SO YOU OPPOSE gun ownership? Put your money where your mouth is; post a 'Gun Free Home' sign in your yard.

The Shiawassee River has an Indian name that's said to mean "river that twists about," according to shiawassee.net. It's also said to mean "the river straight ahead," according to migenweb.org.

The Shiawassee River Heritage Water Trail is shallow in some parts and deep in others, and open for everyone. It goes through dozens of lakes, connecting Holly, Linden, Fenton, and Argentine.

People use the river for many things - kayaking, canoeing, fishing, paddleboarding, and community events.

Access points

In Holly, people can access the Shiawassee River at the Water Works Park and at Fish Lake Road.

Approximately seven miles downstream in Fenton, residents have multiple options to access the river at Strom Park, the Fenton Mill Dam Portage, behind the Fenton Community and Cultural Center, Bush Park, and the Department of Natural Resources' Lake Ponemah boat launch.

Heading another seven miles on the river west to Linden, the public has access at the Linden Mill Pond and at Bridge Street.

For eight miles more downstream to Argentine, kayakers, canoers, and paddle-boarders have a scenic view of nature and wetlands.

In Argentine, there's public access at Hogan, Rolston and McCaslin Lake roads.

At certain areas like the Fenton Mill Pond dam and Linden Mill Pond dam, people must take their kayak or paddleboard out, walk around the dam, and put it back in the river. This may be required at the Hogan Road because the bridge is low.

The access points in cities like Linden and Fenton offer a rest stop and a place to eat for kayakers.

There are two dams in the surrounding areas — one in Fenton and one in Linden.

Community events

Many organizations and communities incorporate the Shiawassee River into their yearly events, like those organized by Keepers of the Shiawassee, Friends of the Shiawassee, and Headwater Trails. All of these organizations work to keep the river clean.

The Keepers, which is part of Southern Lakes Parks & Recreation (SLPR), put a full schedule of events on the SLPR website (slpr.net) and invite residents to get involved.

On June 25, the Keepers are hosting a Fenton river cleanup day at 9 a.m. Volunteers will clear the river path of fallen trees and other debris from Bush Park to Torrey Road.

June 26 is the Keepers' biggest fundraising of the year — River Fest.
From 12 to 7 p.m., the Keepers invite the public for a fun day in the park to support the Shiawassee River.

"The Keepers of the Shiawassee annual River Fest fundraiser supports river cleanup, infrastructure improvements, water quality monitoring and a calendar of free paddling events," according to slpr.net.

WATER TRAIL

The river connects Argentine, Linden, Fenton, Holly, and so many other com-

It's a popular attraction for many water and nature activities, and it's about to become more popular.

"Last fall, the city of Linden applied for and received a grant from the U.S. National Park Service for technical assistance in planning to designate the Shiawassee River as a national water trail," said Linden Mayor David Lossing. "We have a number of partners from local governments, nonprofits, and individuals throughout the river system."

A coalition comprised of Friends of the Shiawassee River, Headwaters Trail, Keepers of the Shiawassee, Michigan State University State Extension, Shiawassee Conservation District, and local government leaders from Linden, Fenton, Owosso, Byron, Argentine, Chesaning and St. Charles has been formed under the umbrella of the Friends of the Shiawassee in an effort to have the Shiawassee River Trail deemed a national water trail.

They've been having monthly meetings in various places in Michigan.

"Our goal is to submit the application for recognition this fall," Lossing said.

Barbara Nelson-Jameson, Michigan Program Coordinator of the Rivers, Trails, and Conservation Assistance Program with the National Park Service, said a lot of work has already been accomplished from Holly to Byron, which resulted in the Shiawassee River being number seven on a list of the top 11 places to paddle in Michigan.

Lauri Elbing, executive director of the Friends of the Shiawassee River, said they have been approved for two grants from the Saginaw Bay Watershed Initiative Network (WIN).

The first grant, which is $1,000, will help the organizations update and expand the water trail map.

The map illustrates the river's path from Holly to Chesaning, and shows where people can put in a kayak or canoe, get food, and other points of public access.

"It's also something that can bring the community together because you have people socializing and enjoying and learning about the river," Elbing said. "With more people waiting to get out on the river and take part in this sport, you have many more opportunities for outfitters to establish businesses."

The second grant, which is $21,400, will help all involved entities build a coalition, develop a management plan, identify funding, and build a public website among other things.

"This is an economic development issue. For every one of these little towns, if we can advertise from the river, and let them know what's in the area, what they can walk to, then they're going to see a benefit," said Brad Jacob, Fenton City councilman and chairperson of the Keepers of the Shiawassee.

In compliance with these grants, communities also must incorporate management practices that deal with recreation opportunities, education, conservation, community support, public information, trail maintenance, and planning for the future.

- 4. The trail designation must be supported by landowners, public or private, where access points exist.

The National Park Service is assessing the level of public support for the project and if communities are committed to developing and implementing strategies to restore waterways and surrounding lands.

"The Shiawassee River has been supported through past grants from Saginaw Bay WIN for signage in Oakland County, five river launches (including the latest in Byron) and the dam removal in Corunna," said Elbing. "We couldn't be more thrilled by the support we have received from Saginaw Bay WIN and will begin working on this pivotal project to link, enhance and promote our region's greatest asset and economic engine — the Shiawassee River."

The latest news on the Exclusionary Rule

We live in a country that has laws that everyone must follow. This fact is not new and the most prominent of these laws is our United States Constitution.

Indeed whenever a new law is passed by Congress or the states, the first question to be asked must always be is it constitutional?

Among the numerous laws that exist is a very old one which is contained in the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution, which states in pertinent part that the right of the people to be secure in their person, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated. This Amendment then provides for search warrants, if there is adequate reason and along with nine others, is part of the Bill of Rights, which went into effect on Dec. 15, 1791.

In real world terms, the amendment prohibits the government from searching one's person or house without a search warrant or unless there is a legal exception.

Case law has interpreted both the amendment and the exceptions and the general rule has come to be that if the police conduct an illegal search, absent an exception, the resulting evidence is inadmissible in court as being the 'fruit of the poisonous tree.' This is language from the often-cited 1963 Supreme Court case of Wong Sun v United States.

This past Monday the Supreme Court announced its decision in Utah v Strieff, which involved whether drug evidence seized from a defendant after a police officer unlawfully stopped him should be excluded.

The facts in Strieff are simple. The police in South Salt Lake City, Utah, received an anonymous tip of drug activity at a house. They observed people coming and going from the house and when Mr. Strieff exited, a police officer stopped him without a valid reason. Subsequently it was discovered Mr. Strieff had a valid warrant for his arrest. He was then arrested, searched incident to the arrest, and drugs were found on his person.

The Supreme Court held that this evidence was admissible as the arrest warrant justified the search and the police conduct was at most negligent.

This case breaks new ground and arguably weakens the exclusionary rule. Only time will tell of its full effect.

of toilet paper, candles, batteries and matches, rounds out her doomsday preparation. "I even make my own detergent and cleaning supplies," she said. "I've also got lots of essential oils.

"The Doomsday Preppers" a TV show aired by National Geographic from 2012 to 2014, got this local woman even more interested in learning about her unusual hobby.

The series explored America's "prepping" subculture and showcased ordinary citizens who are stockpiling food, water, weapons or any other supplies they believe is necessary if basic services falter and society turns chaotic and violent.

For many 'doomsday preppers," the need for services and supplies may come from a natural disaster, financial collapse or a nuclear winter.

"We don't do guns or ammunition," she said. "Our goal is to help others who will need food and other basic necessities."

When asked about her husband's involvement in 'doomsday prepping,' she said that he mostly carries everything downstairs. "I really wasn't on board at first, but then it got kind of fun," he added.

"Everyone should be prepping," she added. "I don't care if people think it's crazy."

Water by boats and marinas may contain electric currents that could potentially electrocute people when they jump in. Using a Ground Fault Circuit Interrupter can avoid an extremely dangerous situation.

Could electrical currents injure swimmers near your dock?

■ More likely an issue on Great Lakes, but potential is there says fire chief

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

You may think you're safe from electrocution when you're swimming in a body of water when there is no threat of a thunderstorm, but you'd be mistaken.

People have died from jumping off a dock and into a body of water where there was an electrical current. This is called death by Electric Shock Drowning, or ESD, according to boatus.com.

In 2012, a brother and sister, both under the age of 14, jumped into the Lake of the Ozarks in Missouri. They started screaming, but by the time they were pulled from the lake, they were unresponsive. They were pronounced dead later at a hospital.

On the same day, the same thing happened to two boys in Tennessee. Seven other swimmers were injured near where those boys were hurt during the same day.

Authorities discovered that there was a 120-volt alternating current leak from nearby boats and docks, which electrocuted the swimmers.

Anything above 3 milliamps of electrical current running through someone's body can be painful, according to boatus.com, and anything more than 100 milliamps is usually fatal.

According to Fenton Township Fire Chief Ryan Volz, this is not a big problem in surrounding lakes because people don't run a lot of electricity down by their docks and boats.

"If they have power out there it's just run by an extension cord," he said, adding that they use circuit breakers to avoid accidents. "That stuff happens a lot more in the Great Lakes where they

Eagles fall a game short of state title

■Three-run sixth clinches Holland Christian D2 crown vs. Linden, 8-5

By David Troppens

dtroppens@tctimes.com; 810-433-6789

East Lansing — The Linden varsity baseball team's magical season came to an end, one game short of its ultimate goal Saturday while playing in the Division 2 state championship game against Holland Christian at Michigan State University's McLane Stadium.

The Eagles overcame a 4-0 deficit to take a 5-4 lead in the top of the third, but suffered from atypical defensive miscues throughout the contest, resulting in an 8-5 loss against the Maroons.

"It just was the big stage," Linden senior first baseman Chris Kitch said. "The big crowds and not knowing what to do with the ball at times hurt us. But we battled back at times.

We just didn't get the 'W."

"It wasn't a surprise," Linden starting pitcher Jack Shore said. "There are probably 400 people (the crowd was listed at 1,043 people actually) here and that can get to me on the mound. It got to everybody on the team at one point. But people made mistakes and I thought we moved on. I thought we did a good job of that. I have to give it up to Holland Christian."

The Eagles committed four errors, resulting in five unearned runs off of Shore. That said, Shore wasn't as strong as he's been all season long as well, allowing nine hits and walking two batters. Those issues resulted in a three-run second and a one-run third for Holland Christian, giving the Maroons a 4-0 lead.

However the Eagles bounced back with their crowning moment of the contest — the top of the fourth — scoring five runs. The inning started with a Brendan Buerkel walk and a Kitch single. Two outs later, the potential rally looked like might get snuffed out, but Cole Sarkon walked, loading the bases. Jamon Link followed with an RBI-single and then a wild pitch plated another run. Linden trailed 4-2. Sawyer Benge followed by reaching base on an infield throwing error, plating two runs. Linden was tied 4-all. Ryker Rivera singled and then Bates reached base on a throwing error, allowing pinch runner Spencer Rivera to score. Linden led 5-4.

"It showed we were never going to quit," Bates said about the comeback. "Their pitcher was good, but we just had to keep battling. We had great plate approaches and scored five runs. I just wish we were able to hold them."

Holland Christian tied the game in the bottom of the fourth with one run. Chris Mokma walked and eventually scored on Brandon Riemersma's RBI-single.

A look back at Linden's state tourney run

By David Troppens

dtroppens@tctimes.com; 810-433-6789

For those wanting a nice trip through memory lane over the last three weeks, here's a look back at all of Linden's tournament victories starting with the district semifinal contest at Lake Fenton High School right through Thursday's state semifinal victory.

District at Lake Fenton Semifinal

Linden 4, Powers Catholic 0

Jack Shore tossed a four-hit shutout, starting a trend during his postseason performances. He struck out 12 batters and walked just two. Offensively, Trey Link, Sawyer Benge and Ryker Rivera had RBI-singles, sparking the victory.

Another big reason for the win was another postseason trend the Eagles enjoyed — they had no errors.

Final Linden 6, Goodrich 0

As strong as Linden's pitching was all season long, something happened in the district title game that never occurred any other time during the season against Goodrich — the Martians were no hit

Lucas Marshall accomplished the feat. He needed only 99 pitches, 64 being strikes, to lead the Eagles to the team's fourth straight district championship. Marshall walked just three and hit one batter. He also struck out nine batters Linden's offense was provided by Ryker Rivera. After leaving the team in between contests to get four stitches on one of his hands, he came back in time to go 3-for-3 with five RBI. Rivera hit a two-run single in the second inning and a three-run double in the fourth inning.

Regional at Essexville-Garber Semifinal

Linden 2, Frankenmuth 1

With the contest tied at 1-all after seven innings, the Eagles collected the game-winning run in one of the strangest ways possible. With one out, Sawyer Benge, Ryker Rivera and Kevin bats hit consecutive singles, loading the bases. That brought up Brendan Buerkel with a chance to be the hero. He was when he was hit by a pitch.

Buerkel reached base twice in the fourth inning. He led off with a walk and scored Linden's first run. He also was hit by a pitch with two out later on Link produced Linden's only RBI during the contest, hitting an RBI-single in the fourth. It scored Buerkel with the Eagles' first run.

Spencer Rivera was used as a pinch runner frequently during the state tourney series. He scored Linden's final run in the Eagles' five run fourth.

plating the winning run.

Once again it was Linden' pitching duo of Lucas Marshall and Jack Shore who were the real stars. Marshall tossed six innings of one-run ball, striking out five. The game was tied at 1-all when he left the contest. Shore got the last six outs of the contest, earning the victory. He allowed no hits and one walk while striking out one in his two innings of work.

Final Linden 4, Clio 0

Incredibly, the Eagles had to go extrainnings again in a pitchers' duel just a few hours later. Linden's Aaron Sarkon broke a scoreless tie in the top of the eighth inning with a three-run triple. Then, in the bottom of the eighth inning, Jack Shore collected the second win of the day by completing his eight-inning complete-game shutout. Shore needed 109 pitches, 73 for strikes, to finish his 10-strike out performance. He allowed just five hits and one walk.

The incident damaged the bridge. Brown said it damaged some of the concrete and bent approximately six beams on the bottom of the bridge.

MDOT closed parts of the road after the crash. Brown said Lahring Road will be closed until MDOT can finish assessing the damage and do repairs.

"Hopefully by the end of this week we'll have a better idea of what we need to do with it," he said, adding that they will bill the contractor's insurance company for repair costs.

He said this happens "Every now and again. It seems like we get one a year."

Fenton Township Fire Chief Ryan Volz warns motorists to expect extra traffic on Torrey and North Roads until the Lahring Road bridge is repaired.

turn irritates muscles in the back.

A poor diet can result in back pain. The most important thing you can do for back pain is to reach and maintain a healthy weight. Adiet that is high in fat and overloaded with calories will lead to weight gain, which can lead to back pain as well as painful joints.

Being sedentary can lead to weight gain and back pain symptoms. Exercise gives you the muscle tone needed to support your back and keep it pain-free.

Poor posture is another cause of back pain. Your ears should be over your shoulders, your shoulders over your hip joints, and your hips over your ankles. Leaning your head forward or slumping your shoulders can pull on your back and cause pain.

Lack of movement is not good for your back either. Back pain can result any time you stay in one position for an extended period of time, whether it's sitting in an office chair, a driver's seat, or standing in one place for your job. Pain can set in even when you sit down for a threehour movie or sleep in for several hours. The more pressure you have on the discs in your spine, the more the discs will wear away. The human body was meant to move, so to relieve or avoid pain, get up from the computer at least every hour to take a short walk, and choose an aisle seat at the movie theater to stretch your legs.

Stilettos are not the best shoes for your back, but even a sensible pair of shoes can change your gait and lead to back pain if the soles are worn. Keep in mind that fit is most important to keep your footwear from causing back pain as well as foot pain.

A mattress should give you uniform support. There shouldn't be air between your body and the mattress when you lie down. Experts recommend going with a mattress that has medium firmness to avoid back pain symptoms. But the most important factor is the age of your mattress. If you're sinking in when you lie down, it's probably time to get a new one to help keep back pain away.

Wearing a bra that gives you the right support can help keep the weight closer to your body and help you avoid back pain.

Any time you have to balance the weight of a purse or shoulder bag, you change the curve of your spine and that can lead to back pain. If you must carry one or the other, at least clean it out and leave most of your cards in a drawer at home so you have less to carry and won't aggravate back pain symptoms.

There are many reasons to quit smoking. Cigarettes hurt more than just your heart and lungs. In fact, smoking deprives cells all over your body of oxygen, including those that control the motion of your back. Studies show that smokers are more than twice as likely to develop lower back pain than those who have never smoked.

DRIVERS

it is hands free. I think it's pretty equal. It also depends on the age group."

"I think women are better at multitasking. They can drive with screaming kids and not blink an eye," said Mary Rendon of Clarkston.

"Women are definitely better drivers," said Carol Verhelle of Fenton. "God made us to be able to handle a back seat driver, children drawing imaginary lines, change lanes, merge and park with the greatest of ease."

Linda Russell of Swartz Creek said, "My son's parking skills were much better than both of my daughters when taking driver's ed. He seemed to instinctively be able to know how to back around things. The girls struggled to learn. He passed his road test on the first try. Neither of the girls did."

Vickie Brinkman of Bonfield, Illinois said, "I seem to enjoy giving men the credit on this one. I hate to drive, but I love to ride."

Mike Howard of Gilbert, Arizona said, "I would have gone with women until cell phones came into being. Now women seem to ignore kids, music and the road as they talk and text on their cell phones while driving. Men are just a little better about just driving for the pure enjoyment of the car."

"Since I totaled my car six weeks ago, I would say men are better drivers," said Sharon Howard of Bourbonnais, Illinois.

Janet Leslie of Okemos, formerly of Holly said, "I think men are more confident drivers, probably because they've been assured their whole lives that they are 'better' drivers.

Veronica Pheasant of Argentine Township said, "I would say men are better but also take more risks. A guy will tailgate much closer knowing full well what he's doing. Others are just clueless how dangerous it is. Guys also like to pass on the expressway like they are driving for NASCAR. Women try to be safer drivers."

All four local police chiefs were asked to share their thoughts on women versus men drivers.

One said he wouldn't touch this story with a comment with a 10-foot pole. Another asked if the question was a set up. Two chiefs didn't respond at all.

Perhaps they feel the same way as Rob Harris of Fenton, who said, "I'm not touching this question, but I am looking forward to your next article, 'Does this dress make me look fat?'"

Experts and statistics show

According to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, in a report released in February of this year, "Many more men than women die each year in motor vehicle crashes."

Men typically drive more miles than women and more often engage in risky driving practices including not using safety belts, driving while impaired by alcohol, and speeding.

The report continues that crashes involving male drivers often are more severe than those involving female drivers.

Females are, however, more likely than males to be killed or injured in crashes of equal severity, although gender differences in fatality risk diminish with age.

The following facts are based on analysis of data from the U.S. Department of Transportation's Fatality Analysis Reporting System (FARS).

Trends

Each year, from 1975 to 2014, the number of male crash deaths was more than twice the number of female crash deaths, but the gap has narrowed.

From 1975 to 2014, male crash deaths declined by 29 percent and female crash deaths declined by 20 percent.

Age differences

The number of driver fatal crash involvements per 100 million miles driven in 2008 was 50 percent higher for males (2.1 per 100 million miles traveled) than for females (1.4 per 100 million miles

Rates were substantially higher for males than for females ages 16 to 29, but were only slightly higher for ages 30 and older. The gender difference was largest among drivers ages 20 to 29.

Alcohol involvement and speeding

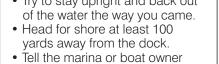

Each year from 1982 to 2014, the proportion of fatally injured passenger vehicle drivers with blood alcohol concentrations (BACs) at or above 0.08 percent has been substantially higher for males than for females.

Each year from 1982 to 2014, speeding was identified as a contributing factor for a greater proportion of male drivers killed in motor vehicle crashes than for female drivers killed in a crash.

Total deaths by state

Michigan ranked 11th in the number of traffic deaths in 2014 at 901.

The worst states were Texas (3,538), California (3,074), Florida (2,494), North Carolina (1,284), Pennsylvania (1,195), Georgia (1,164), New York (1,039), Ohio (1,006), Tennessee (962) and Illinois (924).
