Sip your way through Michigan's wine country

Traverse City rivals France and Italy for some of the best locally grown wines

By Sally Rummel • news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

What could be better on a warm summer day than sipping a glass of wine and enjoying the breathtaking views of Grand Taverse Bay?

Even though our days are getting shorter as August looms, there's still plenty of time to make a trip this summer or fall to Michigan's own Wine Country in Traverse City.

Just a little more than three hours away from Fenton, the 40-plus vineyards and wineries of Old Mission and Leelanau Peninsula await your discriminating wine and food palette. As an added bonus, the spectacular scenery creates a beautiful backdrop for enjoying a glass of Michigan's own pinot noir, merlot or chardonnay.

See WINE on 2B

Traverse City may not be Napa Valley, but its spectacular vineyards and wineries make it a worthy destination for even the most discriminating wine lover.

WINE

About half of Michigan's fine wine grapes grow in the northern half of the state, along the Leelanau and Old Mission peninsulas. At the top of the Old Mission Peninsula lies an invisible but very significant line: the 45th parallel, which is halfway between the equator and the North Pole. This gives the region its distinct micro-climate, perfecting its ability to grow quality wine grapes on par with the famous wine regions of France and Italy.

The grapes are ripe for the picking, thanks to a long, slow ripening growing season, plenty of sunshine, mild, warm days and crisp, cool nights.

The beautiful views of Grand Traverse Bay are more than just a feast for your eyes; they also help moderate temperature extremes, making for gentle grapevine budding, flowering and ripening, according to Michigan Wines.

As you saunter between wineries and tasting rooms either on your own or as part of a wine tour you'll notice the subtle differences of tastes and experiences that make each vineyard visit special and unique. Each winery has its own tasting cost, too, usually between $3-$5.

If you want to keep your wine tasting experience to a day or short afternoon, no worries — many of the wineries and tasting rooms are close enough together that you can easily spend three to four hours "hopping" from one winery to another.

Keep in mind that Saturdays are the busiest days of the week at most winery tasting rooms, so for a quieter more intimate experience, you may want to visit on a weekday. The busiest time of year at most wineries is during the fall color season, usually around the second week of October, depending on the weather.

For a short afternoon wine tasting event, Old Mission Peninsula is your closest option because of its proximity to town and the wineries to each other. For a full day of fun or weekend tasting tour you can easily choose to take on most winery locations on both Old Mission and Leelanau peninsulas.

Leelanau Peninsula Wine Trail

This small peninsula is the largest and oldest in Michigan and is home to 25 wineries, divided into three mini-trails for easy touring: the Sleeping Bear Loop, the Northern Loop and the Grand Traverse Bay Loop. Each tasting room offers its own unique experience, from unparalleled elegance to a charming, cozy nook.

Tasting room tips for your Traverse City wineries visit:

- First and foremost, remember that you are a guest of a family run business, and owners and staff are proud of their facility.
- Little sips add up. Designate a driver and drink responsibly, or use a wine tour company.
- Plan ahead and call in advance if you have a large group (eight or more).
- Avoid heavy perfume or cologne. It interferes with the wine's aroma and the tasting experience.
- Put your cell phone on vibrate or step outside to make a call.
- Some wineries charge a tasting fee. If a fee is charged, it's OK for two people to share a glass.
- Eat well before wine tasting and drink plenty of water before, during and after.
- Try not to act or sound like a "wine snob." Tastes differ and there's always someone who knows less, and more, than you do.
- In general, white wines are tasted first, followed by reds, then dessert wines. You can also skip any wines on the tasting list, or just take a sip and dump the rest in a dump bucket.
- Rinse your glass between tastings, especially when moving from whites to reds to dessert wines.
- Normally, you shouldn't ask for a second taste of a particular wine, unless you're interested in buying a bottle.
- Ask questions. Tasting room staff are trained to know about the wines you are tasting.

Wineries of Old Mission Peninsula

Jutting north between the azure arms of Lake Michigan's Traverse Bay is the Old Mission Peninsula situated at the globe's 45th parallel. Home to eight distinct wineries from the elegant Chateau Chantal Winery & Inn to the renovated 19th century schoolhouse tasting room of Peninsula Cellars, you'll find something to love at each winery.

What America is Reading

BEST SELLERS

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Fewer people read books these days, as entertainment becomes more readily available online.

However, books offer an escape from all that, whether you're reading about a teenage girl who leads a rebellion to overthrow a tyrant, or a woman's journey to Italy on the road to self discovery, or a spy who finds out his organization wants to kill him.

Here are the top 10 books America is reading right now from USAToday's best-selling book list.

'FIRST COMES LOVE'

Emily Griffin writes about two sisters in their 30s. A tragedy caused them to go separate ways when they were young, and they attempt to reconnect.

'UNITED AS ONE'

This science-fiction thriller by Pittacus Lore shows the strength of the human race when the Mogadorians invade Earth, and one man leads the efforts to save it.

'THE GIRLS'

In darker and witchier themes, this book by Emma Cline is about a teenage girl being seduced into a dangerous cult by an older girl. This takes place in 1969.

'CRISIS OF CHARACTER'

This book, by Gary J. Byrne, has been garnering a lot of attention due to the current presidential race. It's about a former Secret Service agent who worked with the Clintons during Bill Clinton's term as president.

'ME BEFORE YOU'

Jojo Moyes also saw her book get turned into a movie for the big screen, starring Emilia Clarke (Game of Thrones). In this tale, a young girl becomes a caretaker for a quadriplegic set on ending his life. It's a tale of self discovery, love, and heartbreak.

'END OF WATCH'

Fan favorite Stephen King is back with his next bestseller. The Mr. Mercedes killer makes another appearance in the last volume of the author's popular trilogy.

'THE GAMES'

James Patterson, a teen favorite, and Mark Sullivan wrote this book about trouble in Rio during the Olympics. Bodies are turning up as someone attempts to disrupt the games.

'SHADOW RIDER'

This paranormal romance, by Christine Feehan, shows what happens when two very different worlds collide. A shadow rider falls in love with a woman who is intent on starting a new life.

'THE BFG'

Written by the late Roald Dahl, young Sophie is taken from the orphanage where she lives when the BFG, which stands for Big Friendly Giant, takes her away for an adventure.

'FOREIGN AGENT'

Written by Brad Thor, this book is about a former Navy SEAL who is called on by the CIA after terrorism takes over in Europe.

Ten years in the making

■ Fenton woman releases book detailing history of the American Saddlebred Horse

By Hannah Ball

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

One Fenton resident took her love for equine to the next level. Heidi Madsen, who graduated from Fenton in 1989, wrote, "Gaited in the Great Lakes: Michigan's Role With the American Saddlebred Horse."

Madsen researched and talked to many people in Michigan and Kentucky for the 10 years that she worked on the book. "It was an on and off project," she said. "I worked on it when I had time."

In her book, she covers the history of saddlebred horse farms from the 1920s to the 1970s, touching on topics like the Dodge dynasty. "It's kind of a range. It goes from everything from northern Michigan down to the Michigan-Ohio border," she said, adding that she mentions Joe Louis' farm and Meadow Brook Hall.

Madsen has been working with the horses for decades. She taught saddleseat horse riding for 15 years and used to show horses. She now does more sideline work. She served for eight years on the American Saddlebred Horse Association, and volunteers at horse expos throughout the year.

As she did more research, the breed started to fascinate her more. "Saddlebreds are a very versatile breed," she said. "It's always been a breed I've attached myself to."

Madsen's book can be ordered from Fenton's Open book or online. "If anyone in Fenton were to purchase a book, they can always contact me and I'd be happy to sign it," she said. Readers can email her at bravoblu12@hotmail.com.

"The purpose of the book was to educate the people who've been involved with the American Saddlebred who didn't know the extensive history and educate those who are just coming into the world of this wonderful horse," she said.

Fenton resident Heidi Madsen's historical book details the history of saddlebred horses in Michigan.

Ex-wife tries mightily to reunite with husband

DEAR AMY: I was 19 when I married my husband, who was 27 at the time. He was here five months before we started dating. I was pregnant by another man. My husband and I got married 10 months later. He is a manager at a chain pizza store that his family owns, so naturally he works a lot — 60 to 70 hours a week. I was so young, just got married, just had a baby and just landed a big-girl job. I left him. He wasn't paying me any mind (so I thought). I wanted both the income and the attention. I wanted to have my cake and eat it too. He worked a lot because we wanted nice things. It has been more than a year since I left. We still see each other, hang out with each other and are intimate with each other. I want him back more than anything. He says he loves and misses me, but that he can't get over the fact that I left him. I have been chasing him around for more than a year. I am always initiating to do things. I am always the one to text him. The longest we went without talking was 10 days, and that was because I ended up texting him. He gives me the most confusing vibes. When we're together it's perfect. I want to give up, but my Christian belief makes me not want to. I'm torn, stressed and exhausted. I don't know what to do. Please help! — A Broken Girl

DEAR BROKEN: Your Christian faith didn't stop you from leaving your husband, so now it might be best if you didn't use your faith as an excuse to keep pursuing him. In terms of "wanting cake," it seems that your ex is now in that category. He has the advantages of having a relationship with you when he wants it. He might also be punishing you for your own rejection by keeping you on the ropes. If you were happy with things as they are, then you wouldn't have a problem, but it is a true fact that chasing someone who doesn't really want to get caught simply doesn't work. Lawyers and other advisers frequently suggest that couples who are splitting up should not have conjugal visits. This muddies the water and delays both parties' ability to move on. It is time for you to stop pursuing your ex. Stop it. If he wants to come back to you, he will. If he doesn't want to come back, his distance will help you to recover from this failed relationship and make different choices next time.

DEAR AMY: I just received an invitation to a destination wedding (my godchild). This will put a hardship on me, with transportation, hotel and meals, plus a gift. I think it is rude to have a destination wedding. This puts guests in an awkward position. They need to face the hardship of attending, or just stay home and feel sad. I am on a very limited income and just can't afford this. What is your opinion on destination weddings. — K

DEAR K: Most weddings are a destination wedding for some (out of town) guests, but true "destination weddings," where the couple chooses a spot mutually unavailable to all guests, put a significant burden on people. Some couples choose destination weddings because they are blind to the burden (or simply don't care); others choose destination weddings because they don't actually want all of their guests to attend. I had a destination wedding many years ago. At the time it seemed like a dreamy escape. My perspective on this now is that it was fairly selfish.

The mysterious rise in meat allergies

DEAR DR. ROACH: I heard that there is a sudden surge in people coming down with severe meat allergies. Is there any information as to why, after years of eating red meat, you suddenly can become extremely allergic? — E.V.

ANSWER: Meat allergies are uncommon; however, there has been a recent surge of meat allergies due to tick bites. I have read that over 5,000 cases of meat allergy have been estimated in the United States, mostly in the Southeast. The allergy is most often caused by a bite of the Lone Star tick, which carries the carbohydrate alpha-gal. If introduced into the bloodstream, it can cause a reaction from eating meat, especially beef, pork and lamb. Interestingly, it is much more likely in people with blood types A and O. It isn't yet clear if the allergy will be temporary or long-lasting, but it can be very severe, and people who develop this allergy should avoid meat and carry an epinephrine device in case of exposure.

DEAR DR. ROACH: A few days ago, I heard a report on breast cancer recurrence. I had cancer in my left breast in 1995, and on my right side in 2003. What are your thoughts on the subject? There is no history of breast cancer in my family. — P.M.

ANSWER: Breast cancer sometimes runs in families, but 70 percent to 80 percent of women with breast cancer have no family history. Once a woman has had breast cancer, she is at higher risk for developing a second breast cancer. Survivors of breast cancer should get regular physical exams and mammograms. A team of researchers from Johns Hopkins University recently published a study promising that in the near future, a new type of blood test may be able to identify DNA from breast cancer cells and find recurrence much earlier than current methods. If confirmed, this would be a big relief to the many women (and a few men) with breast cancer at risk for recurrence.

Esther's Raspberry Dessert

Recipe courtesy of Esther Shaffer of Davison

My grandma Esther Shaffer is one of the best cooks I have ever known and she has taught me almost all that I know about making a delicious meal. This recipe is a family favorite that has been passed down from generation to generation. My grandma Shaffer is the reason why I love to cook — she has always put so much love into her food and now I use cooking and baking as a way that I can pass on her legacy to future generations.
