Lake Fenton grad brings power to the people of Tanzania

■ Eric Tarkleson works to bring electricity to rural, impoverished East Africa

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Eric Tarkleson grew up in the Lake Fenton area, but today he's bringing power to the people halfway around the world in Tanzania (pronounced Tan-za-NEE-a) in East Africa.

Tarkleson, 31, son of Scott and Jonie Tarkleson of Mundy Township, is home for six weeks between projects as general manager/chief engineer for Enda Solar, which specializes in medium to large-scale energy and industrial solutions for the emerging market.

"I worked on a engineering project in Tanzania in college, and I just kept going back," said Tarkleson.

Tanzania has been Tarkleson's home since May 2015, although he made close to a dozen trips there during his years of undergraduate and graduate studies at Michigan State University. He was a 2004 graduate of Lake Fenton High School.

Tarkleson graduated in 2013 from MSU with his master's degree in electrical engineering, with a specialty of power electronic engineering. MSU currently supports five primary and secondary schools near Arusha, Tanzania with internet-based computer labs. Three of the schools are solar powered.

While most of the native people of Tanzania are equipped with cell phones and will walk miles and miles through villages and mountainous regions to charging stations, they largely live without electricity to drive any of their other basic needs.

"They may not have internet, but they can pay bills, communicate, transfer money, even make money using their phones," said Tarkleson.

His goal is to work with his company to build infrastructure in Tanzania to support manufacturing in this African country.

"We have support from American and Swiss companies, as well as a very competent staff in Tanzania," said Tarkleson. "The people here are very smart, it's just that the education system is far behind. They typically know three languages, Swahili, English and their own local tribal language."

Poverty by American standards is everywhere, but the people are happy, according to Tarkleson. The average wage in Tanzania is about $500 per year, and someone with more opportunities might make $100 a month. A college-educated person would make about $500 per month.

Tarkleson makes his home in a small village located along the Usa River at the base of Mount Meru, the fifth highest mountain in Africa located 43 miles west of Mount Kilimanjaro. His home is a colonial-era guesthouse on a compound, which runs on solar power.

On the side of the mountain where Tarkleson lives, the weather is cool, temperate and lush, almost like a rain forest, while the other side of the mountain offers drought-like dry weather conditions.

He plans to stay in Tanzania, where he appreciates living a simpler life that offers opportunities for innovation and challenge. "You have to use what you have," he said.

Tarkleson's parents visit him in Tanzania this summer

Scott and Jonie Tarkleson of Mundy Township were able to get a first-hand view of their son, Eric's daily life and work in Tanzania, when they visited him there in June for two-and-a-half weeks.

They stayed with Eric in his guest-house, slept under mosquito netting, and enjoyed a four-day safari, where they viewed zebras, gazelles, giraffes, wildebeest, hippos, lions and more, up close.

They returned as different people, for having had this once-in-a-lifetime travel experience.

"The poverty, it's hard to get used to it," said Jonie, 63. But she was able to separate the poverty conditions from the people themselves.

They are beautiful, healthier people with colorful personalities, she said. "They seem to be happy with their lives. We didn't feel sorry for people, but came back very appreciative of what we have."

Scott, 58, was amazed by the cultural differences. "I don't complain about much anymore," he said. "It changed my whole outlook. We all won the lottery just by being born here."

YOUR STYLE IS 20-20

■ Your eyewear can make your own personal fashion statement

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

There is no area of fashion that joins style and function together more than eyewear.

Glasses can actually be your most flexible fashion accessory, changing with the seasons, your moods and your styles. No longer are glasses a geeky vision necessity — now they are a staple fashion accessory with trends of their own.

Here are a few to take a look at:

TWO-TONED GLASSES
for a little bit of fun.

SQUARE FRAMES to keep things fresh and edgy (you'll look smarter, too).

METAL FRAMES
to get your Harry Potter look on.

WOODEN FRAMES are sustainable, eco-friendly and fun.

BLACK ROUND FRAMES
are hip, sophisticated and stylish.

FALL fashions 2016

■ Look for the blues, reddish-brown shades, unexpected neutrals, pops of color

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Each season, the Pantone Color Institute releases the shades that dominate the fashion collections seen on the runway, which will undoubtedly find their way into your closet and home furnishings.

The Top 10 for Fall 2016 are heavy on the blues, as well as reddish-brown shades. You won't have to overhaul your closet, though; the soft hues that dominated Spring 2016, intended to bring calm in an increasingly busy landscape, are still relevant for this fall.

The desire for tranquility, strength and optimism has inspired a color palette led by the "Blue" family. These uplifting hues (a deep one called Riverside, as well as the lighter Airy Blue) appear alongside dependable, but unexpected neutrals, like Sharkskin gray and Spicy Mustard yellow.

Blue skies represent constancy as they are always above us; grays give a feeling of stability; red tones invite confidence and warmth, while the hot pinkish-purples and spicy mustard yellows suggest a touch of the exotic, according to Leatrice Eiseman, executive director of the Pantone Color Institute.

These shades pop against the rest of the Top 10, including the warmer Aurora Red and pinkish-purple Bodacious. Pantone's big themes are stability and confidence in these reliable colors shown in bold shades.

'Fancy Footwork' FOR FALL

■ Fun and extreme with styles from multiple decades will find their way into your shoe closet

By Sally Rummel

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

From romantic velvet to modern metallic, pointy pumps to sky high platforms, fall's best footwear is fun and extreme.

It's "classy and trashy" at the same time, with multiple decades blending into one, according to glamour.com's fall shoe trends.

Here are a few trends you'll find when looking for shoes, boots and pumps this fall:

- Pointy toes
- Open toes

- Chunky, gothic looks
- Suede and velvet
- Reptile skin
- 1980s platforms (think KISS and David Bowie)
- Chunky, wooden, square heels
- Printed footwear
- Metallics
- Fur details

Are you in the right house?

■ Some home-based businesses require more space to accommodate family and work life needs

By Vera Hogan

vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

So you've decided to start a home-based business — are you in the right house and neighborhood?

Depending on the nature of the business, the first thing you need to do is determine if you have the space needed to blend both your work and home life. In some cases, if you're serious about making a go of this, you may need to look for another house to accommodate your family and business needs.

According to homebusinessmag.com, there are some questions you need to ask yourself: Do you maintain supplies and files? What about inventory? Does your business require you to host clients? Are you going to be on the phone all day? The answers to these questions create the boundaries within which you can plan your home office space.

Take a look around your house. Do you

Starting a home-based business can be exciting, but it's important to start with a plan to determine if your current house has the space and other requirements needed to successfully separate your work and family life.

have a spare bedroom or other spacious area that will work? How about the basement, is it finished enough to work as a work area? Is your garage large enough to convert into a work area?

Make your office space into a productive and creative space to provide you with a professional, cost-effective, and low-stress working environment.

Once you determine where you are going to conduct business, you will need to determine if there are enough electrical and cable connections to accommodate your needs. Taking advantage of wireless technology options will save a considerable amount of space.

Some local communities require people to acquire permits before starting a home-based business. Their concerns will include things like adequate parking if you host clients in your home. They will want to make sure traffic and noise levels are kept down in residential areas.

It may be that your neighborhood is not the right place for your business. If you determine it is not, instead of calling it quits, consider consulting a local Realtor to help you find a house that will fit your needs.
