Local builders see momentum in 2017

By Sally Rummel

Now here's a surprise: it will cost you more to build a house this year in the tricounty area than it did last year, especially with price increases in materials like lumber, concrete and cabinetry.

"These are the three major areas of cost increases," said Chris Weir of Weir Building Company in Fenton. "We're fighting inflation a little, and a bit higher costs with labor, but mostly it's materials."

TRI-COUNTY TIMES | TIM JAGIELO

Fenton Lakes Building & Design owner Scott Tarkleson designed and built this house in Fenton Township to satisfy the client's request for a clean, industrial look with a concrete and steel exterior.

That's not stopping the momentum of the building industry, however. Local builders are very busy with renovations and new construction so far in 2017.

While the national trend of home building may be heading toward smaller homes, you won't find many houses being built in the tri-county area that are less than 2,000 square feet. In the city of Fenton, the smallest single family home in a medium density residential neighborhood must be at least 950 square feet, according to Mike Reilly, building and zoning administrator. Weir builds mostly in the 2,100- to 4,000-square-foot range, completing about eight homes per year.

"People want smaller homes with a smarter design," said Weir. "For more square footage, people are looking at adding space with a basement, rather than falling into the trap of

'bigger is better." While the homes he builds are more moderate in size, clients are spending the extra dollars on amenities.

Just sayin'...

Guess who's coming to dinner?

About every 10 years or so, I like to play this game called 'Who's coming to dinner?' The rules are that players must choose several famous people, dead or alive, with whom they would like to share a great dinner and an evening of fun.

I'll start. First, I don't want any dead people at my dinner table, so they're out. Not 'The Walking Dead' people either. I also don't want any politicians. That leaves the following. My first choice would be Sam Elliott. You know, so my husband has someone to visit with. That's my story and I'm sticking to it. My next choice would be Kathy Bates. She is my very favorite actress of all time. Nothing can compare to her performances in 'Misery,' 'Fried Green Tomatoes,' and 'Dolores Claiborne' to name a few. One of her lines in the latter is one of my favorites. When she says to a detective, 'You're sorry, are you? Bet the last time you were sorry was when you needed to use the pay toilet and the string on your pet dime broke.' Sweet!

Author Stephen King is also on my list. He can sit next to Kathy since she is in several of the movies made from his books, and they seem to be friends. He is my favorite author of all time. He has, in my humble opinion, a brilliant mind. If you've ever read and seen the movies 'The Green Mile' and 'The Shawshank Redemption,' you know what I mean. He also wrote 'Dolores Claiborne.' When people say, 'You can't make this up,' I say, 'Yes, yes you can.'

Actor Denzel Washington is also on my invitation list. He is a very talented actor, seems like a very nice man and has a smile that probably lights up every room he is in. I have yet to see a movie he is in that I didn't like. Did I say he has a nice smile?

Talk about smiles that light up rooms, Eddie Murphy will have to be there for sure. He is one of the funniest comedians/actors I've ever seen, and he has a great laugh. Just watching the numerous characters he plays all at once is a hoot. Remember 'The Klumps,' where he plays the main character and all his family members. Now that's talent.

The multi-talented Ellen DeGeneres would be a welcome guest. She is a great actress, comedian, TV host, writer — not to mention her generosity. My favorite Ellen quote is, 'Normal is getting dressed in clothes that you buy for work and driving through traffic in a car that you are still paying for — in order to get to the job you need to pay for the clothes and the car, and the house you leave vacant all day so you can afford to live in it.' You got that right sister!

Josh Groban and Lady Gaga would provide the musical entertainment. Both are very talented entertainers, and seem like people you could have a regular conversation with. Hey, maybe Gaga could give me and Kathy Bates some fashion tips.

Last, but not least, my husband, Mike. would have to be there. He's not famous, but I wouldn't dream of not including him at this party.

Four members of 'The Chew' cast, including Mario Batali, Michael Symon, Clinton Kelly and Carla Hall, will of course prepare the feast and cocktails for us. 'The Chew' is my favorite daytime television show and anything they prepare for this fabulous dinner party will be fine with me.

Now wouldn't that be a lively evening with a diverse, talented fun group of guests? Cheers!

THERE ARE GLASSES FOR THAT

> Whether it's color blindness, night blindness or light sensitivity, eyeglasses exist to help.

hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Not all eyes are created equal. Some people are color blind, have trouble seeing at night, and are light sensitive.

There are certain types of glasses that can help with each condition.

COLOR BLINDNESS

also known as color vision deficiency, is a condition where a person's eyes do not see colors under normal light. People living with this condition have a difficult time differentiating between colors. Bright colors can look faded, and browns and blues can look exactly alike.

Color blindness affects millions of people worldwide, and occurs more often in men than women. Approximately one in every 12 men and 1 in every 200 women are affected. The condition is usually genetic, but can be acquired if certain genes inside the eyes are damaged.

Solution:

Companies like EnChroma have developed specialty lenses that simulate colors based on the extent of color vision deficiency. These glasses utilize 'multinotch' filtering, which cuts out sharp wavelengths of light to enhance specific colors. Source: enchroma.com is another problem people commonly experience with their eyes. Having night blindness, also called nyctalopia, makes it difficult to see well at night or in poor light.

NIGHT BLINDNESS

RICAL

A disorder of cells in the retina of the eye is the reason for night blindness and is caused by nearsightedness, cataracts, or vitamin A deficiency.

Solution:

There are different treatments for this condition, including specialty glasses, new medication, or a surgery if the culprit is cataracts. Ask your optometrist about special eyeglasses with antireflective coatings that will cut down the glare. Lenses made with wavefront diagnostic technology can reduce light halos, light bursts and glares.

LIGHT SENSITIVITY

also called photophobia, is an intolerance of light. Sunlight, fluorescent light and incandescent light can all cause discomfort in the eyes. This causes people to squint their eyes, which can add to the headaches.

These headaches are common with people who suffer from light sensitivity. People with lighter color eyes, like blue eyes, are more sensitive to light because there's less pigment to protect the eyes. Causes of light sensitivity include corneal abrasion, inflammation, meningitis, and other potential problems.

Solution:

Using hats and sunglasses will help people with light-sensitive eyes, as well as photochromic lenses and polarized sunglasses. These sunglasses have an extra level of protection against glare-causing reflections. Source: allaboutvision.com ing & Design says he's busier than he was in 2008 and 2009 and likes to have two homes going at one time, finishing four or five a year. "I turn down as many jobs as I take on," he said.

Most of his homes are 4,000 square feet and up.

"Everybody asks about cost," he said. "You're talking a minimum of $130 per square foot. A lot has to do with energy codes and the more engineering that's required since the 2015 Building Code was adopted. There have been changes in insulation and what we have to do in garages and basements, plus smoke detectors, radon and carbon monoxide detectors."

Most local builders agree that the trend this year is not so much downsizing from the "McMansions" of the past, but "right-sizing."

"I still build large homes, but I do see people's thought processes changing toward 'rightsizing' the size of rooms to the house," said Patrick Widing, custom home builder.

"They're building for comfort, not just a big open space, with more of a focus on the floor plan and furniture layout," he added. "They like to right-size from floors to ceiling, adding an extra layer of trim on walls, beams on ceilings, etc. When you add detail on ceilings, it builds 'cozy' and brings the room closer together."

Widing's average custom built home is between 3,000 and 8,000 square feet, although his company builds everything from remodel projects to large waterfront homes. The bottom end of price per
