LaJoice’s sentencing postponed again

Admitted embezzler could get 12-year prison sentence

Seniors were among those attending the March 14 United States District Court in Detroit. However, Tuesday’s hearing was cancelled and rescheduled for March 23.

LaJoice has been lodged in the Oakland County Jail since January 2016 after turning himself in for embezzling $18.6 million from the credit union where he worked.

He pleaded guilty in federal court to one count of bank fraud, which comes with a sentencing guideline of 121 to 151 months and a maximum fine of $1 million. He faces a statutory maximum term of 30 years imprisonment.

Both parties submitted recommendations for sentencing to Judge Gershwin Drain, who is presiding over the federal case.

The U.S. Attorney’s Office recommends 132 months, or 11 years, of imprisonment. The recommendation states, “LaJoice used the stolen funds to live a lavish lifestyle — purchasing and See LAJOICE on 16A

‘Tobacco 21’ burning out before it starts

Elected officials say citations will be thrown out

The “Tobacco 21” resolution passed by the Genesee County Board of Commissioners by a vote of 7-2 on Feb. 14, may go into effect on May 15. Making violations stick, however, could be another matter.

The new ordinance prohibits the sale of cigarettes and all other tobacco products to 18- to 20-year-olds in Genesee County.

Commissioner Drew Shapiro of Fenton (District 6), one of the commissioners that cast dissenting votes, referenced Attorney General Bill Schuette’s opinion 7292 dated Feb. 2 and said, “The county tobacco ordinance is in clear See TOBACCO on 19A

USPS sees 36 percent decrease in first-class mail in past decade

The United States Postal Service is dealing with a significant decrease in first-class mail volume due to the advancement of digital technology.

By Hannah Ball
hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

The United States Postal Service (USPS) might be in trouble.

Mail volume is at a 29-year low, according to USAtoday.com, and the USPS has recorded annual losses as high as $15.9 billion in the last 10 years.

The reason is likely that people are sending less mail. In 2007, the USPS processed 212 billion volumes of mail. In 2015, that number was 154 billion. See MAIL on 14A

People don’t necessarily send letters like they used to.

Mount Kilimanjaro in sight in the background as Peabody begins Day 4 of her trek to the summit.

‘I made it, I can’t believe it!’

Local chiropractor Erica Peabody makes it to the top of Mount Kilimanjaro in Africa

news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Just putting one foot in front of the other and trying to breathe is what got Erica Peabody, D.C. to the top of Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanzania, Africa last Thursday.

The owner of Café of Life Chiropractic Center in Fenton, Peabody says that summiting to the top of the highest free-standing mountain in the world is the most demanding feat she has ever accomplished.

“I made it, I can’t believe it,” said Peabody, the tears freely flowing on a YouTube video she took on Day 6 at the summit (see the YouTube link online with this story).

In the background, you can hear the songs in Swahili that the 60 support staff people are singing to the climbers at the end of each day’s climb. “It’s the most amazing thing I’ve ever experienced,” said Peabody, 39. The support staff included porters, guides, cooks, even people to help with daily hygiene and toilets.

She was part of a 30-woman climb, knowing only one other person, Kelly Luck, the woman who had invited her last April to consider the climb. The group trekked together at a pace everyone could keep, which enabled them to acclimatize as they were ascending.

She admits that the climb was especially hard in the beginning. “My feet were just screaming,” she said. “My feet, and the fact I couldn’t sleep because of altitude insomnia.”

Quick facts about Mount Kilimanjaro

• Mount Kilimanjaro is the highest mountain in Africa and the highest free-standing mountain in the world.
• The mountain is actually a dormant volcano.
• The summit is called Uhuru Peak and stands at 19,341 feet.
• Approximately 35,000 people attempt to climb Mount Kilimanjaro every year. Success rates are usually about 65 percent.
• There are approximately three to seven deaths reported a year from climbers on Mount Kilimanjaro, usually from altitude sickness, falls and hypothermia.

Mi-Kwan-Dahn “Mike” Jewell of Rose Township tells the story of Nanabozho, an anishinaabe (native people) story about the discovery of maple syrup, to tour visitors at Kensington Metropark in Milford on Saturday, March 4. Maple syrup taps are in all around Michigan, and guests can learn all about the process this month.

Area man with Native American roots shares sweet folklore

By Sally Rummel
news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

For most of Michigan, March is the heart of maple syrup season.

If you love the thick, sweet taste of maple syrup, you have Native Americans to thank for discovering that the sap from maple trees could be boiled into sugar.

That’s why Michael Jewell, a Rose Township resident with strong Native American roots, shares the Indian legends of “Maple’s Sweet Story” at Kensington Metropark, near Milford, every weekend in March.

These demos take place at the Metroparks Farm Center on weekends through March 25 and 26, every half hour from 12 to 4 p.m. A $10 daily Metroparks Vehicle Entrance Fee will get you into the park (or a $35 yearly pass), and it’s a $5 fee for the demo ($3 for children).

If you know Jewell from his volunteer work through his church, St. John the Evangelist Catholic Church in Fenton, you might not recognize him as he appears at the demo. He is fully dressed in his authentic Native American garb, which he has made himself, as he relays the Maple Syrup Legend (see sidebar).

Visitors also will take a guided walk of the farm’s sugar bush, identify the perfect tree and watch how trees are tapped to get the sap.

March on out of here

If I were asked to say something nice about the month of March at its funeral, I’d have to decline. What’s there to say? ‘March? Was like a girlfriend I once had — usually cold and frosty but with an occasional glimpse of warmth.’ ‘March? Well, it was good for connecting February to April, I guess.’ ‘March was always there to remind us that every other month was a whole lot better.’ That’s not much of a eulogy.

And, by the way, lest you think I’m kidding about that ‘every month is better’ thing, let me assure you I am not. Let’s take them one by one.

April is the first true month of spring here in Michigan. The crocuses pop, the tulips burst, the Tigers play ball — usually amid snow flurries, but still. Even the snowbirds begin to return. They come to escape Florida’s impending humidity. But they also come seeking hope and renewal. That’s what April is, a great big heaping helping of good things to come. And renewal. That’s what April is, a great big wretched month is saved by two things that begin just before something horrible.

November is like the music in the movies against summers anywhere. They are similarly divine. October. Red, orange and yellow leaves. And cider mill doughnuts. ‘Nuff said.

November? OK, not my favorite month. November is like the music in the movies that begins just before something horrible happens. In this case, that horrible thing is winter. But in the end this largely wretched month is saved by two things — Thanksgiving (who can’t get behind a holiday centered around gratitude?) and the run-up to the holidays. Both keep you distracted.

December? December is the hustle, bustle month. Snow is still new and novel. And late in the month, there’s that nice changing of the guard feeling — we’ve completed another trip around the sun and beginning another.

January. The first couple of weeks, you’re still in the glow of the holidays, you’re still focused on not following the resolutions you made, and the novelty hasn’t worn off winter yet. January is doable. But just barely.

February? I’m not going to lie. Awful month. The weather is so bad it makes you wonder why anyone settled here in the first place when nearby everywhere else on the continent is nicer. What little allure winter held is long gone. You’re just counting the days until the first sign of spring, which usually happens in March, which would seem to say that February, not March, is the worst month of the year.

But not so. For February is what it is. It doesn’t lie to you. It’s honest. It says, ‘I suck, deal with it.’

Whereas March is a tease. It gives you one or two days where you can almost think spring might be right around the corner then, WHAM, it snaps you right back into the depths of winter, and suddenly the full weight of a long winter feels twice as heavy.

And that, my friends, is when March laughs at you. I’ll be glad when it’s over.

SWARTZ CREEK MAN CHARGED WITH FIRST-DEGREE HOME INVASION
Zachary Birt, 26, of Swartz Creek was arraigned on one count of first-degree home invasion on March 10. He remains lodged on a $10,000 cash surety bond. The Genesee County Sheriff’s Office responded to a home invasion complaint at a residence in the 14000 block of Towers Road in Fenton Township. Weber is accused of breaking into the unoccupied residence. She was arrested at the scene by deputies and transported to Genesee County Jail for second-degree home invasion. She was released on a $7,500 bond and has a probable cause hearing on March 23.

DON’T FALL FOR PHONE SCAMS
The Genesee County Sheriff’s Office has received multiple complaints of phone scams throughout Genesee County, including Fenton Township. The most popular scam right now is the IRS scam where the victim receives a call from someone claiming to be the IRS and then telling them they owe back taxes and need to pay over the phone or they will be arrested, according to D/Sgt. Tom Zak. The sheriff’s office also learned that a Fenton Township resident fell for the “grandchild in jail” scam. An elderly woman received a phone call on March 7 from a male claiming to be her grandson and being held in a jail in Indiana. The phone scammer was able to convince the elderly woman to send money, via Western Union, to an address the victim believed to be a county courthouse in Indiana. Zak said these cases are almost impossible to prosecute because the suspect is using a spoofed telephone number.

Several AirBnB options available in Fenton area

By Hannah Ball
hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Would you rent out part of your home to a stranger for a night or two? Hundreds of thousands of people are doing it worldwide as hosts for the popular AirBnB travel site.

AirBnB is an alternative option for people traveling. It’s like a hotel, except users stay in someone’s home or rented-out apartment. The conditions depend on the host.

One Holly resident, Jesse Torres, and his girlfriend, Alexis Burton, have stayed at 14 AirBnBs — one in Grand Rapids, one in Hollywood, Florida, two in Portugal, four in Spain, one in Barbados, two in Martinique and three in Maui.

“AirBnB is a much more personal experience and overall better quality than a hotel as most the time other things are included such as breakfast, rides to the airport, and even once we got a car,” Torres said.

AirBnBs are gaining in popularity. Over 100 million people have used the service for travel accommodations, and the company has a valuation of $30 billion. According to a survey conducted by DavidBinder Research, 84 percent of AirBnB users said they have a favorable impression of the service. Most people ages 18-34 support it and a sharing economy. According to the survey, 66 percent of Americans and 76 percent of millennials think AirBnB is a good idea.

One search for an AirBnB in Fenton finds dozens of options. You can stay at one of the Cornerstone condos, two bedroom and two bathrooms, for $138 a night. An entire house on Lake Fenton is an AirBnB spot.

One benefit to booking an AirBnB instead of a hotel is they are usually cheaper and users can sometimes have an entire house to themselves.

“You get to meet real people and locals and they give us tips on what to do,” he said.

Torres said the biggest difference between an AirBnB and a hotel is the personal experience with locals.

“Most are insta-book so once you pay they don’t even have to approve you, and then you message them telling your situation and when you will arrive,” he said. “You have filter options such as entire house, private room, shared room and plenty of other filters if you so choose.”

Many locations have hundreds of AirBnB options.

Torres said, “10/10 would recommend. Great service, very trustworthy. Everyone is vetted, and you can save money and have a much better experience than just hotel check in. A trip should be about people and culture and that’s what AirBnB helps to provide,” Torres said, adding that you can also simply check in and never meet the host.

Grieving students offered counseling at school

When a friend or family member dies, young ones have trouble processing what happened.

By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

The tri-county area has seen its share of tragedies over the past year, tragedies involving the untimely deaths of young people.

The most recent include the death of 15-year-old Victoria Lane, the Fenton High School freshman who was struck and killed by a CN train as it passed through Fenton on Nov. 14, 2016. More recently, on Saturday, March 4, Brady Morris, 18, of Fenton Township, was shot in the back of the head and killed. His friend, Abdurrahman (Abdu) Ahmed Ak, 16, is believed to be responsible and has been charged with open murder.

The next day, Sunday, March 5, a young man named Troy Stilwell, 20, suffered a fatal heart attack while playing basketball at The River Church in Holly. These are just a few examples of the deaths of young people reported over the years. The deaths of the Quasarano family from carbon monoxide poisoning in their home in February 2016 was a particularly heartbreaking, since the parents and their three young children all perished.

Tragedies like this are especially hard on the children, but when they occur, the local school districts are the ready with grief counseling immediately available to students.

Ellen Lounds, director of special services and supervisor of special education for Holly Area Schools, said grief counseling is addressed by the district’s counselors and/or school social workers.

“We will send more counseling staff to a building to support students based on the type of crisis we have experienced,” said Lounds. “The staff are all licensed counselors/social workers with various levels of experience and training in grief counseling.”

“We utilize a process called TECIP — Traumatic Event Crisis Intervention Plan,” she said. “Each building has a crisis plan and we will put out on how to prepare for grieving students or a crisis.”

The plan includes how and when to notify staff, determining a safe location where concerned students may go and support staff are located, a sign-in and out process to monitor distraught students, and de-briefing and sharing resources, Lounds said.

“Most students need time to process the loss. They prefer to be with their peers, cry, write letters, draw, and at times share stories of happier times,” she said. “Many times they do not want to talk one-on-one on the day the loss is first shared.”

Staff offer this time and monitor how students are processing the situation and their emotions.

“Most students that access the school support are close friends, others may know the student but are also reacting to another loss/death that brings back emotions due to the current crisis,” Lounds said.

That could include unresolved grief. All staff are asked to monitor students that are tearful, crying, trying to leave campus or isolating themselves so the counseling staff can monitor their needs.

“Many times with social media the students know about events before the adults,” said Lounds. “The accuracy of their information is not always aligned with the data we have on the situation. We address being mindful of what is said, or shared, and when details are not known.”

“We emphasize the importance of reflecting the family and honor the student by not spreading inaccurate data.”

The level of communication with the parents depends on the age of the student, the student’s reaction and progression of the event and the level of crisis, said Lounds.

“Parents need to let their children know the emotions they feel are expected, that there is a range of emotions and that guilt and anger are common,” she said. “It is important to find an outlet through talking, music or drawing and/or counseling. Parents should attend the viewing or memorial services with their children or make sure they talk about this process.”

Lounds said many books have age-appropriate themes that address death for various age groups.

“These are helpful for starting and maintaining conversations,” she said. Counseling may be recommended if the loss is a peer versus a family member as the need and type of services will vary. “Families experiencing grief may participate in family counseling,” said Lounds.

Where parents can seek help

An agency like Elie’s Place (Flint has one of their four locations) at 1227 E. Bristol Road, Burton. Phone (810) 2332-3040, or visit their website at eliesplace.org.

“They offer free counseling for children and their families,” said Lounds. “The process is tailored to the age of the child as well as parent groups.”

Sand Castles is another agency as well as private practice clinics. Reach them at aboutsandcastles.org.

Grief counseling is handled by our district counselors, said Wayne Wright, superintendent for Lake Fenton schools.

“They are trained to work with children in times when they have special needs and are grieving. When issues occur in a district where many students are affected other schools will send their counselors to districts to support the children. Normally the ISD and neighboring districts will offer and send counselors if needed. It is hard to say how many counselors will be sent as that depends on the number of students that are affected by the situation. Many times the students need someone to talk with and connect with and be heard.”

Non-spoken language is large part of communication

By Hannah Ball
hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Most people can identify when people are nervous without saying a word, or when someone is obviously in a good mood without verbalizing it. This is because humans are usually very attentive when it comes to picking up subtle cues called body language.

Catherine Priebe, who worked locally as a staffing coordinator and supervisor for 10 years, taught people how to interview for jobs. She said body language is a “pretty large percentage” of communication.

“I think the way a person behaves, the nonverbals and paraverbals, are more important really than the answers that they give to the questions. What they say isn’t as important as how they’re saying it,” she said.

Body language is an important factor in everyday communication. The term describes what our bodies are saying without the help of our voices. It looks at facial expressions, head and gaze movements, body contact and orientation, gestures, clothes and appearance, physical proximity and often tone of voice. Paraverbal refers to how we say words.

If someone has a slouched posture, they look either tired or bored or both. If someone walks with their head up, eyes forward, and shoulders back, they seem confident.

Priebe said people seem like good candidates for a job if they’re leaning forward in their chair, but not leaning too much, and they’re paying attention to the questions. Maintaining eye contact, but not with a fixed stare, is also very important.

“That’s a big one,” she said.

Body language also lets her know when someone isn’t a good candidate.

“A lot of things let us know, like they’re not paying attention, looking around the room, they’re not making appropriate eye contact, they’re slumped in their chair,” she said.

Some of these nonverbal cues are indicative of certain cultures, but some are universal.

According to psychologytoday.com, basic emotional features, like happiness, fear, surprise, anger, disgust, and sadness, are expressed the same way throughout the world, and people recognize them without hesitation.

Not all body language is obvious, or controllable. Some messages are sent and received better than others, and some can be contradictory.

Because nonverbal cues often replace positive or negative verbal affirmations, like a head nod instead of saying “yes,” they can express the opposite in a kinetic slip. A kinetic slip is a contradictory signal when the verbal message doesn’t match the nonverbal message. For example, someone telling you they’re not angry, but their rigid and tough body posture, paired with a hard tone of voice, tells you the opposite.

This is when the phrase “actions speak louder than words” comes into play, because while people can control what they say, body language is often subconscious and uncontrollable to a point. A few emotions that are particularly hard to hide are sexual attraction, guilt, and anxiety.

Priebe said that because she has so much experience in interviewing people and studying body language, she picks up cues when someone might be lying.

“Eye contact, pulling back. If they’re being dishonest, they are really good with looking away, holding their body at a different angle. Their demeanor will change,” she said.

Nearly all humans subconsciously rely on body language to understand what someone is communicating, even during job interviews.

Denise Keipert, 59, of Fenton, is the local face of the Zonta Club, which strives to empower women through service and advocacy. She is an area director, leading 10 clubs from Flint to Grand Rapids and as far south as Troy. She is also well-known for her Mary Kay cosmetics business, which she has had for 28 years, full-time for the past 18 years.

How did you get involved in the Zonta Club?

I moved to Fenton 18 years ago, after marrying my husband, Marty. I had left a marriage before that, that was a verbally abusive and financially abusive relationship. People think abuse is all physical, black eyes and broken bones, but there’s an emotional side, too. I joined the (Fenton) Chamber to meet people. I was looking for a women’s organization and Chamber recommended Zonta.

Two years after moving here, Marty died very unexpectedly of a heart attack. He was 59 and I was 43. I was devastated. Marriage defines you and when that’s gone, you have to re-invent yourself. I got super involved in the community; that’s what kept me afloat.

How did you meet your husband, Dale?

He was on the Chamber board of directors; that’s how I met him. He was also widowed. We’ve been married five years. Our family is a ‘yours, mine and ours’ blend with my daughter, Darcy, and stepson, Scott, from my first marriage, Dale’s daughter Ann, and his son, Dean, and his wife, Kelly. Together, we have got six grandchildren.

Elizabeth Najduch, communications programs specialist for the U.S. Post Office said, “Since fiscal year 2007, total mail volume has declined by 27 percent.

First-Class mail — our most profitable product — declined by 36 percent since 2007 and is expected to continue to decline as a result of changes to digital forms of communications and the increase in online transactions.”

She said First-Class mail is transactional mail, payments, bills and statements. They also deal with marketing mail, which are advertisements, and packages.

Les Beare, owner of The UPS Store in Fenton, said while they haven’t seen a “dramatic” decrease in daily incoming mail, they have seen a slight decline in recent years.

“More and more of our society is going paperless. They receive online statements and invoices then login to their bank accounts and pay them online. Click, click, click. You’re done,” he said.

Goin’ Postal in Fenton, which is owned by Mike Clabuesch and Lucy Valeriano, is “absolutely” seeing a decline in people sending letter mail, Clabuesch said.

There are many reasons for this. “People don’t necessarily send letters like they used to. One (reasons) is pricing. It’s become more pricey to send our packages across the country or internationally,” he said.

Another big factor is the internet. Instead of mailing a handwritten letter, you can send that person an email or message them on Facebook. Social media sites allow people to share their lies instantaneously, decreasing the need to send people letters about their families.

“You used to run to Walmart or Best Buy or Kohl’s and you would buy Christmas gifts for your family and you would ship those across the country,” Clabuesch said.

“Now those companies have their own website, as well as Amazon, and you can just buy the item and they’ll ship it for free or at a low cost. You can just click and ship,” Beare said. The shipping of gifts is also declining, and it’s especially noticeable during holidays.

“With online shopping and shipping direct to your gift recipients, it can’t get any easier,” Beare said. “Gift cards also cause a decline in shipping packages. In years past we used to fill multiple large boxes of gifts and ship them. The boxes are getting smaller and fewer as time goes on.”

The UPS Store’s option of pack and ship option, where the office will even pack everything, guarantees delivery. If not, the sender gets the declared value of the item with proof of value, and all the packaging and shipping fees back.

“A lot those factors made it so you don’t have the need of the shipping industry in general. You just don’t have the need for it like you used to,” Clabuesch said.

Goin’ Postal is unique because they’re independent.

“We have continued to see growth. It’s a different kind of growth than you would see say at the post office,” he said.

At Goin’ Postal, there’s a growing need for companies to ship things to other companies.

“I would attribute that to the economy that’s in Michigan and the economy just in general that has been getting better over the last couple years,” Clabuesch said.

At the U.S. Post Office, Najduch said the amount of packages sent has increased 70 percent since 2010, which is due to the growth in e-commerce, improved tracking, competitive pricing, and effective product development and marketing.

“We project this growth to continue. Marketing mail has remained relatively stable as businesses continue to see a strong return on their investment in the mail,” she said.

In order to adjust to the decline in letter mail, Najduch said, “We have also focused our efforts on developing new products and enhancing existing product offerings to meet the needs of our customers.”
Miller Industries has three companies under one roof, with 98 employees

bjagielo@tctimes.com; 810-433-6795

Fenton Twp. — Throughout the vast warehouse-like facility, laborers are cutting, grinding, and assembling products in a complex web of industrial logistics. Several fabricators are working on large industrial turntables for auto manufacturers like Chrysler and Volvo, while others assemble parts for a new painting facility.

“Miller Industries” is the holding company for three other businesses within the same 106,000-square-foot structure. The building is the largest in Fenton Township, dominating the corner of Torrey and Thompson roads.

“Everything we do is American-made and everything we do is made in Fenton,” said Matt Miller, a principal shareholder with the company. “It’s awesome, not only do we manufacture here in Michigan, but we’ve been in the manufacturing community here in Fenton for almost 40 years.”

The business is family owned and operated. Matt, along with siblings Jennifer Sage and Mike and Chad Miller, with father Tom, are all shareholders of at least one of these companies they own and operate.

Two of these companies, Performance Fabricating and Flex Air LLC, design and manufacture industrial equipment and components. The third business, Miller Industries Representatives, sells laboratory, medical and higher education equipment built by other companies.

Miller Industries employs 98 people, including administrative roles, engineering and hands-on manufacturing. Certain parts of the process are automated, such as painting and metal stamping/punching.

Miller said that every employee is offered full benefits, and a retirement incentive plan, which may be a rare opportunity in 2017. “We really focus on family atmosphere; we have good open communication. I think the morale is excellent.”

About their products

Flex Air LLC engineers and manufactures equipment for industrial facilities. For example, custom HVAC equipment, as well as, modular electrical and mechanical skids for powering a building which would be requested by a contractor, which the company designs and builds.

A “modular skid” is basically a pre-engineered and manufactured piece of equipment, like a small power plant, or a water chiller, built into a steel structure resembling a large shipping container. The company that orders it simply has to bring it in and hook it up to utilities instead of building it into the facility itself.

Performance Fabricating builds and fabricates structural platforms, conveyors and automation system components for industrial companies, warehouse parcel-and-post companies and airports.

They have indirect clients like Amazon, FedEx, UPS, Chicago O’Hare Airport, LAX and Boston Logan airports, “...any major airport,” said Miller.

Their clients are nationwide, with many centered in Michigan and the Midwest.

furnishing a large, luxurious home, acquiring expensive vehicle, traveling by private jet, and enjoying various other trappings of wealth and comfort. The theft of these funds had serious consequences for the credit union.”

The Clarkston Brandon Community Credit Union became insolvent from the embezzlement and joined with the Michigan State University Federal Credit Union.

The statement reads, “The scope of LaJoice’s theft is shocking, and reflects a level of greed that is difficult to fathom... The crime was not the result of a momentary lack of judgment. Indeed, it persisted for years, and was the product of premeditation, calculation, and an utter indifference to the consequences of the crime to others.”

Michael Manley, LaJoice’s defense attorney, recommended 60 months, or five years imprisonment, which is the amount LaJoice is asking for.

Manley said LaJoice’s acceptance of responsibility has been “exceptional,” and cites how he turned himself in even when it was possible he could have continued the scheme. The defense attorney also pointed out that LaJoice has agreed to pay restitution in full. He also has avoided going to trial and costing the courts several hundreds of thousands of dollars in fees by pleading guilty.

“LaJoice intends to make MSUFCU whole” and that his family had no idea he was embezzling millions.

For LaJoice, this has been the most painful part; having the shame and hurt of what he has done to his family and the dire financial straits he has stranded them in. Without the grace and benevolence of MSUFCU and the state and federal governments, Mrs. LaJoice and her children would be penniless,” the statement reads.

Manley said that the recommendation by the U.S. of 132 months, or 11 years, is “simply too high.”

“The recommended sentences for Michael LaJoice, 37, the man who embezzled $18.6 million, are 11 years from the prosecutor’s office, and five years from his defense attorney. He is disgraced. He will never be offered employment where trust is involved. For a person with LaJoice’s lack of criminal history and violent tendencies, 60 months is just punishment,” Manley’s statement reads.

LaJoice committed bank fraud from October 2007 to December 2015. In federal court, LaJoice said he committed check fraud by addressing cashier checks out to himself, along with a few other methods. As chief financial officer (CFO), he was able to write large checks.

LaJoice was also ordered to pay restitution of $17,748,380.

LaJoice’s properties, including his multi-million dollar home in Tyrone Township, were sold to help pay restitution. SkyPoint Ventures executed a purchase agreement to acquire the Fenton City commercial properties last summer.

The properties that SkyPoint Ventures has purchased include 225 W. Caroline St., the now-vacant lot where LaJoice planned to construct a multi-million dollar, mixed development called “Riverview.”

LaJoice also faces embezzlement charges in Oakland County Circuit Court. Manley said he will plead guilty March 27 during his pretrial at 1:30 p.m.

SUMMARY

The recommended sentences for Michael LaJoice, 37, the man who embezzled $18.6 million, are 11 years from the prosecutor’s office, and five years from his defense attorney.

He has been lodged at Oakland County Jail since.

The plea deal in federal court was agreed upon by Manley and Philip Ross, the assistant U.S. attorney with the Asset Forfeiture Unit, along with John Neal, chief of the White Collar Crime Unit.

LaJoice was also ordered to pay restitution of $17,748,380.

TEEN ARRESTED FOR SELLING DRUGS

A 19-year-old Fenton male was arrested on March 15 at 4:40 p.m. for having three outstanding warrants following a controlled drug buy involving FANG (Flint Area Narcotics Group), Sgt. Dave Reinfielder said Fenton police assisted FANG, which had the teen under surveillance, on the controlled buy, where the teen sold drugs to a FANG member. Following his arrest for selling drugs, Fenton police learned that the teen had three outstanding arrest warrants. The teen was transported to the Flint City Jail, where he took care of his warrants. to 12,000 feet. For six weeks, I slept there on a cot three nights a week, just to acclimate myself to the high altitude.”

Peabody left Fenton for Africa on March 1 and after 24 hours of travel, reached Tanzania the next day. They started their hike on March 3, starting at 4,000 feet, ascending to 10,000 feet the first day, then 13,000 feet, and 15,000 feet to Kosovo Base Camp.

They got to base camp on the fifth day, where they left their bags, tents and other supplies before making their final trek to the summit of Uhuru Peak, waking at midnight for the 1 a.m. final hike to the summit.

It was a very emotional experience for Peabody, who says that the shear physicality of the climb stripped her right down to the core, where all she could concentrate on was the next step, her next breath.

“It was a once in a lifetime experience for the simplicity of life, really quiet. It was the most life-changing experience you can have,” said Peabody. “When all of the layers of life kind of fall away, and you can only rely on your breath alone, life gets really quiet. It was the most incredible and most eye-opening experience for the simplicity of how life can be when we don’t have all these layers.”

The trip to the top was only part of the journey; it still took a full two days to descend. “The last day was eight solid hours of downhill,” said Peabody. “It was just grueling. It took everything to keep moving.”
Approximately 2.6 billion podcasts were downloaded in 2014

By Hannah Ball
hball@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

At about 6 p.m. every Sunday night, two local men can be found getting ready to talk about their favorite topics for an hour-long show — hunting and fishing.

“We talk about our hunts, our trips. We interview people in the industry, gear specialists. Anything that has to do with the outdoors, we’ll talk about,” Adams said.

This last Sunday, they talked to a man in the deer hunting industry who’s known statewide about managing the deer herd. Adams also runs a podcast channel, called Outdoor Podcast Channel, which puts out a new show every day. These focus on more specific topics related to hunting and fishing.

While podcasting has been around for years, its popularity has soared in the past decade. The Pew Research Center reported that 2.6 billion podcasts were downloaded in 2014. Podcasts are online radio shows, typically lasting about an hour, specializing on certain subjects. One of the most popular shows, Serial, is about a murder.

“Because it’s so easily accessible and it’s a genre that they really like, they can just pick it up and go,” he said.

Another local podcaster from Linden, Jason Bakowski, acknowledged there’s a good amount of people in the Fenton, Linden and Flint areas who pod cast.

“The good thing about being a podcaster is there’s no real competition. We want to make each other better,” he said.

Bakowski produces two podcasts — one is a faith-based show called Genesis to John the Revelator, which focuses on Christianity. He started Genesis around the time he became a Christian because he had a lot of questions no other podcasts could answer.

Bakowski and his two co-hosts, Pastor Herb Bruss, and a lifelong Christian, Scott Mullins, record once a month and split the show into two.

The second podcast, which he hosts with Dan Stehle, is called Nerding Out with Sandshoes and Grandad, is about nerdy topics.

“We talk about Star Wars, we talk about Dr. Who, we talk about Star Trek. Whatever it is we love and are passionate about,” he said. He’s currently trying to arrange for an actor who plays zombies on “The Walking Dead” to be on the show. Bakowski likes podcasting because it’s a different kind of format than what people are used to.

“Listening to regular radio stations, you get the same thing on every channel. It’s always the exact same format. It’s boring. With a podcast you can go onto the Google Play store, put in the genre you want to listen to and you can find a thousand podcasts,” he said.

Bakowski said he’s met many people through podcasting, and it’s helped him grow as a person.

“If people are interested in podcasting they should try it. I think everyone should have a podcast. All you need is a microphone and laptop,” he said.

“I think it’s really catching on with younger people. The millennials already adhere to that concept,” he said. “The older people who listen to our show, I get constant feedback from them.

According to businessinsider.com, about 20 percent of people ages 18 to 49 listen to at least one podcast a month. Listening to a podcast is easy because of technology. People can listen to a show using earbuds at work, or while they’re driving or doing chores.

violation of state statute.

Commissioner David Martin (District 9) cast the other dissenting vote.

Schaube’s opinion states, “… that the Age of Majority Act, 1971 PA 79, MCL 722.51 et seq., preempts a city ordinance that provides ‘a person shall not sell, give or furnish a tobacco product in any form to a person under 21 years of age.’

“The ordinance directly conflicts with state law by barring the sale or furnishing of tobacco products to 18- to 20-year-olds because the Age of Majority Act prohibits treating these young adults differently from persons 21 years and older with respect to their legal capacity to purchase tobacco products.”

Shapiro said, “Any individual, merchant or customer ticketed by the Genesee County Health Department, can take that AG opinion into court immediately. It is totally unenforceable. If a business takes it to court, the court is going to throw it out.”

Senator Dave Robertson said he spoke with the attorney general’s office the morning of Wednesday, March 15. Robertson, too, referenced the AG’s opinion 7294, dated Feb. 2, which was in response to a request by Senator Rick Jones, chair of the Senate Judiciary Commission.

“In my conversation with the legislative liaison office, the county’s resolution/ordinance is unenforceable,” said Robertson. “A presentation of the AG’s opinion in a court of law would result in the citation being immediately thrown out.”

Robertson said this should not be surprising since it appears the county Board of Commissioners acted contrary to the recommendation of their own legal counsel.

The AG’s opinion 7294 was issued on Feb. 2. The Board of Commissioners voted on the resolution on Feb. 14.

“To take this action after the attorney general’s Feb. 2 opinion was issued … they are clearly out of step here. The opinion is clear,” he said.

Robertson said, “I will also point out as an aside that I was lobbied last year in the late summer or early fall from folks advocating the same change in law, lowering the legal age to purchase from 18 to 21 on tobacco. I would point out the contradiction of their coming to me as a legislator for this change. They must clearly understand that the law is not with them.

“They can’t very well argue the ordinance has validity at the county level when they acknowledge they need action at the state level as well.”

Senator Dave Robertson

“They can’t very well argue the ordinance has validity at the county level when they acknowledge they need action at the state level as well,” he added. “There is no question, the AG has opined they are out of step and it can’t be enforced.

Shapiro said as much after the Board of Commissioners’ vote in February. “I agree that smoking is a problem, but the place for this decision is at the state level,” he said at the time.

“I honestly am trying my best to make this world a better place,” said Shapiro. “I think people will respect me more in order to promote my compassionate, conservative agenda. I am not afraid to be unpopular with other commissioners in order to fight for my constituents and the rule of law.”

MAPLE SYRUP

What also makes Jewell’s story unique is that he accomplishes all of his work, including demos, re-enactments, camping, hunting, volunteering at St. John’s and more, while being legally blind.

There is actually one thing Jewell can’t do; he can’t drive, because of his vision. His wife of 27 years, Ronda, gets him everywhere he needs to go.

While none of the many legends regarding maple syrup are actually confirmed, the first written descriptions of maple sugaring appear in letters or journals of early Europeans in North America.

“We were the people who had it first,” said Jewell, 58. He is a passionate supporter of Native American rights and culture, because being his grandfather’s knee many of the skills that he still uses today.

“He taught me how to hunt and fish,” said Jewell. “He also taught me beadwork, even though at the time, I thought that was woman’s work. I was raised like I was one of the tribe, and my goal today is to keep the Chippewa culture alive and carry on the traditions.”

Jewell is a little concerned about this year’s maple syrup run, because of the relatively mild winter.

“This is going to be a tough year; the sap has already started to run. It could run for a month. It could run for a week or could shut off at any time. We were the people who had it first,” said Jewell.

“The legend taught man a lesson about how to gather, hunt and grow. The maple tree was one of these special gifts. The sap was as thick and sweet as honey and ran all year.

One day, the spirit of Nanabozho came upon a village without any people present. He searched and searched and finally found all the men, women, children, even dogs in a nearby grove of maples, lying under the trees, allowing syrup to drip into their wide-open mouths.

He decided to bring water in a birch bark bucket from the nearby lake and pour it into the trees until the syrup became thin and runny.

Calling out to the people, he told them what he had done and warned them that the syrup would stop flowing. Furthermore, he said that in the future, it would run only in late winter when food was scarce, so they should return to farming, fishing and hunting.

To work with this new sap, he told them to gather it in birch bark buckets and collect stones and firewood. The stones should be heated in a fire and dropped into the sap, which has been collected in buckets, until it boils and turns into syrup.

Linden seniors end careers with a huge positive

Grand Blanc — Life on the Linden varsity boys basketball team hasn’t been easy in recent years.

When the current senior class began roaming the hallways at Linden High School during the 2013-14 school year, the varsity boys basketball team posted a 3-18 season, and it had been five years since the Eagles had won a district basketball game, much less won a district tournament.

As the seniors entered the varsity program, the team’s progress, if any, couldn’t be termed anything more positive than slow. Their sophomore seasons — which included Tyler Hoeberling and Hunter Michael — was a 3-17 season, ending during their first district contest. And last season, the squad showed a little progress, improving to 5-15, but the squad still lost in the opening round of districts.

Their senior seasons looked to be on a rocky start when coach Anthony Wright left the varsity coaching position in the fall in pursuit of other professional opportunities.

Lake Fenton plays complete game, crushes Frankenmuth, 68-52

Corunna — Last season the Lake Fenton varsity boys basketball team didn’t exactly know if they ‘belonged’ in a Class B regional championship game.

Sure the Blue Devils earned the right to play New Haven, but there remained questions if they truly could hang with a squad of that caliber. The end result was a super competitive 53-50 loss.

This season there was no question in the Blue Devils’ minds that they deserved to be one of the top 16 teams playing for a Class B regional championship on Wednesday. They knew they belonged and proved it to Frankenmuth convincingly for four quarters. Lake Fenton led for the entire contest except for about a minute, crushing the Frankenmuth Eagles 68-52 in the Class B regional championship game held at Corunna High School.

Game: Class B state quarterfinal contest at Bay City Central.
Foe: Ludington
Tip-off: 7 p.m.
Next: The winner advances to the Class B state semifinals, playing either Williamston or River Rouge at the Breslin Center on Friday at 7:50 p.m.

The Blue Devils’ defense slowed down Frankenmuth’s potent transition game and dominated the boards. Meanwhile, on offense Lake Fenton’s top three scoring options — Jalen Miller, Isaac Golson and Andrew Forster — each had huge games. In short, the Eagles never had a chance against the driven Blue Devils, determined to advance to the state quarterfinals.

to make amends for last season's regional title loss.
Lake Fenton (20-5) earned a spot in the state quarterfinals for the first time in school history, facing Ludington (23-2) on Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Bay City Central High School.

“We really do (think we belong),” Foerster said. “I was talking to the guys and usually we are like, ‘We think we can win.’ But today we were like, ‘We are going to win. We are going to beat Frankenmuth.’ That’s how it was.

“The Blue Devils’ play was special all night long. The last time Lake Fenton tailed came at 5-2 after Frankenmuth’s star player Mario Whitley hit a 3-pointer with 6:43 left in the opening quarter. It didn’t matter too much because just 23 seconds later Golson hit his first of four 3-pointers, tying the contest. About a minute later he hit his second, and the Blue Devils led 8-5 and would never lose it. Lake Fenton led 13-10 entering the second quarter.

During the second stanza, Whiteley suffaced his third and second fouls within two minutes of the start of the period. That forced him to the bench, and Lake Fenton went on a roll. The Blue Devils led just 16-15 after a conventional three-point play by Sam Gray (a layup and a converted free throw after being fouled) but Golson remained hot and hit another baseline jumper with 2:20 left in front of the quiet Frankenmuth student fans. That trey sparked a 15-7 Lake Fenton run, giving the Blue Devils a 31-22 lead entering halftime.

The third quarter was Miller time, Jalenstyle for the Blue Devils. He hit hoops on Lake Fenton’s first three shots of the second half, helping the Blue Devils maintain a 37-26 lead midway through the quarter.

The Blue Devils led the Eagles 47-35 entering the fourth quarter, putting them in a position than allowing coaches to call time outs. It would make the game much more exciting.
