Artists show off kaleidoscope of winged creatures

Twelve uniquely adorned butterfly sculptures unveiled

Fenton — One by one, Lisa Bayer of Fenton pulled the black cloth off the tall fiberglass butterflies under a drum roll provided by Fenton musical mainstays, Tie-Dyed Giants. The butterflies had been painted with the vision of their artists.

The kaleidoscope of butterflies took over downtown Fenton on Friday, June 16.

Rackham Park, behind the Fenton Community and Cultural Center, was filled with art tents, the din of music, and children dressed as butterflies to commemorate the monthly Arts Are the Heart event.

The Fenton Arts Council hosts these events on the third Friday of every month, and this month was special because of the sculptures. These 3-square-foot butterflies were sponsored by local businesses, and painted by local artists ranging from Fenton artists to those from the surrounding community.

Les Bland dies unexpectedly at the age of 70

Sudden illness claims life of former Fenton councilman and long-time DPW director

By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-629-6823

Family and friends were shocked to learn of the unexpected death of Leslie P. (Les) Bland on Father’s Day morning, June 18.

He had just turned 70 years old in May. Bland’s daughters, Autumn and April, reported on his Facebook page on Saturday, June 17, that their father had been admitted to the hospital and asked for prayers for him. Their request resulted in a barrage of well wishes and prayers.

Once news of Bland’s death was posted on the Tri-County Times site (www.tctimes.com) and Facebook page, the comments came pouring in, with scores of people expressing their shock, dismay and prayers for the family (See sidebar).

A native of Indiana, Bland came to Fenton in 1966. Bland served as Fenton’s director of the Department of Public Works for more than 41 years before retiring in 2011. He then ran for a seat on the Fenton City Council and served there for a year before retiring.

On Monday, June 21, Genesee County Circuit Court Judge Judith Fullerton ruled against “Tobacco 21.”

According to County Commissioner Drew Shapiro (6th District), who was in the courtroom, Fullerton ruled against “Tobacco 21” in a 10-page written opinion. The law was passed in 2014 to raise the legal age for buying tobacco products from 18 to 21.

No support for pet evaluation motion

GCAC director says shelter already uses similar protocol

By Hannah Ball
hb@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Flint Twp. — A motion to create temporary mandatory holding times and a pet evaluation program for strays didn’t receive any support from the Genesee County Board of Commissioners meeting on Monday, June 19.

The motion was brought forth by Commissioner Drew Shapiro, approximately two weeks after a 16-year-old dog, Capone, was euthanized within three hours of being brought to the Genesee County Animal Control (GCAC) shelter.

The motion would require the Animal Control Subcommittee to develop a pet evaluation matrix similar to those used at other shelters across the country as a best practice, Shapiro said. It would have been developed with input from animal control professionals, animal advocates and veterinarians.

“The motion received no second. Although this was disappointing, it will be sent back to the subcommittee for review,” he said.

GCAC Director Paul Wallace said they already have a system like the pet evaluation matrix. The veterinarian looks at all the animals that are brought in and assesses their health. Every animal gets processed, heartworm medication, and flea protection.

They’re planning on developing a list with signs and symptoms, like the pet evaluation matrix, but much simpler, as a way of further documenting the health of the animals.

Capone

Wallace was in the building on June 6 when Capone was put down. “Immediately we know he’s an old, old dog and he’s not walking very well,” he said.

He was processed and put in the quiet section of the shelter.

“He couldn’t get comfortable. It’s painful for him to be in there. He can’t lay down, he can’t stand up and he’s crying,” he said. The veterinarian did a thorough medical exam and discovered he had neuropathy in his tail going up his body.

“Basically it’s a paralysis. That’s why the dog couldn’t walk well. His rear feet — he can’t feel them. He can’t wag his tail. He’s paralyzed essentially from somewhere mid spine back...he can’t really stand up. The nails are grown out. Clearly this dog hasn’t had any care in a long time.”

Because Capone couldn’t feel his feet, he was walking on his knuckles and his nails were grown all the way. If another veterinarian could have done any good for Capone, Wallace said they would have gotten him more care.

“If I would have left that animal in a cage for 12 hours — he couldn’t stand up, he couldn’t move, couldn’t turn around, couldn’t get comfortable — that would have been animal cruelty,” he said.

He said the owner was upset when he called, and they offered him the dog’s remains.

“He’s angry. I don’t blame him. It hurts. It’s a sad thing. The only thing I would tell him if I got a chance to talk to him was that when his dog was put to sleep, one of the staff held the dog’s head in their lap and petted him,” he said.

“That’s what I do when I put my dogs down. I’ve had quite a few of them. I’ve always had dogs and cats and I’m right there with them.”

Wallace said that 90.6 percent of the animals that are brought in never find an owner.

“There was a 90-percent chance that we would never find the owner,” he said.

The dog’s owner, Serafin Montoya, said they would have gotten Capone’s condition.

“What do they expect from a 16-year-old dog?” he said. He reached out to Todd MacDonell, the Linden resident who found Capone, to get his side of the story.

“You’re sitting there, you’re mourning him, and the owner,” he said. “That’s what I do when I put my dogs down. I’ve had quite a few of them. I’ve always had dogs and cats and I’m right there with them.”

How Google and Apple spy on you

Phones can record where you go, how long you’re there for, and if you take photos

By Hannah Ball
hb@tctimes.com; 810-433-6792

Google records what you search for online. It knows where you go, how long you stay there, and if you take any photos there.

Operating systems for phones and computers seem to become more all-knowing with every passing year, by recording information on searches and locations, and they know more about you than you think.

Two of the biggest players in this business are Google and Apple.

If you search for something online, such as comforters or pillows, expect to see ads for that same product when you’re scrolling through Facebook and simply surfing the web. Some internet users might find this helpful — you could find different brands of products you’re more interested in. But it could be seen as an invasion of privacy and taking advantage of consumers.

With your location setting turned on, it’s uncommon to get a notification from Google, asking you to rate the restaurant where you’re currently eating. You don’t even have to “check in” on Facebook for Google to see.

Weddings and funerals

t my daughter’s wedding a few years ago, the bride and groom gave out little trees as “wedding favors.” My comment (completely ignored by my wife) was, “Wedding favors? Isn’t it enough that we’re feeding 200-plus people a gourmet meal at a swanky country club, providing them with a 10-piece band to dance to, a five-tiered wedding cake for dessert and serving them with enough booze to keep congress tomato-faced for a month? Do we really need to give gifts as a Favor”?

Here is what

had to say about ‘wedding favors’ in a recent issue: “Gone are the days of giving guests mixed nuts in little paper cups as wedding favors. Today’s brides have so many more options. Start by choosing a unique favor container, such as tiny tins, clear plastic cones or little gossamer bags—and filling them with your favorite treats. The choices are truly endless.”

The fact that the choices are endless is just one of the many reasons that today’s typical ‘modern bride’ is lying awake at night, staring at the ceiling thinking, “Where do I get tiny tins? Personalized ribbon? How do I personalize ribbon? Gossamer bags? Should I use gossamer tins with personalized gossamer ribbon or clear plastic gossamer cones with personalized gossamer tins? And what in the hell is a gossamer?”

And so, as the sun peeks over the eastern horizon, the sleepless bride-to-be grimly rises to face another day of endless decision-making for her special day because the planning logistics of today’s “modern wedding” make the preparations for a military invasion of a foreign country look like a cakewalk in comparison.

These thousands of decisions include such critical details as (in no particular order): choosing a date, a guest list, a reception site, a photographer, a caterer, where to register for gifts, designing ‘unique’ invitations, finding out what a gossamer is, writing vows, centerpieces for the tables, choosing the perfect wedding dress, seating arrangements, flowers, a wedding cake, a band, a church, a minister, finding out how to personalize a gossamer, planning the rehearsal dinner—and literally thousands of other elements that must be absolutely flawless in order to make her special day the PERFECT wedding.

Meanwhile, the bride-to-be will select a half-dozen unfortunate victims to become members of the most abused group of women in America—bridesmaids. These pitiful wretches will be subjected to the timeless tradition of spending hundreds of dollars, and an entire evening, flouncing about in a fluorescent, puffy sleeved, dress—complete with the requisite rear-mounted bow approximately the size of a stealth bomber.

I agree with my good friend Dave Barry who wonders why it takes a year to plan the PERFECT wedding but only a couple days to put together the PERFECT funeral. The elements are basically the same: a church, a minister, music, flowers, guests, food, relatives you don’t like, awkward speeches by nervous speakers—they are basically the same event.

What are your thoughts on the Bill Cosby case?

“I believe he is guilty. Too many cases against him. I don’t think that many women are conspiracy theorizing against him”

—Malisa Clendenin
Fenton

“Who really knows what goes on behind closed doors? It’s not for me to judge. He helped so many people, so many so often, so early on. I saw him once live, I thought he was very clever and his ability to speak was second to none.”

—S.K. Brown
Fenton

“It’s a classic Hollywood-style case, that really has no merit because it has been so long, but America thrives on sensationalism.”

—Mark Peterson
Tyrone Township

“I would say that it (the mis-trials) was expected because of his status.”

—Jessica Worden
Linden

“Makes me wonder why there was a mistrial. It should have been a clear-cut case. He basically confronted to the crimes. I don’t know if it was because of his wealth and celebrity status or not.”

River Fest is this Sunday
■ Event to take place at Linden Mill Pond

By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-629-6823

The Keepers of the Shiawassee River will be hosting its annual Shiawassee River Fest on Sunday, June 25, from 12 to 7 p.m. The event takes place at the Linden Mill Pond this year.

Featured activities include live local music from 12 to 7 p.m., kayak/paddle board demos, arts and crafts, business and food vendors.

The popular cardboard boat regatta will take place as well as a kayak, raffle, fishing tournament and more.

“The Shiawassee River has become a destination for kayakers and canoeists from all over Michigan and neighboring states,” said Brad Jacob, chairman of the Keepers of the Shiawassee River. “The appeal is the ‘Up North Close By’ feeling paddlers get as the river flows through floodplains, high banks, wooded areas, farm fields and quaint communities. Its twists, turns, beaver dams and occasional ponds add adventure to their trips.”

The Keepers of The Shiawassee are an all-volunteer group dedicated to keeping the river clean and passable to river enthusiasts.

“We are coordinating with municipalities and river groups up and down river to acquire a National River Trail Designation, one of only 13 in the nation,” said Jacob.

The Keepers are working to improve launch infrastructure along the river to increase access.

“We currently have projects in the works with the city of Fenton at the dam, a full calendar of paddling events, river cleanups, water quality testing, and signage projects.

Sunday’s Shiawassee River Fest Music Festival is the Keepers’ main fundraiser for the year.

“We are looking for sponsors,” said Jacob. “With your help, we can continue our efforts to maintain a healthy river that is accessible to all.”

Outdoor tourism brings 3.2 million visitors and over a billion dollars to our state, said Jacob. Visitors to the river spend time and money in the communities that the river flows through.

“Please consider helping us by contributing to our projects either through sponsorship or donation,” he said. For more information visit www.keepersoftheshiawassee.com.

The cardboard box regatta is a popular activity at the annual Shiawassee River Fest.

Longest day of the year means summer is officially here
■ Annual solstice sunset will be at 9:16 p.m. today

By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-629-6823

Happy first day of summer!

It’s also the longest day of the year, which outdoor enthusiasts are usually happy about because it gives them extra time to enjoy an early morning run or a late night boat ride — or doing whatever they normally enjoy doing during the daylight hours.

There are two solstices each year — one in the winter and one in the summer. The summer solstice occurs when the tilt of Earth’s axis is most inclined toward the sun and is directly above the Tropic of Cancer.

It actually signals the moment the sun’s path stops moving northward in the sky, and the start of days becoming steadily shorter as the slow march to winter begins.

The longest day of the year will take place on Thursday, Dec. 21 and is known as the winter solstice.

In the southern hemisphere the dates of the two solstices are reversed. The winter solstice occurs on the same day in June and the summer solstice the same day in December.

At the winter solstice, the Earth’s axis is tilted farthest away from the sun directly over the Tropic of Capricorn, bringing only a few hours of daylight.

Dec. 21 will be eight hours and 49 minutes shorter than the June 21 solstice, when the sun will set at 9:13 p.m. in Michigan.

FUN THINGS TO DO ON THE LONGEST DAY
Watch the sunset — Identify a good spot in advance and enthrall yourself with the stunning hues of nature as the sun goes down. Barbecue, cookout, pool party or picnic. This is easily one of the most popular ideas for celebrating the solstice; a fun, sociable activity that everyone enjoys.

Take a walk in the woods — It can be among the most relaxing and invigorating things to do: stroll along foot paths listening to bird song, enjoying the sights and smells of the woods — sure to get you charged up!

Visit the beach — You can do as much or as little as you like at the beach.

Take a concert — If there isn’t something in your immediate vicinity, you can probably find one within an hour’s drive from the Fenton area.

Go fishing — Or golfing or whatever it is that you enjoy doing most. A day out in the sun and fresh air will do you good!

Be a ‘day tripper’ — Visit a monument, a museum, a park, a wildlife preserve, zoo, or a historical site.

Whether for self-esteem, flirting, sharing adventures, they are here to stay

By Sally Rummel
news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Selfies are popping up everywhere in the world of social media — a phenomenon that has gone way beyond the simple definition of “a photograph of yourself, taken by yourself.”

Taken by activating the front-facing camera on most smartphones, selfies are especially popular among teens and the 18- to 34-year-old demographic, according to Mastersinpsychologyguide.com.

That’s because young people in this age group are heavier digital users than their older counterparts. Because most people have access to their phones all the time, they can easily take selfies without having to find a camera. It’s with them 24/7.

You’ll find selfies displayed mostly on social media, with photo-based social networks like Instagram and Snapchat creating even more selfie opportunities.

Instagram offers many filters that you can use to make your selfies look instantly aged, arty or highlighted. Snapchat allows users to chat using photos or videos that self-destruct a few seconds after being opened by the recipient, so the goal can be to take as many selfies as possible to keep the messages going.

Facebook isn’t as big a platform for selfies as Instagram or Snapchat, but having access to Facebook via mobile apps makes it easy to post selfies for friends to see.

Why do people take selfies?

For younger people, it’s often a way to stay connected to relationships, either romantic interests or friendships. It can also be today’s high-tech method of flirting, especially if someone is too shy to do it in person.

Taking a selfie can be a way for people to genuinely express themselves by posting online what they are doing or thinking at a given time — it’s not always driven by narcissism.

Sometimes it’s the exact opposite. For people who feel less confident with their own self-image, they’ll post a selfie to get more comfortable with their own appearance.

Other people do like to get noticed on social media and get attention from as many people as possible. Every “like,” share and positive comment can be a boost to their confidence.

In real life, people are constantly trying to stand out, and the selfie helps some people make their own statement to the world.

Selfies can help young people express their own identity by capturing a moment in their lives that meant something to them, helping them make a difference.

Selfies can also be a way to document your own life, your vacations, your special events, etc. It’s all about being social and sharing your daily events where hundreds of people will see it. It’s as close to being a celebrity as most people will be.
In my journey through life, I have experienced many things and have done my best to listen to people who give good advice.

I hope that all follow this path and a habit I have developed is to read about what successful people say about reaching their goals.

Since I love sports, for this week’s column I will share what some rather famous sports figures have told us about the topic.

“Never let the fear of striking out get in your way.” — Babe Ruth, baseball player

“Never let your head hang down. Never give up and sit down and grieve, find another way.” — Satchel Paige, baseball player

“I ain’t over till it’s over.” — Yogi Berra, baseball player

I’ll stop with this last quote but as one can easily see, the four quoted Hall of Fame figures tell us that the key to success is never giving up.

Each of these men worked their way up the sports ladder to achieve success and stardom. Their words carry great weight because they backed them up with their own actions.

I fully realize that this column is supposed to be about the law and so far, I haven’t really mentioned much about it.

However, my message today actually does relate to my being a lawyer, because when I first became one it was made clear to me that I was not only a lawyer but a counselor as well.

I have always believed that giving good counsel is as important as giving good advice on the law. Keeping in line with being a counselor, my counseling here is simply this — no matter what you do for a living or in your life’s affairs always strive to do your best.

In my present position as a judge, I sometimes see people in court who unfortunately haven’t lived up to this goal and don’t realize how it affects their families and friends.

Getting back to some sports advice, I will leave you with this from Mr. Lombardi — “The quality of a person’s life is in direct proportion to their commitment to excellence, regardless of their chosen field of endeavor.”

Fenton Township stalls on two special assessments

The issue raised by residents at the Monday meeting was whether people who don’t live on Eleanor Street should be included in the district and have to pay for it.

Township Attorney Jack Belzner said it seems inappropriate to him that the township would tax parcels of land but the residents don’t get a say on it.

“It just doesn’t seem correct,” he said.

The board postponed taking any action on this issue Monday and will discuss it July 10.

Projects would improve Dartmouth Drive and Eleanor Street

By Hannah Ball

Fenton Twp. — Because of resident input at the Monday meeting, the Fenton Township Board of Trustees scheduled two more public hearings for two special assessment districts meant to improve two roads.

One public hearing pertained to the Dartmouth Drive Road Improvement Special Assessment District. In 2014, the board established a road improvement special assessment district for repaving Dartmouth Drive. However, when engineers were designing the project, the Genesee County Road Commission discovered that portions of the existing road were outside of the existing right-of-way.

The commission recommended moving the right-of-way to match the existing road, instead of moving the road back. Several property owners had to sign right-of-way agreements to formally convey the appropriate legal descriptions to the county. Two property owners would not sign the agreement, and the project could not be constructed. The board asked the GCRC to redesign the project to exclude the locations with no right-of-way agreement.

Operations Manager/Deputy Clerk Thomas Broecker said the district includes 14 or 15 property owners.

At the Monday meeting, the board planned to dissolve the existing district and then establish a new one to only include properties that benefit from the project.

However, multiple Dartmouth Drive residents spoke expressed concerns over the cost three years ago compared to the cost of the new district. One lane will remain open in the work zone. The storm sewer installation on the east side of North Holly Road will help alleviate water that is frequently over the road following storm events. The work is expected to last approximately one week and should be completed approximately June 30. North Holly Road carries approximately 7,000 vehicles daily.

STORM SEWER WORK ON NORTH HOLLY ROAD

The Road Commission for Oakland County will begin storm sewer work on North Holly Road, just north of Evans Road in Holly Township on Monday, June 26. During the work, the road will remain open to traffic under flag control. One lane will remain open in the work zone. The storm sewer installation on the east side of North Holly Road will help alleviate water that is frequently over the road following storm events. The work is expected to last approximately one week and should be completed approximately June 30. North Holly Road carries approximately 7,000 vehicles daily.

According to whmi.com, Livingston County officials have rejected establishing a tax district in Hartland Township, which would effectively kill development plans for the Emagine movie theater.

The new entertainment venue was planned at Hartland Towne Square in Hartland Township on the north side of M-59, just 13 miles from Fenton.

According to a May 12 Tri-County Times article, the 64,000-square-foot theater would be built on undeveloped land south of the Meijer store and would feature 10 screens, plus an IMAX-style screen, which the company called an “EMAX experience.”

Setting this movie theater apart from nearby theaters, NCG Trillium in Grand Blanc and MJR Digital Cinemas in Brighton, would have been the serving of craft beer, wine and cocktails.

Features, including leather reclining seats, were also in the works.

Hartland Township Planning Director Troy Langer said in May that plaza owner Ramco-Gershenson Properties Trust was in the process of obtaining a liquor license. “They’ve applied for it. They’re in the process,” said Langer.

Developers have also requested a tax abatement, which has slowed down the process, according to Langer.

The Livingston County Board of Commissioners voted 5-4 on Monday, June 19 to reject Hartland Township’s decision to establish a Commercial Rehabilitation District. The township had sought to establish the district so the proposed Emagine movie theater would be eligible for tax abatement over a seven-year period.

Emagine Entertainment officials and developers have previously said the project, with an estimated $15 million budget, would not be justified without the seven-year abatement worth $500,000, according to whmi.com.

At the county’s meeting, Emagine Entertainment CEO Paul Glantz said if the district were denied, his best idea moving forward would be to pursue another community for the project. Following the meeting and board’s decision, he declined to comment.

from amateur to professional.
Joan Horcha of the Fenton Arts Council said this year’s Art is the Heart theme of butterflies was chosen because of the newly gifted steel butterfly sculpture, and its new home on LeRoy street. “Also, butterflies represent transformation,” said Horcha.

“The city of Fenton is transforming into a more beautiful and culturally exciting destination.”

The gathered crowd gasped and applauded, celebrating the individual visions painted by an artist on fiberglass butterfly sculptures.

Mark Hamel of The Laundry emceed the unveiling, and handed the microphone off to the artists to talk about what inspired their designs.

Artist Jill Creech Bauer of Flint said, “Obviously I like bright colors.” Her design is bold, with decisively drawn solid colors in geometric shapes. “And I like abstract work. I started adding background and filling in details.”

While all the sculptures were done with care for the design and rendering of it, her story is unique in that she’s only been painting for nine months, and was also awarded a place at Art Prize in Grand Rapids.

The designs range from Creech Bauer’s bold, primary colors, to nearly photo-realistic airbrushing, to mosaic pieces to an ode to Michigan seasons and wildlife.

The sculptures are available for viewing at 12 local businesses (see sidebar.) They’re also for sale.

MR. PRESIDENT, DO you ever wake up in the middle of the night thinking ‘Wow, I’m in way over my head.’ Well, I do whenever you send out one of your mindless tweets.

ANIMAL CONTROL DESPERATELY needs a new veterinarian if ‘16 years of experience’ thinks that a limp and whining while in a cage are cause to end a dog’s life. Someone tell Mark Young that’s the real idiot.

HERE’S THE DIFFERENCE with your argument about seeing idiots with Hitler/Obama signs. You’re seeing Democratic senators and congressmen that are doing these same kinds of things, as well as leftist idiots. Democrats are so hypocritical it’s laughable.

HOW LONG BEFORE that ugly orange barrel is removed and the light fixed at Shiawassee and LeRoy? It’s been there for months. It’s such a shame, shows no pride in all the beautiful work that has been done downtown.

served a four-year term.

Among Bland’s many accomplishments includes the overseeing of construction of the city’s state-of-the-art Water Treatment and Department of Public Works (DPW) facilities.

In fact, a sign will be going up on the public works building on Alloy Drive that renames it the “Leslie P. Bland Public Works Facility.”

The honor was bestowed upon Bland at his 70th birthday party given by his family at the Fenton Community and Cultural Center on May 13.

At that party, the city surprised him with the unveiling of an artist rendering of the sign that will be posted on the building sometime this summer.

Bland was visibly moved by the gesture. He said at the time, “I think it’s great. It really surprised me. I had the party and my son flew up from Arizona, which was also a surprise. Then they popped that (the sign) on me which was another surprise. It’s a good deal, it’s great.”

Bland was planning to run for Fenton City Council again this November and was in the process of getting his petitions signed.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. on Friday, June 23, 2017 at The Freedom Center, 201 W. Shia-wasse Ave., with Pastor Jim Weigand officiating. Visitations will be held from 1 to 4 and 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday, June 18. Throughout the day, there were nearly 11,000 page views.

Becky Williams: I’m so sad to see this. Condolences to family and friends. Clearly he made an impact on those around him.

Mary Ann Brosten: He will be truly missed by so many, especially the Fenton Lions Club.

Laurie Isenberg: This is so sad. Les was a knowledgeable about Fenton and he had such a kind heart. His dedication to his family and to the city were huge.

Thomas Hutton: Going to miss my friend. Prayers to his family.

Denise Dunfield: Sad — he was a really good guy.

courtroom with RPF Oil, which filed a lawsuit on May 12 challenging the new ordinance, the judge ruled against it because “it is unenforceable.”

Monday, May 15 was supposed to be the day that retailers in Genesee County would be forced to abide by the new Tobacco 21 ordinance, prohibiting anyone under the age of 21 from purchasing tobacco products in the county.

But the lawsuit filed by RPF Oil Company in Grand Blanc challenged that ordinance. RPF is a family business founded in 1933 by Richard Paul Fleckenstein. Now run by grandsons Dan and John Fleckenstein, RPF supplies gasoline and diesel to more than 100 Michigan gas stations, according to rpf.com.

The lawsuit alleged that the regulation, adopted by the Genesee County Board of Commissioners on Feb. 14 is in direct conflict with the Age of Majority Act (MCL 722.51), and direct conflicts with the sign requirements of the Youth Tobacco Act (MCL 722.641)(2).

“Judge Fullerton ruled in favor of the oil company and the attorney general,” said Shapiro.

Shapiro said he has never argued against the fact that the use of tobacco products can result in some serious health issues.

“This is about avoiding a lawsuit and saving taxpayer dollars on unwinnable lawsuits,” he said.

“If this is how the American Heart Association spends its money people should be careful who they donate the money to.”

This particular lawsuit, according to Shapiro, cost the American Heart Association and Trinity Health $50,000.

“1 hope the residents of Genesee County see my efforts and recognize that I am fighting against a political machine that has been operating at status quo for decades,” he said.

Shapiro said the Board of Commissioners is meeting to see if they want to appeal Fullerton’s decision.

“If they do, which I think is absurd, I will vehemently oppose it the way I already have,” he said.

to know where you are.

Apple was in the hot seat in 2011 when it was revealed that they stored geographical locations for users on an unprotected file, according to wired.com. Apple explained their data storing in regards to location to Congress members in 2010.

This geographical information is only recorded if you have the location services option turned on. Critics say it’s an invasion of privacy and Apple has said that it helps them provide quicker and more precise location services with GPS.

However, there’s a setting in iPhones that lets you look at your location history. It can tell you how often you’ve visited work, home, stores, and other places. Samsung devices have this feature too, and also includes photos you’ve taken while at those locations. This means that if someone steals your iPhone, they have access to information on where you travel, where you go to work, where your home is, and any other locations you travel to with your phone.

To avoid this, go to your settings button on your phone and go to location settings. Next, simply turn the location feature off. Google also records every word you type into its search bar — whether you hit enter or not, according to usnews.com. This also applies to search engines like Firefox and Safari.

Google can even scan and record emails if the email server uses that company. Your incoming emails from Yahoo or Hotmail could be scanned, according to usnews.com. You may delete emails, but Google does not. Even if you type an email and opt not to send it, the company could save everything you write.

Popular sites owned by Google, such as YouTube, supply Google with even more data like how long you watch kitten and puppy videos at work. The company regularly tracks what pages you visit, how long you visit them for, what you do on that page, whether you buy something or just click around, and they record the page you were on before and the page you went to after.

Both Google and Apple have gotten in trouble for overstepping their bounds.

In 2012, the Federal Trade Commission fined Google $22.5 million for illegally tracking people who use Apple’s iPhone, iPad and Macintosh computers. In 2010, the FCC discovered that Google was collecting location information like passwords, emails, browsing histories, financial rec-cords and more from unencrypted Wi-Fi networks using Street View. They were collecting location information like this for at least three years in more than 30 countries. The FCC fined them $25,000.

Other ways Google tracks you

Google AdSense: Website owners can sprinkle small ads provided by Google on their site. You don’t have to click on an ad for Google to collect information on what sites you’re visiting.

Google AdWords: Website owners can embed targeted Google ads as words into their text content. Again, just looking at the page gives Google information.

Widgets: The tiny icons let you tell people on Facebook that you like the page you’re on and also allows Google to collect data.

New organizers help triathlon grow

Fenton Twp. — At 13 years old, Midland’s Shelbee Simanskey was one of the youngest competitors at the seventh-annual FirstTry/FastTry Triathlon held at Linden County Park on Saturday morning.

Despite the swim being only 300 yards long, Simanskey was the first woman out of Byram Lake, finishing it in 5:17.5. Meanwhile it took Ward 7:46.1 to finish the swim. From there, Ward closed the gap during the 9.1-mile bike portion and the two were running next to each other during the 2-mile run portion. However, Simanskey pulled away in the final 100 yards, earning the win in what was idea 70-degree and overcast weather. Simanskey didn’t expect to win the event.

“When I saw there were 200 participants in the FastTry portion of the FirstTry Triathlon (above) begin the swim portion of their race. Midland’s Shelbee Simanskey (far left) won the women’s FastTry event with a time of 50:58.5, while Fenton’s Chad Brizendine won the men’s FastTry event with a time of 41:27.6. There were 202 participants in Saturday’s race.

“I really like the event. The hills are a great place and a large volunteer presence. The fact that it remains a part of the tri-county summer schedule, thrills past race director Dan Skinner.

“When I saw there were 200 entrants I couldn’t have been happier,” Skinner said. “I’m glad it’s grown. We were probably around 150 when we started and it keeps growing. Every year it is a pain in the butt putting it together, but when you see says like today, that’s when you are rewarded.”

Bramlett said the race remains see ORGANIZERS on 13

In fact, numbers grew to 202 participants this season. That’s pretty good considering the event’s future at one time in January looked bleak.

However, since then new race organizers, led by race director Erika Bramlett were able to pump life back into the event and do so with a large field and a large volunteer presence.

The fact that it remains a part of the tri-county summer schedule, thrills past race director Dan Skinner.

“When I saw there were 200 entrants I couldn’t have been happier,” Skinner said. “I’m glad it’s grown. We were probably around 150 when we started and it keeps growing. Every year it is a pain in the butt putting it together, but when you see says like today, that’s when you are rewarded.”

nice challenge, especially on the run during the cross country portion."
Ward was a bit upset after the event, but she was a success story of her own considering she had given birth to her daughter, Lilly, just nine months ago. She held Lilly after the race, with Lilly wearing a shirt saying she was a future tri-athlete.

“I was a little disappointed, but that’s OK,” Ward, 33, said. “I caught her right on the bike and from there it was back-and-forth. When I saw I was more than double her age, I was like, ‘Oh man.’
Ward’s pregnancy didn’t keep her from training.

“I trained through my whole pregnancy until Lilly was born,” Ward said.
Simanskey and Ward finished eighth and ninth, overall, in the FastTry event, an event for race veterans.

The male overall winner was Fenton’s Chad Brizendine. Brizendine was the first out of the lake (5:43.8) and first off the bike by a considerable margin, taking just 23:19 to finish the 9-1-mile bike course. He finished the race in 41:27.6. He was greeted by his three children after the event.

“It’s more of an obsession, really,” Brizendine said. “I train to keep in shape and to keep up with these guys.”
Milford’s Ed Nicholson was the male masters winner and also finished second overall, finishing with a time of 45:55.2. This was his third time competing in the event.

“I wanted to win it. I got second all three times,” Nicholson said. “I am a trail runner. That’s why I always feel I could go faster in the run.”

The female masters winner was one of Fenton’s most well-known road runners. Lisa Veneziano took 11th overall with a time of 52:32.6. She was the third woman to finish.

Perhaps the competitor with the most experience at the event was Linden’s Dan Skinner. Skinner has been at all seven events either as a competitor or the race director. He placed sixth overall with a time of 49:07.7.

“It’s all about maintenance at this age. I’m in good shape and I work at it,” Skinner said. “I have the time and the wearwhill to train. … I ran cross country and track in high school and college. I started competitively swimming when I was 6, so I enjoy competing. It’s just in me. … I don’t care about winning, but competing and measuring myself against other people. It’s a rewarding feeling knowing you can still keep up.”

FastTry athletes made up about one-third of the 202 competitors at the event. The rest were the rookies, or the FirstTry athletes.

Fenton’s Noah Maier was the first FirstTry competitor to finish (46:34.8) while Northville’s Daniel Genord was second (53:50.7) and Linden’s Liam Sack was third (55:54.2).

Funeral Etiquette

When you arrive at the funeral home, go to the family, and express your sympathy with an embrace or by offering your hands. Don’t feel as though you must avoid talking about the person who has died. Talking can help the grieving process begin. If you were an acquaintance of the deceased but not well-known to the family, immediately introduce yourself. Do not feel uncomfortable if you or the family member becomes emotional or begins to cry. Allowing the family to grieve is a natural healing process. However, if you find yourself becoming extremely upset, it would be kinder to excuse yourself so as not to increase the pain on the family. Source: thefuneralsource.org
