Not everyone is home for the holidays

Eighty million Americans will work on Christmas Day.

While many families will spend Christmas Eve and Day opening presents and sipping on hot chocolate, it’s important to remember that not everyone has the holidays off work.

According to 2014 numbers from USA Today, more than a quarter of Americans work on Christmas Day, which is more than 80 million people. Police will still be patrolling the streets and dispatchers will still be taking 911 calls.

Fenton Dispatch Supervisor Samantha Sturgis has worked numerous holidays, from Christmas to Easter to Thanksgiving. She usually works on Christmas but is excited to have it off this year.

“We’re here 24 hours a day,” she said. Some holidays are slower than normal days because people are usually at home with their families.

She’s worked every Christmas and Thanksgiving for the past few years.

“I work days so I get out of work at 3 and we just eat later in the day,” she said. Some families celebrate the holiday on a different day.

Red kettles still short of $800,000 goal

By Tim Jagielo

Fenton — A lot of money is raised with a smile and a jingling bell.

At the Fenton Walmart, Duane Arnold, a volunteer Salvation Army bell ringer, said shoppers have been generous. “It’s a busy spot,” he said. He volunteered for 90 minutes on Wednesday, Dec. 20, the sun in his face and shoppers streaming by.

Crash victim identified

Scott Graham, 32, killed Tuesday morning

By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

An early morning crash in Groveland Township on Tuesday, Dec. 19 has claimed the life of Scott Graham, a 32-year-old Holly man.

According to Casimir M. Micarca of the Oakland County Medical Examiner’s Office, Scott Graham was driving southbound on Groveland Road shortly before 8 a.m. when his vehicle struck a utility pole. Both Graham and his passenger, whom he was transporting for a goodbye visit with an elderly woman, were pronounced dead at the scene.

“Who on God’s good Earth would ever want any American citizen to ever pay more in taxes? Any lessening of any taxation is good for all.”

To all residents who are fortunate to live in our area, thank you for making the Fenton area one of the nicest places on the planet to live. Little crime, premium police, vibrant retailers, premium school systems and friendly citizens all make for the good life. Give thanks to God for all we have.*

Just answered our doorbell (we live in Hills of Tyrone) and to our amazement a group of 15 to 18 adult and child Christmas carolers serenaded us with three songs. What a wonderful gesture for the season. Thank you so much.”

* How could anyone criticize the Times for providing a public forum for citizens to vent their frustrations, or say “thank you,” or comment on decisions made by our politicians, both local and national? You need to watch “It’s A Wonderful Life” to see what our communities would be like without the Times and the Hot lines.

We are so excited to see what 2018 has in store for us!

In reflection, 2017 was an amazing year. We were so blessed to have had tremendous growth, served hundreds upon hundreds of our wonderful neighbors and had our hearts warmed by the wonderful personalities that have come into and out of our doors. Man, we truly live in an amazing community of fabulous people. I can not say enough about how lucky we are to have been led back to Michigan and into Fenton to open our Chiropractic office in 2014. God works in wondrous ways.

We would like to take this moment to say Thank You, to everyone who has helped us grow our office to what it is today and let you know that we will continue to grow and change and improve because we want to offer true health and we feel very strongly that the very best form of health is achieved through prevention and can start at any age.

It’s not from the outside in, but from the inside out. Give your body what it needs and it will perform the way it was created to. Remove the interference and the body will work and respond as it was designed to.

When I say interference I am referring to things like preservatives, additives, coloring and dyes, lack of motion (we were made to move people, get up and do it) and most importantly interference from pressure that is being placed on the nervous system, (which are the lines of communication from the brain to the organs, cells and tissues of the body). Pressure due to a bone that has slightly shifted out of place. That is where we come in! We remove that pressure with a scientifically focused chiropractic adjustment (based on motion study x-rays analysis) and your body will heal. You will experience less pain, better sleep, a heightened immune system, and all sorts of other amazing things based on what nerves the pressure was on and what organs they led to.

2018 is going to be amazing and we will be here saving lives, not just getting people out of pain but I can assure you that will be happening as well! If you and your family would like an evaluation to determine how we can help your family improve its health and prevent future illnesses and ailments in 2018, please do not hesitate to call our office and schedule a consultation. There is no fee for this. If we do not hear from you, don’t worry, this will not be the last you hear from us!

We will be spreading our message of health louder and more consistently in the coming year because we love this community and want to help it become as healthy as possible!

Thank you so much for reading until the end. We would like to wish you and your family a very Merry Christmas and a whole hearted HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Flint Capitol Theatre a renewed gem

Not yet open, programming will include comedy, plays and musical performances

By Tim Jagielo
tjagielo@tctimes.com; 810-433-6795

Flint — Walking into the theatre balcony from the classically adorned hallways at the Capitol Theatre is a breathtaking experience.

High above, hundreds of LED lights twinkle against a deep blue sky. Classic theatre architecture and detail give the feeling of an outdoor theatre from a past era. It’s like walking back in time, to when the theatre was constructed in 1937.

Contrasting with the renewed architecture is the state-of-the-art projection and sound mixing equipment.

There are myriad details and stories about how every inch of the theatre, hallways and entrance were restored with original pieces and replicas.

For example, 81 floral medallions were glued into the entryway and hand painted, according to Ashley Schoen, marketing and communications manager.

The overall project spending goal was $37 million. According to Jarret Haynes, The Whiting executive director, $24 million was spent on hard construction costs, such as the renovation, updating the HVAC and electrical systems and upgrading and installing new equipment.

The rest was spent on design work, consultants, theatre planning and capital reserves.

Completed this month, the project "broke ground" in July 2016. It was spearheaded by The Whiting/Flint Cultural Corporation and Uptown Reinvestment Corporation.

The project received several grants, including $4 million from the Hagerman Foundation.

"We see the Capitol as the most significant project in the city in the past 20 years to bring economic benefit and redevelopment," said Phil Hagerman of Fenton Township, along with his wife Jocelyn.

Earlier this month, a ribbon cutting and soft opening was held along with a brass band musical performance.

The Capitol Theatre building, however, is not yet open to the public. Haynes said there will be a short series of "soft" programming as they work the bugs out of the new lighting and sound equipment before a live audience.

The theatre will be programmed and operated by The Whiting, and is expected to include musical performances, plays and select movie screenings. Programming will complement, and not compete with the performances held at The Whiting’s auditorium.

Haynes expects to announce actual programming in January. Watch www.thewhiting.com for announcements.

Aside from the Hagerman Foundation, the C.S. Mott Foundation donated $15 million, and $5.5 million came from the Michigan Economic Development Corporation.

The 1,600-seat theatre renovation began in July 2016. A soft opening was held in December. The theatre will use the newest audio and lighting technology, set in a classic theatre environment.

On Wednesday, Dec. 20, a small group toured the building, including Technical Director Chris Everson (left), spokesperson Ashley Schoen, and Rachel Presiel (right) of Davison.

The Capitol Theatre at 140 E. Second St. in Flint is not yet open to the public. A full performance schedule is expected to be announced in January.
Come Heller high water...

- People seem to either really love or hate “The Last Jedi.” Me, I’m in the squishy middle, as I am with all Star Wars movies except the first.
- There were moments that were so incredibly Star-Warsy awful (many involving that damned round robot and its seeming superhero powers) that I groaned out loud. But there also were moments I thought were genuinely exciting and well done. In the end, it was a Star Wars movie — we’ve seen it all before so we shouldn’t expect anything too new or fresh.

Like a pizza slice, only without the grease and the cheap pepperoni slices.

- Does anyone else call it Little Squeezers, or is it just us?
- So glad the Michigan Supreme Court sided with teachers in ordering the state to repay 3 percent of their pay kept from them by Gov. Rick Snyder, who had pursued the case with vigor, continuing to argue against returning the money to teachers administration to pay for retiree health care. The decision to have Michigan teachers contribute a percentage of their pay for retiree health care was made by former Gov. Jennifer Granholm in 2010. The money was collected between 2010 and 2013. Snyder spent $200,000 of our tax money fighting the teachers’ lawsuit, even after his own attorney general dropped the case. He should pay us back that money.
- If you’re over 40 and ever wondered why your parents seemed to live better back in the day than your family does today, even though you make way more money, I recommend a column by P.J. O’Rourke in American Consequences with the headline “The Price of Being Middle Class.”

By his estimation, it cost about $20,000 (in today’s dollars) for a family of five to live an ordinary middle-class life back in 1952, including mortgage, a new car every five years, an annual vacation, and schooling the kids. Today it costs $145,000 to live the same life. Stunning, right?

- Last year, I grabbed about what I consider the worst Christmas tune ever — Paul McCartney’s “Wonderful Christmas Time” (I just threw up in mouth as the tune entered my head.) So now, here are my all-time favorites: “White Christmas” by Bing Crosby, “Silver Bells” by Johnny Mathis, “Most Wonderful Time of the Year” by Andy Williams, and “All I Want for Christmas Is You” by Mariah Carey. Aside from Carey, I don’t think there’s been a Christmas tune made after 1970 that’s worth a darn.
- Heck, while I’m at it, my two favorite Christmas movies are “A Christmas Story” and “Love, Actually.” I’d add “Die Hard” but everyone gets mad at me when I say it’s a Christmas movie (which it is.) “Home Alone” also never gets old.
- Most overrated Christmas movie ever: “It’s a Wonderful Life.” I love Jim Carrey as Santa, but, good grief, is his acting over-the-top in that?
- I have an 18-year-old son so I end up hearing a lot of hip-hop songs. In seemingly half of them, one of the “singers” (not sure singing is what they actually do — emoting, maybe) makes a cricket sound, like “bddd-bddd!!” I tell him the Beatles have never made cricket sounds, then I do a few bars of “Yesterday” with cricket sounds inserted. He rolls his eyes and goes back to staring at his phone. Tormenting kids with dad humor is great fun.

CHRISTMAS, TO A child, is eventually the disappointing coronabration that it is the journey, not the destination, that the magic lies in. It is the beginning of the end of childhood.

WHAT IS GOING on with that road commission? Every year it seems to get worse. Just went to Detroit this morning. U.S. 23 is closed and as soon as I hit the county line, the roads are fine. Where is our money going?

I JUST WISH this holiday wasn’t all about getting somebody something for Christmas. How about just all get together, have a good time, and enjoy one another’s company? A lot of us can’t afford to buy anybody anything.

AS I SING Christmas carols and prepare to celebrate the holiday with my family, I would like to say that I am more confident in the direction of our nation under the leadership of President Trump. I thank God for his leadership every day. Merry Christmas to all my Fenton residents.

HIT THE ROAD, Jack, don’t you come back. No Judge Moore.

THREE MAJOR COMPANIES, GE, Aeta, and Alexion, have announced that they are moving out of the state of Connecticut due to the high taxes. The state not only has high taxes but they are preparing to raise taxes. This is what happens under Democratic leadership and why the Trump economic platform makes so much sense.

NOW THAT THERE’S some snow on the ground we have to deal with the snowmobilers on our lawn, across the farm field, and down the side of the road. Don’t they know there’s no land down here for snowmobilers?

DO YOU KNOW that Obama never held a real job? He never employed anyone. He never wrote business or payroll checks so is it any wonder that he gave us an additional $10 trillion debt over eight years and he nearly destroyed our economy?

I’D JUST LIKE to give a shout-out to Lake Fenton High School ninth-grade class for giving back to our community for random acts of kindness. What a nice gesture it was for the neighborhood on Jennings Road. Much appreciated.

FOR THE NEXT few years, people will be asking why the Democrats were against low taxes. Why are they against low unemployment, a simplified tax code and improving the economy for most middle-class Americans?

SAD TO SAY that way back in 1951, when I was just a little tyke, my sister used to tell my dad that he should quit smoking as it was bad for his health. So, people did know.

CRUDE BEHAVIOR ATTRIBUTED to the liberal media is ridiculous. This is a long-time culture used by men of power. See HOT LINE throughout Times

Keep your calories in check
Suprisingly, the average American only gains one pound or less over the holidays
Compiled By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823
Christmas has arrived and food is everywhere, from festive, fat-laden holiday dinners to decadent, sugar-laden desserts. Despite the visions of calories dancing around in our heads, it is OK to indulge on occasion, without the guilt, and without gaining weight. The trick is to enjoy what you are eating, and to eat mindfully while avoiding overindulging and gaining weight in the process.
According to research published in the “Journal of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics,” Americans, on average, gain just about one pound during the holiday season, with overweight individuals gaining a bit more. This is really not too bad, as long as we keep it to just one pound and get back on track come the New Year.
The following are some strategies to help avoid gaining weight this holiday season while also enjoying your favorite foods:
● Eat healthy most of the time
Make healthy low-calorie choices when you can and do not waste calories nibbling at home while watching TV. Celebrate only at a holiday dinner party or during a holiday event. Plan your day and even plan for your occasional splurge.
For example, hot soup as a first course especially when it’s broth-based, not cream-based can help you avoid eating too much during the main course.
● Stand more than an arm’s length away from munchies
Avoid the temptation of being able to raise your hand to your mouth with chips and other munchies every few seconds.
● Concentrate on your meal while you’re eating it
Focus on chewing your food well and enjoy the smell, taste, and texture of each item. Mealtime multitasking can make you pop mindless calories into your mouth. Dinner party conversation is only natural, but try to set your food down until you’re finished chatting so you are more aware of what you’re taking in.
● Eat what you love
Do not waste calories overeating on cookies and junk food that you do not like just because they are sitting there because someone else is eating them. Save your extra calories for special foods you enjoy during this time of year.
● Mind your portions
Portion control allows you still to indulge in your favorite foods instead of banning them completely. And you do not have to eat tiny portions. The trick is to eat larger portions of healthy foods balanced with smaller portions of more indulgent and high-calorie choices.
● Eat more fruits and veggies
High in fiber, rich in nutrients, and low in calories, eating colorful fruits and vegetables is a win-win. Try filling half of your plate with fruits or vegetables at each meal.
● Limit liquid calories
When we drink our calories instead of eat them, we do not feel full and often end up consuming extra unnecessary calories. Liquid calories such as soda are pure empty calories. Many alcoholic drinks also tend to be high in calories and drinking tends to decrease our resistance to temptations. It is OK to enjoy an occasional glass of red wine, or white wine spritzer, but best to have the drink with dinner and not on an empty stomach. And, fill up on water or seltzer, both calorie free, before your meal.
● Keep up your exercise routine
Choose an exercise routine you enjoy and pick a time that works for you so that you will stick to it.
● Drop the guilt
It’s the holidays — enjoy!

Many still divided over gratuities

Some believe tipping is becoming an outdated practice

By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

On Jan. 1, 2018, the minimum wage for most employees goes up to $9.25 (from $8.90 this year), but for workers who count on tips as part of their earnings, that means the minimum wage goes up to $3.52 (from $3.38 this year).

If restaurant servers, for example, don’t earn $9.25 an hour once the $3.52 is added to the tips they receive for service, the employer may not take a tip credit.

According to state law, this means that employers may take a tip credit of up to $5.73 an hour, as long as the employee makes at least $9.25 an hour with tips.

Some employees have dual jobs and spend some of their shift doing non-tipped work. Under federal law, if an employee spends more than 20 percent of the work week doing non-tipped duties, the employer may not take a tip credit for those hours.

For example, a waitress spends five hours of her shift waiting tables; she spends her remaining time cleaning the restaurant after customers leave, taking inventory, and doing other work for which she doesn’t receive tips. The employer may not pay her the full minimum wage, without taking a tip credit, for those three hours.

It can claim a tip credit for her five hours of work waiting tables.

Many states, including Michigan, allow employers to require tip pooling or “tipping out.”

All employees subject to the pool have to chip in a portion of their tips, which are then divided among a group of employees. An employee must be able to keep at least the full minimum wage. In other words, if the employer takes a tip credit, the employer can count only the tips the employee gets to take home against its minimum wage obligation.

In other countries, tips are not expected. Some will accept tips for good service, but the gratuity is not required.

Other countries just don’t allow tipping.

“Here in Germany servers get tips, too, but just if the service was good,” said Meike Blonsky, a legal assistant living in Rodenbach. “We have no rules about how much you give. It just depends on how the service was.

“Waiters are not paid that well, but they can live without tips,” she said.

In countries like China, at fine restaurants in larger cities, if you are satisfied with the service, you can leave small change to your waiter, or give one or two dollars as a tip. It depends entirely on how you rate the service. Leave more if you are happy with the service or none if you are not. But a tip is not required or expected.

To tip or not to tip?

Area residents are never at a loss for words when it comes to the subject of tipping. The Times questioned its readers via Facebook and this is what many had to say:

“I think that tipping is an outdated requirement of going out to eat. I actually look for places where tipping is not accepted...”

Brian Stillman

“I don’t think that a restaurant should split tips,” said Debra Williams. “Some servers are better than others and go out of their way. I always tip them more than mediocre servers. Now servers tipping bus boys, food runners, bar backs is different because they help with providing good service but I think the server should decide how much to tip them. Bartenders should split (depending on bar) because they are all providing service together.”

Andrea Teuber said, “In most cases, I think wait staff get enough tips. While there are some people who do not tip or do not tip enough, that is not always the case. My significant other is a manager of a restaurant and makes far less than the servers.”

Mary T. Johnson said, “I do not think that tips should be shared among all wait staff. A person is tipped based on his or her service not the service of everyone.”

Christine Campbell Roche said, “I hate tipping (and I was once a waitress). Pay decent wages and let’s eliminate this for all services. Seems like that’s all you do, everywhere you go...”
Bell choirs — music to lift the soul

Fenton church to ring in Christmas 2017 with unique bell choir concert

By Tim Jagielo

Fenton — Watching the bell choir in the church sanctuary is like being inside a Christmas grandfather clock.

The members are lined up, their brassy instruments set on blue felt until they are snatched up to play. Together, they create a Christmas atmosphere.

The church sanctuary is like being inside a Christmas grandfather clock.

“It really adds to the festiveness of the area churches often have a special concert to mark the occasion of the birth of Jesus Christ. At St. Jude Episcopal Church in downtown Fenton, the Bell Choir is performing three pieces for the Christmas morning program.

Music Director Marlene Weston said bells are special because they’re already associated with church, and church bells.

“It really adds to the festiveness of the Christmas season,” she said. “It just makes it more special.”

On Thursday, Dec. 21, these 11 musicians rehearsed in the church sanctuary ahead of the Monday, Dec. 25 Christmas service.

The church’s modest music program includes the adult choir, and the bell choir. Weston usually plays the pipe organ during regular services.

They ring in three octaves to medium and medium-advanced skill level musical pieces. “Sometimes we get a difficult piece that’s really challenging and we like working on that,” she said.

They use a few different techniques and instruments. They’ll play the tuned bells with a flick of their wrists, or tap it with a small mallet. Hand chimes are also used, which resemble tuning forks with mallets.

They’ll add percussion like hand drums, chimes and finger cymbals as needed. A violinist accompanies one piece, and on another, the bell choir will accompany the congregation. “We like to do various techniques and sounds,” said Weston.

On Christmas morning, caroling at St. Jude starts at 10 a.m., with a prelude performance for the 10:30 service. The bell choir will also play during the service.

WHY IS IT necessary to vilify “Happy Holidays”? Does it really matter? Happy Holidays is inclusive of Christmas, not in lieu of it. Here is a thought: Put your narcissism aside and just kindly greet each other without trying to influence them of your preference or opinion. Happy Holidays and/or Merry Christmas.

Holly marching band headed to Texas

Band will be loading buses on Christmas Day and heading to San Antonio, Texas to perform in the 2017 Valero Alamo Bowl.

Holly High School is one of 14 high school marching bands from around the United States, and the only group from Michigan chosen to perform during the halftime show of the Alamo Bowl on Dec. 28. Kick-off is at 8 p.m.

The bowl game has traditionally pitted the second place Pac 12 team against the third-place Big 12 team. This year’s game is Stanford Cardinal vs. TCU Horned Frogs.

Band members have been fundraising for the past year in anticipation for their trip, and are very excited of the opportunity to perform for a crowd of 75,000 spectators.

Ben Baldwin, band director, said, “This will mark the second bowl appearance for the Holly Marching Band in the past three years after performing for the 2015 Outback Bowl in Tampa, Florida.”

Watch for January supermoons

Larger and 30 times brighter than a typical full moon

By Sally Rummel
news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Mark your 2018 calendar now — the next two parts of the ‘supermoon trilogy’ will be lighting the evening sky on Monday, Jan. 1 and Wednesday Jan. 31. The Dec. 3 supermoon was the first of three consecutive supermoons in this trilogy. A supermoon occurs when the full moon is at the closest point of its orbit to the Earth. This makes the moon look extra close and extra bright — up to 14 percent bigger and 30 times brighter than a full moon.

The Jan. 31 supermoon will also be a blue moon, and occur during a total lunar eclipse, which will be visible from western North America, the Pacific and Eastern Asia.

People in the eastern U.S. will see a partial lunar eclipse and will have to get up in the morning to see it, said Noah Petro, a NASA researcher, in a press release. In the Detroit area, a partial lunar eclipse will be visible, according to Timeanddate.com.

So when is the best time to look? Most astronomers suggest watching the supermoon right after sunset and into the morning, and minutes before the next sunrise as well.

Because of all three phenomena happening at the same time on Jan. 31, this lunar eclipse will be the most spectacular of the three supermoons since Dec. 3.

The Jan. 31 moon will also be a blue moon, a term for the second full moon in a month. Blue moons only happen once about every two-and-a-half years, so it’s worth going outside to view.

You don’t need any special equipment to look at a full moon, just your eyes and warm clothes to be outdoors.

Our days are getting longer

Say goodbye to shorter days, as the shortest day of the year took place on Thursday, Dec. 21, with the arrival of the winter solstice.

That’s the first official day of winter, with the shortest day — less than 12 hours — and longest night of the year in the Northern Hemisphere, and just the opposite in the Southern Hemisphere.

The winter solstice occurs at the moment the Earth’s tilt away from the sun is at a maximum. It arrives at a different time each year, but usually between Dec. 20 and 22.

So if we’re moving toward longer, sunnier days, why do the days still get colder after the solstice? “As the days lengthen, the cold strengthenings is an old proverb with some scientific truth. The Northern Hemisphere receives its least direct sunlight on the winter solstice, but in many places, including the tri-county area, the coldest average winter temperatures aren’t until January.

This delay is called “seasonal lag,” and happens because the amount of solar energy arriving at the ground is less than the amount leaving the earth for a few more weeks. Oceans and bodies of water take longer than land to heat up and cool down and keep temperatures from rising very fast.

Not until the Northern Hemisphere sees a net gain in solar energy (more heat coming in than going out), do average temperatures begin their ascent.

That means the warmth of spring is still quite far away, but longer, sunnier days will certainly make us feel it’s on the horizon.

Examiner’s Office, the cause of death is multiple injuries as a result of the accident.

According to Michigan State Police, troopers from the Metro North post responded to Dixie Highway and Tindall Road in Groveland Township at approximately 7 a.m. for a two-vehicle fatal crash.

MSP’s preliminary investigation revealed that a 2003 Ford Ranger pick-up was traveling south on Dixie Highway and a 2018 Ford F-150 pick-up was traveling north on Dixie Highway.

At this time, it appears one of the vehicles lost control, crossed the centerline and struck the other, however, police are not sure which vehicle crossed the centerline and are asking for witnesses to the crash to come forward.

Graham was driving the 2003 Ford Ranger pick-up and was killed instantly. The 2018 Ford F-150 pick-up, driven by a 51-year-old male from Waterford, sustained front-end damage. The driver suffered minor injuries to his arm and was transported to a local hospital.

There were reports of black ice scattered across metro Detroit, although it’s unclear at this time if slick roads played a role in the crash.

As an investigation continues, MSP’s F/Lt. Michael Shaw said they believe that speed was a factor, but they’re not sure how fast the drivers were going. Shaw said he does not believe alcohol was a factor.

Anyone who may have witnessed the crash is asked to contact the Metro North Post at (284) 584-5740.
End of gerrymandering in Michigan?

Signatures gathered to place question on November 2018 ballot

By Tim Jagielo

Voters might have an opportunity to change the way political districts are drawn in Michigan, beginning in 2018. The non-partisan group, Voters Not Politicians, has been working to gather enough signatures to end the practice of “gerrymandering,” which is the political manipulation of legislative and congressional district maps.

In Michigan, the congressional party in power has the ability to draw district maps in its favor, to consolidate voters in its own party. The result of gerrymandering is complicated, oddly drawn district maps.

“Right now, it’s entirely controlled by state legislature,” said Jordan Smellie, marketing operations manager of Voters Not Politicians at a Fenton town hall meeting in March. “They’re the only ones that get any input, and they’re the ones who directly benefit from the lines that they draw.”

Voters Not Politicians announced Monday that approximately 3,500 volunteers gathered 425,000 signatures, surpassing the required 315,654. These were turned in by hand, filling 180 boxes, to the Michigan Bureau of Elections on Monday, according to the Voters Not Politicians news release on Monday.

The Board of State Canvassers now has to vote to allow the question to be placed on the November 2018 ballot.

The goal of the group is to shift the responsibility of redistricting to a citizen committee, instead of legislators of the political party in power.

Michigan would join other states such as California, Arizona, Iowa, Montana, Washington, Idaho and Alaska, which have independent commissions to choose their districts.

While Voters Not Politicians self describe their group as “non-partisan,” the Detroit Free Press reported in August that seven of the 10 board members have contributed more than $5,000 to Democratic Party causes.

Spokesperson Elizabeth Battiste said that other members have continued to support Republican causes as well. “They certainly come from all walks of life,” she said.

Battiste added that board members don’t present party ID cards when they join. “It’s something they can work on toward a common goal,” she said.

She said that even conservative Ottawa County has been a “hot spot” of volunteer activity.
Bell ringer Luane Fickes greets shoppers at the Silver Parkway VG’s in Fenton, on Wednesday, Dec. 20. Fickes puts energy and enthusiasm into her work, and feels it helps generate more donations.

RED KETTLES

Luane Fickes, a veteran red kettle ringer, worked across the street at the VG’s on Silver Parkway. She estimated that she receives donations from up to 80 percent of the shoppers that pass by.

For the Salvation Army, this is the end of a long, hard-fought campaign to raise funds. In recent years, red kettle donations have lagged behind their goal. The most recent estimates put them only at 47 percent of their $800,000 goal. The most recent estimates put them out on $24,000 in donations, according to Martinbianco. “If we have a major hurdle to cross, it’s going to be that,” she said, adding that potential donors aren’t thinking about Christmas, or donating coats to children, when it’s warm out.

Sometimes the calendar affects the red kettle campaign. The campaign lost a day of donations due to elections in November. Christmas Day also falls on a Monday this year, and the largest donation day is always Christmas Eve, but the Salvation Army doesn’t work on Sundays. This means that the drive could miss out on $24,000 in donations, according to Martinbianco. “If we have a major hurdle to cross, it’s going to be that one,” she said.

Another issue is that many customers aren’t carrying cash to stores. While the last day to drop cash into a red kettle is Saturday, Dec. 23, donations can still be accepted into the campaign through the administration.

according to the Salvation Army. The balance goes toward utilities and staffing the administration.

Martinbianco attributes this year’s fundraising deficit to several factors — when the campaign began in November, it was still relatively warm out and snow-free. “It becomes a challenge,” she said, adding that potential donors aren’t thinking about Christmas, or donating coats to children, when it’s warm out.

There are 64 red kettle sites, and approximately 100 bell ringers out each day, but in most of Genesee County, donations have been falling short during the drive.

On Dec. 15, spokesperson Joy Martinbianco said that the organization was only at 47 percent of their $800,000 goal. The most recent estimates put them at 60 percent of their goal.

While the organization doesn’t accept debit or credit cards on-site, donations are accepted digitally on their website. There are also newer campaigns to raise matching funds, also online. These efforts fund most programs throughout the year, and approximately 85 cents of every dollar goes into programming, strictly in Genesee County.

CSC CHARGES
Douglas William Walsh, 60, of Linden was originally arraigned Oct. 3 on four counts of second-degree CSC involving two alleged victims under the age of 13. These two additional charges brings the total up to six.

If convicted, Walsh could face up to 15 years in prison, according to the Michigan Penal Code.

Linden Police Chief Scott Sutter said his department investigated the allegations and presented its case to the Genesee County Prosecutor’s Office for review. Sutter said there are no criminal charges expected against the owner of the daycare.

The license of the daycare, which had been in business since 1994, was suspended July 13 by the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs (LARA), Bureau of Community and Health Systems, after investigators found that it violated the Childcare Organizations Act and administrative rules regarding family and group childcare homes.

The owner is prohibited from operating a family childcare home at any other address and may not accept children for care. The owner has the right to appeal the suspension and revocation.

Walsh was released on $60,000 personal bond. No new court dates have yet been scheduled.

First Christmas without your loved one?

Counselor gives some advice for those dealing with grief this holiday season

By Vera Hogan
vhogan@tctimes.com; 810-433-6823

Nothing can be more painful than dealing with the loss of a loved one, especially when the first Christmas without them rolls around.

Patsy Essenmacher, a licensed master social worker from Fenton Counseling, is an expert when it comes to helping people deal with their feelings and grief.

“Be kind to yourselves,” Essenmacher said. “Grieving takes a lot of energy. Don’t expect to keep up with all the things you do every year. People will understand and if they don’t, they’ve obviously never been there.

“You may have to educate people on how you are feeling and what you need,” she said. “They want to help, but don’t know how. Please let them be there for you. Let them do some of those things that you just can’t muster the energy to do. They will feel better for it, too.”

Do not walk alone, Essenmacher said. “There are bereavement support groups associated with many churches and funeral homes. Compassionate Friends is a support group just for bereaved parents and siblings,” she said.

Essenmacher suggests that if doing some of your old traditions are just too painful, start a new tradition in your loved one’s memory.

“One idea is to ignore Christmas and go on a cruise,” she said. “Go to midnight Mass. Sponsor something in your loved one’s memory. By helping them, you are helping you.”

There are a lot of things you can’t control about the holidays, according to Psychology Today. You may be subjected to Christmas music in the waiting room of your doctor’s office or you may overhear your co-workers constantly talking about their holiday plans. While you can’t prevent those things from happening, there are some things you can control.

Think about what you can do to lessen the heartache when you can. It’s OK to limit your decorations or shop for presents online only. Pick a few things you can do to assert some control over the holiday cheer and keep in mind, that life goes on for other people and it’s OK that they’re happy to celebrate this year.

Even when you’re in the midst of grief, you still have something to offer the world. Performing a few acts of kindness can be really good for the grieving spirit. Donate gifts to families in need, serve meals at a soup kitchen, or volunteer to help people at a nursing home make holiday crafts if you’re up for it.

Create a special way to memorialize the person you’ve lost. Whether you decide to light a candle every night or eat your loved one’s favorite food, honoring your loved one can serve as a tangible reminder that although your loved one is gone, the love never dies.

WORK

At Fenton dispatch, employees work eight-hour shifts. For the holidays, Stur- ges said it’s a big help if she and another employee who’s a mother split an eight-hour shift so they only have to be gone from their families for four hours.

“It’s definitely harder for those of us who have little ones at home. It’s hard if your family isn’t in this line of work because they’re not as understanding. Fortunately, my family is very understanding. When your family holds it against you when it’s not in your control, that can be frustrating and hard,” she said. “If you have coworkers who are willing to share the load, it makes it easier for everyone.”

Fenton Det. Dale Rauch is working on Christmas and New Year’s.

“If there’s a car accident or someone gets hurt or there’s an assault, we’ll come in on the holiday,” he said. “We’ll work our normal shift, too.”

They’ve responded to drinking and driving crashes on the holidays, along with fam- ily disputes that may involve alcohol. “It’s everyday things we deal with here,” he said.

“Back when the kids were young and you had to come work first shift, you don’t see them open presents, or they wait until you get home. Your kids kind of adjust to it; your family adjusts to your schedule,” he said.

For New Year’s Eve, Rauch said they will patrol more and act as a deterrent to people who may drink and drive.

“People are a lot better now than they were 25 years ago when I started. They’re more educated now more than ever,” he said. “You have Uber now, that’s a good thing.”

Rauch urges people not to drink and drive, and make good decisions.

“Better to pay a little extra money for an Uber or taxi than hurting yourself or someone else,” he said.

Celene Howard, 24, of Tyrone Township is a registered nurse at the University of Michigan Hospital and will get paid triple time to work on Christmas Day.

“My family does presents and Christmas dinner the night before. It’s a little sad on Christmas morning when I’m driving into work and everyone in my house is asleep and other families are opening presents but it’s OK. I don’t have kids so I don’t mind it too much,” she said.

Kelly Fletcher, Fenton Department of Public Works deputy director, said he has two guys on call for the holiday weekend. When he does the schedule for the holidays, there’s a seven-man rotation for working the streets and sewers, and a three-man rotation for the water department.

“Usually, we’re pretty lucky. As long as Mother Nature cooperates, we do pretty well,” he said.

Christmas is a busy travel holiday, and gas station attendants need to make sure people can fuel their cars. Animals still need to be fed, so places like Adopt-A-Pet and Genesee County Animal Control will have at least a limited staff on hand.

If there’s a big snow, drivers with the Department of Public Works will be out, plowing the roads so everyone else can drive safely.

Other people working on Christmas Day include the following:

• nurses, doctors, and other hospital staff working at the hospitals to provide care
• police officers, firefighters, and para medics
• gas station attendants
• police officers, firefighters, and paramedics
• airports and airline personnel
• certain fast-food workers

• Driver for Gerych's Flowers
• Deliverer of good cheer
• Photographer

By Sally Rummel
news@tctimes.com; 810-629-8282

Barry Butterfield, 64, has been a Fenton resident since he was a year old. A delivery driver for Gerych’s Distinctive Flowers & Gifts, he also delivers good cheer with him during the holiday season, and throughout the year. He has been married to Delma (“Del”) for 34 years, with their anniversary coming up on Dec. 30. He’s a stepdad to five adult kids, and has nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

How did you get your job as a driver for Gerych’s?

I’ve known Jon (Gerych) my whole life, our parents were neighbors. I stopped at Gerych’s one day and met Jon in the driveway. I asked if he had any work available and he told me to change my clothes and come back that same day. I’ve been there since I was 42. Now I’m semi-retired, but still do metro Detroit area deliveries for flowers, special events, etc.

What are some of the most interesting deliveries you’ve made over the years?

I’ve made thousands of deliveries. Once, when President George W. Bush was speaking, I delivered the podium and plants for his speaking engagement at a manufacturing plant. I used to deliver flowers every week to Aretha Franklin’s home. I could hear her singing as she’d meet me at the door. To hear Aretha Franklin sing — now that was a fun perk of my job.

“I’m always looking for an opportunity to make someone smile.”

Delivery person at Gerych’s in Fenton

Also provided flowers and special event items to Art Van, Mike Ilitch, and Al Taubman, to name a few. You also deliver laminated news stories from the Times, and frame photographs for local businesses. How did you get started with that?

When I see names of friends and local people in the paper, I laminate it, mat it and deliver it to them as a keepsake. I also do a lot of photography framing for businesses and friends. It’s more of a hobby than anything.

If you could have any other job in your life, what would it be?

I’d love to make a living from my photography. I never leave home without my camera. I see life “in brackets” through the lens of my camera. When light hits an object in a certain way, it catches my eye. I especially like outdoor photography, and my favorite is sunsets.

How did you meet your wife, Del?

We met at Johnny’s Pizzeria when I was 24 years old. Del and my mother had a mutual friend, Judy, and all three happened to be there. It was the day after Mother’s Day, and I was looking for my mother to give her a rose. Del says it was “love at first sight,” but it took four years of her chasing me and me running, before we got married!

How would you best like to be remembered?

As a nice guy with a sense of humor. If I run across a difficult person, I just kill him or her with kindness. I’m always looking for an opportunity to make someone smile. No matter how small or insignificant the gesture seems, sometimes it will make someone’s day.

What is something about you most people probably don’t know?

From the time I was a child, I wanted to be an actor. My great-aunt made a couple of movies with Laurel & Hardy. I always felt I must have a little of the acting gene in me. Also, people always say how gregarious I am, but deep down, I’m a very shy person. I’m an introvert trying to be an extrovert.
