Plan now for your family’s memorable vacation to ‘The Most Magical Place on Earth’

President Donald Trump has been added to the Hall of the Presidents attraction at the Magic Kingdom at Disney World in Orlando, Florida, and Toy Story Land will be opening June 30 at Disney’s Hollywood Studios.

These are just two examples of the fact that there’s always something new at “The Most Magical Place on Earth” at Disney World, the world’s most visited theme park with more than 47 million tourists each year.

Driving Time to Disney World from Fenton:
Approximately 20 Hours

When is the best time to go?
Early January, after the New Year’s holiday through mid-February, has usually lighter crowds, although the second weekend in January is busy during the Disney Marathon weekend. Watch out for long weekends celebrating Martin Luther King Day and Presidents Day — these tend to be busier than usual.

September is one of the least crowded months to visit, while any of the summer months, especially the July 4th holiday and the month of August, are especially busy, along with Christmas and New Year holidays and, of course, spring break.

We would have learned our lesson

Other than old age or illness, I truly believe there is another reason the elderly die when they do. They won’t be able to handle one more day of what the future has in store.

I honestly don’t know what my dad, who died in 2010, would say about some of the things going on today. Like the president, I am not sure what he would say about that. On one hand, my dad was super-impressed with people who knew how to amass a great deal of money and get things done, which Trump has. On the other hand, I don’t know how he would feel about the rest of the “presidential package.”

As far as the sexual harassment and sexual assault accusations all over the map from Hollywood to the government, and the “Me Too” movement, this is the man who, in the early 1980s said the men in his office would never think to go through a wide doorway at the same time as a woman. If caught in that predicament, they would stand sideways and suck in their guts so as not to even accidentally touch one of their female coworkers.

I’m not even sure what my dad would say about bullying, cyber-bullying and the often resulting suicide. Other than maybe to grumble under his breath and say, “Don’t give ’em that internet, smart phone, or other sh to begin with and it won’t be a problem.”

I am pretty sure, however, what he would have done if me or either of my sisters made a false threat of violence at our schools. When we got into trouble, which wasn’t often I assure you if you knew my dad, he would hold us silent. This would be a time for action, not words. And we would be afraid.

My dad would take the false threat of-fender among us to the emergency room at a hospital in the worst area of Chicago. There we would wait until the shooting victims, or victims of horrific drunk driving accidents, came in. We would have to watch while the victims (if still alive) would scream and writhe in pain and agony. He would make us listen to the family in the waiting room, their heart-wrenching crying and agonizing over the fate of their loved one.

That wouldn’t be the end of it. My dad would then take us from a nursing home or assisted living place where victims of crimes, who maybe lost a limb or two, or are wheelchair-bound, have to live out their lives. He would volunteer our services to clean up blood and all kinds of other nastiness. Whatever gross thing had to be done to take care of these folks, he would have us do.

We would have learned our lesson, I’m sure of it.

As you have likely guessed, my dad was super strict — and am I glad of it.

Too bad there are not more like him today.

SUGGESTIONS FROM OUR READERS ON FACEBOOK

Cory — We’ve seen folks complain about their experience in not being able to ride or see anything they wanted, not being able to dine at certain establishments, etc. The key is preparation, it all starts and ends there.

You must book fast passes in advance. We walked right into attractions and had almost immediate wait times. Fast passes are free, you simply need to take the time and book them. If you’re staying in Disney you can book 60 days before your trip, if not you can book 30 days beforehand. In addition, you can book dining and other experiences six months in advance with the park ticket purchase.

Lastly, download the Disney app to track your schedule throughout the day, where you need to be and when, including GPS navigation through the park, book/change fast passes, etc.

Our trip this year was amazing, we stayed in Disney’s Polynesian Village Resort in Magic Kingdom, one in Epcot and one in Hollywood Studios. We rode everything we wanted multiple times, waited no more than 20 minutes for any ride during peak season, ate lunch in Cinderella’s castle, had lunches and dinners with princesses at various places, ate lunch at the west wing of the Beast’s castle, and in every single event the characters engaged with us during our meals (signatures, photos and conversation). None of this would have been possible without planning and preparation, and most of all fast passes. The best trip we’ve taken to date. 100 percent due to preparation.

Jodi — Avoid peak times. You can get better rates at Disney hotels and discounts on dining. If you plan to visit during the peak times, arrive early because they close after the first 100,000 people enter the gates regardless of whether you have passes.

Melissa — Fast passes, getting to parks at rope drop. If you have little kids that can’t ride larger rides, you can get a child swap voucher and after one parent rides, another one can use fast pass line. Plan a vacation where you can relax after your Disney vacation, you’re going to need it.

Janine — Go during non-peak times. Late February was good for us. We had the meal plan and we were able to eat where we wanted without reservations. We had moderate lines but were able to get through them easily.

Randy — If you don’t want to stay at the park look to rent a house. We have always done that and booked one with a pool. Also most are fairly well equipped with utensils of your own so don’t have to eat out all the time.

Scott — When you think you have saved enough money, save more. The month before you leave.

John — Go early. Go back to your hotel for an early afternoon swim and a nap for two to three hours. Come back refreshed in late afternoon when crowds are reduced and enjoy the rest of the day — especially if you have small children.

Disney World

What to see, what to do

The Magic Kingdom, home of Mickey and Minnie Mouse and the Cinderella Castle, is one of four Disney parks that also include Epcot, Disney’s Hollywood Studios and Disney’s Animal Kingdom. Each of the parks has its own advantages for kids and families. While Epcot is more adult-themed (don’t miss the Epcot International Food and Wine Festival from late September through mid-November), there are still plenty of kid-pleasers in that park as well, including its Frozen Ever After ride and Turtle Talk With Crush show.

The new Toy Story Land at Disney’s Hollywood Studios now makes that park especially kid-friendly. For families with preschoolers, Magic Kingdom’s Fantasyland is the perfect destination. Disney’s Animal Kingdom just might be the most kid-friendly of all the parks, with its DinoLand USA, petting zoo and Kilimanjaro Safari.

Disney World also includes two water parks, Blizzard Beach and Typhoon Lagoon, but with one-day passes priced at $65 per person, you may want to enjoy your hotel’s swimming pools and water features instead.

Plan a Disney fun without the sticker shock, spend a day at Disney Springs (formerly Downtown Disney), featuring unique shops, one-of-a-kind restaurants (make reservations first, for popular ones like T-Rex) and lively entertainment.

Plan, plan, plan

Before making reservations, do your research first and plan your trip well in advance. Otherwise, you’ll be disappointed with limited dining options, sold-out Disney character events and long, long ride waits. Better yet, take advantage of the knowledge and experience of local travel agents to book your trip.

Make sure to use Disney FastPass+, a reservation system that allows a guest to book advance reservations for experiences and attractions in the park — up to six days ahead for resort guests, and up to 30 days in advance for off-resort guests. Dining and character event reservations can be made up to six months in advance.

Speaking of dining, Disney Dining Plans are another way to make eating at Disney more affordable and convenient. You can make all your dining and FastPass+ ride reservations at disneyworld.disney.go.com.

How much will your Disney World vacation cost?

According to Disneytouristblog.com, a five-day, four-night Walt Disney World vacation for a family of four will cost about $2,700, not including transportation. Adding average airfare for four from Detroit to Orlando, you can add another $1,400 onto your trip cost. Your trip will total about $4,100 for a “moderate” hotel on the Disney World property, park passes, food/dining and airfare.

If you only have one day to visit Disney World, spend that day at the Magic Kingdom — home of classic attractions like the Cinderella Castle, It’s a Small World and the Haunted Mansion.

But to get the full Disney experience, you’ll need to spend more than one day at just one park. You’ll find that the huge expense of visiting this world-class family theme park goes down exponentially when you spend multiple days using multi-day park passes. Your one-day pass will cost you $104.50 per person, but buy a 10-day pass and it’s just $44.50 per person.

Of course, your park passes are only one part of your Disney vacation expense. Hotel accommodations on the resort property can range from “value” rooms, like the Disney All-Star Movie Resort at about $100 per night to “deluxe” accommodations like The Swan or Grand Floridian that can cost more than $600 per night in peak season.

Is it worth it to stay on the property?

One of the advantages of a Disney World vacation is its family friendliness and convenience. They’ve thought of everything so you don’t have to.

The advantages of staying on resort property include transportation on Disney’s Magical Express from the Orlando airport to your resort hotel, as well as transportation to and from the parks every day. You’ll also be able to enjoy Magic extended park hours by being a resort guest. It’s impossible to see and experience everything on your trip to Disney World, but half the fun will be in trying.
