GARAGES ARE SIZING UP

By Sally Rummel

Remember the days when your garage was just a place to park your car and store some of your tools?

If you're building a new home today, you're likely placing much more value on your garage than that.

The consumer shift to pickups and large SUVs has created the need for a much larger space than what your parents or grandparents had.

See GARAGES on 2B

Three-car garages are becoming the norm with new builds.

Many homes in this Fenton Township subdivision feature three-car garages, with additional storage and living space above. Larger garages now include extra space for storage, a refrigerator, or even entertainment. Photo: Tim Jagielo

Just sayin'...

My childhood was idyllic

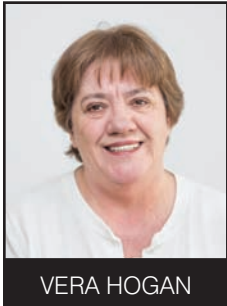

We often ask readers the question, "If you could go back (or forward) in time, where would you go? Some young people have said, "the '80s" and then give their reasons. I'm thinking, "the '80s, didn't that just happen?"

Anyway, I would definitely go back to the late '50s and early '60s when I was a carefree child. My mom and dad didn't have a lot of money, but they were able to manage so that Mom didn't have to work. She would spend her days cleaning and doing other household chores. Every day she watched her soap operas, which were "As the World Turns" and "Secret Storm." She watched them religiously, then go coffee klatch with the neighbors for a while.

When my sisters and I got home from school, we would get a snack, put on our "ears" and watch the Mickey Mouse Club (no, I am not kidding). When there was no school, we would watch cartoons in the morning and then later Bozo the Clown and Garfield Goose.

About the same time we arrived home from school, Mom used to start dinner. My dad got home from work at 5 p.m. and that's when we ate supper, every single night. We also ate what our dad ate. There was no "kids menu" at our house. I didn't have a decent steak until I left home at 21. He ate his well done so we did, too. I now savor the flavor of a medium rare, mostly rare steak. My older sister eats hers completely rare. She will throw a steak on the grill, slide it across to the other side, flip it, and slide it back over and onto her plate it goes. Ick! That's a

We had several shows we watched every week as a family. The night-time sitcoms we never missed were "I Love Lucy," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "The Andy Griffith Show" (later named "Andy of Mayberry," and "The Beverly Hillbillies."

I remember my sisters and I on the living room floor on our stomachs, with our chins in our hands riveted to the television set. We laughed our butts off at the antics of Laura Petrie on Dick Van Dyke, Lucy Ricardo on the Lucy Show, Deputy Barney Fife on Andy Griffith and everyone on the Beverly Hillbillies.

Sundays were very special in my house. I think I've mentioned this before, but everyone in my house would disappear somewhere and I would be alone in the living room watching "Family Classics" that aired numerous great movies. My favorites were "Captain Blood" and "Sea Hawk." I don't care what they say about Errol Flynn, he was a "purdy man" in my little girl eyes.

At 6 p.m. every Sunday we watched "Bonanza" as a family. Everyone loved it. No one in the house was into the news so "60 Minutes" was out. At 7 o'clock was the "Ed Sullivan Show." It was on that show that we first saw Elvis, the Supremes, the Beatles, Petula Clark, Roy Orbison and the list goes on and on. No football, ever!

When I think back on those days, I realize how lucky my sisters and I were to have parents who really liked being with us and doing things together.

Yes, I enjoyed an idyllic childhood and for that I will be forever grateful. Just sayin'!

GARAGES

That means you're likely building a three-car garage.

Adam Heil of A.M. Heil Building Company in Fenton builds three-car garages on all his new construction homes.

"I've never built what used to be your typical two-car garage," he said. "People use the extra space for storage. The depth is definitely deeper, so there's room to pull into your garage and walk around all four sides of your vehicle, plus there's room for a refrigerator, shelving units, boats, Jet Skis, etc."

Jeff Wedding, owner of Lake & Land Custom Homes in Fenton, said that building a three-car garage makes sense financially, because it's economical to add that third bay. "A lot of families have more than two cars, and lots of toys, fourwheelers, boats, pontoons, etc.," he said. "They're finding that adding that third garage just makes sense."

Today's large garages are not only deeper, but also have higher ceilings than ever before. "A lot of homeowners like to have 24-foot deep garages," Wedding said. "This allows room for cabinetry on the back wall, shelving units, plus walking room."

Often, the extra space goes up into the attic, where the second floor height can provide a bonus room for kids, guests, an office, art studio, workout room, and more.

"It's an extension of your inside living space," Heil said. "Right now we're remodeling an existing two-car garage, going up to two stories and making it a three-car garage. It will be a kids' retreat with a rec room."

Wedding said that some people use that second floor to store their antique cars, hot rods, and more, and use a car lift to get it up there.

Garage door heights have gotten bigger, too, at least 8 feet instead of the traditional 7 feet. Some are as high as 12 feet now to accommodate the popular truck roof racks.

Garage structures have not only grown in size, they've also “People view their garage as more than just parking their car there. There’s a certain entertainment value.”

Adam Heil
A.M. Heil Building Company

gotten fancier. "People are spending money in their garages more than they used to," Heil said. "They're putting a lot more thought into it. Many of the garages are heated, with TV and surround-sound. People like to hang out there. That's the sexiness of the third bay."

Homeowners are sealing the concrete with decorative epoxy paint, insulating, dry walling and painting the walls. "They're heating the garage and insulating the garage door," Wedding said.

"People view their garage as more than just parking their car there," Heil said. "There's a certain entertainment value."

SUMMARY
■ Garages are getting bigger as more families buy large trucks and SUVs and need more space for storage.

'Preserved for the right person'

■ Veteran wants to gift large U.S. flag to someone with whom he served

By Vera Hogan

Rick and Terri Sauve have something very special they would like to gift to the "right person." Rick is hoping that someone he served with in 2010 will come forward to accept a large U.S. flag. He and Terri are moving and can no longer accommodate the flag because of its size.

The reason this flag is special is explained on a certificate Rick received for his service with the 21st Engineer Company (SAPPER).

"On the 16th day of August 2010, this United States Flag was flown in the face of the Anti-Afghanistan Forces over the 21st Engineer Company's Tactical Operation Center at Forward Operating Base Sharana (Sharana District, Paktika Province)."

The flag was presented to Rick in appreciation of his "unwavering and heartfelt support of the 21st Engineer Company while deployed in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, 2009-2010."

The Sauves say they have "preserved the flag to give to the right person." That person being someone which whom he served and would appreciate it as much as they do.

How to determine if owning a pet is for you

Buying or adopting a pet is a big decision that requires careful consideration of a host of factors. The right pet for one person might not be the best match for another and it's imperative that prospective pet owners consider a host of factors before welcoming a new pet into their homes.

• Lifestyle: Pet owners' lifestyles will factor heavily into how much their pets will enjoy their new homes. Men and women who are rarely home should avoid adopting pets that need lots of attention. For example, dogs often adapt best to households where their owners are home a lot and can spend ample time with them. But men and women who aren't home all that often can still welcome pets into their families. Fish don't need to be walked or let out to relieve themselves, and they also don't command their owners' constant attention.

• Restrictions: Renters and people living in co-ops or condominium complexes may need to get permission before they can bring pets into their homes. If you don't own your own single-family home, determine if you need permission and if your building has any guidelines governing pets before you begin your search. You don't want to bring a pet home only to be forced to give the animal up for adoption because you did not adhere to the rules listed in your lease or owner's contract.

• Skills: Pet ownership can be incredibly rewarding, but it has its frustrating moments as well. For instance, men and women who have never before owned a puppy may be biting off more than can chew by bringing a young dog into their homes. If you have no experience training puppies or no desire to put up with a puppy's growing pains, then consider adopting an older dog that is already housetrained.

• Cost: Pet ownership can be expensive, and prospective owners should examine their finances to determine if they're ready and capable of taking on the financial commitments of owning a pet. Research costs associated with food and veterinary care to get an idea of how much owning a given pet is likely to cost.
