Police teach residents how to administer Narcan

Opioid overdose epidemic prompts life-saving training
By Hannah Ball
Holly — Sgt. Dennis Sano of the Holly Police Department checks the dummy for a pulse. He unsurprisingly doesn’t find one. He uncaps the small white bottle of Naloxone, also known as Narcan, and inserts it into the dummy’s nostril.

“There will be projectile vomit,” he tells the class of approximately 40 people, who are learning how to administer Narcan to someone who has overdosed on opioids. Roll the person on their side facing away from you, he said, adding, “They can’t get violent with me because their back is to me.”

Tax refunds may not be sent; longer TSA lines and closed national parks

Saturday, Jan. 19 was the 29th day of the government shutdown, the longest in U.S. history.

Approximately 800,000 federal workers are without pay while the government is shut down, and Congress and President Donald Trump don’t seem to be any closer to reaching a deal on a border wall.

Programs, such as most branches of the military, Medicare and Social Security, are not affected by the See SHUTDOWN on 17A

Technology can now kill most robocalls

‘Nomorobo’ has blocked one billion spam calls since 2013
By Tim Jagielo
Nomorobo, as in “no more robocalls,” is a monthly subscription service that blocks automated scam or telemarketing phone calls.

It allows useful notices, such as school closings and prescription reminders through, and obviously, regular phone calls.

Do you people even think before sticking in your foot? The Republicans owned the House and Senate the last two years, and could have done anything they wanted to. Now that the Democrats have the majority in the House, Trump tries to get his wall. Why did he wait?”

Thank you Fenton Police Department. During a recent encounter, the officer demonstrated incredible judgment and levelheaded restraint that is the hallmark of great community policing. As always, ‘We Stand with Blue.”

Local nurse describes a typical shift in the ER

By Sally Rummel
She has been vomited on, urinated upon and has treated a patient with his head split wide open.

For Jami Skinner, 37, an emergency room registered nurse, it’s all part of her everyday work.

Skinner hits the ground running three hours a day at McLaren-Flint’s Trauma and Emergency Center, where she begins her shift just early enough to go over patient stats with the night staff just ending their shifts.

For the next 12 hours, she’ll be going “full throttle,” treating patients with possible heart attacks and strokes, respiratory distress, abdominal pain, etc., plus a few broken bones, stitches and other less severe injuries.

Skinner is usually in charge of four patient rooms in the main area of the ER.

“I like to multi-task,” said Skinner of Fenton. “I love the high-paced environment and the critical thinking that’s required. The ER brings in different people each day with their own set of problems.”

What she is adjusting to are the smells and “stickiness” of the ER, including phlegm and vomit. “When people throw up, I try to stand back so I don’t get hit,” she said. As the mother of five, she is already accustomed to some of these aspects of ER nursing.

In a typical 24-hour period, McLaren-Flint will see between 160 and 190 patients through the doors of the ER. Of that number, between 40 and 60 patients will be admitted for further treatment.

“We’re the ‘stroke hospital,’” Skinner said. “So we see a lot of people with chest pain, stroke symptoms and sepsis.” In life-threatening cases like these, she said, patients are seen right away. “Every minute amounts to loss of heart muscle,” she said.

Is learning to ski on your bucket list?

Take advantage of ‘Discover Michigan Skiing’ program in January at Mt. Holly and other statewide ski resorts

By Sally Rummel
The tri-county area was buried under a half-foot of snow in November, thawed out in December and was rainied out and sleoted upon in January.

Not exactly the perfect weather for Mt. Holly Ski & Snowboard Resort in Groveland Township, but then again, it doesn’t have to be. Mt. Holly has been making snow and is 100 percent open on all of its ski hills, said Mark Tibbitts, general manager.

In spite of this winter’s erratic weather, Mt. Holly has only been closed three times since opening in November, Tibbitts said. He’s optimistic for the rest of January and remaining winter.

Witnesses say landscape truck struck two separate lights
By Sharon Stone
Traffic on Owen Road turned chaotic Thursday morning after a landscape truck hit the traffic light at the Target driveway and then struck the traffic light at Donaldson Drive at approximately 10:15 a.m. The circumstances as to why the landscape truck struck the traffic lights are under investigation.
Traffic lights were left dangling and the Fenton Fire Department was dispatched to sweep up debris covering the road.
Eastbound traffic on the overpass over U.S. 23 slowed to a near standstill as the traffic light for those vehicles was damaged.
The Genesee County Road Commission was advised of the crashes and a crew arrived at the Target entrance at 10:56 a.m. to begin replacing the lights. At 11 a.m. Fenton police were visible at Donaldson Drive to assist school buses pulling out onto Owen Road. The traffic light was reportedly operational, however, traffic was heavy.
Lt. Jeff Cross of the Fenton Police Department said the driver of the landscape hauling truck was equipped with a metal roll bar used to cover the load they are hauling with a tarp. This equipment malfunctioned and was sticking straight up in the air, causing the roll bar to be too tall to pass under the traffic light.

Consumers/DTE can help with programs for struggling customers
By Tim Jagielo

Brian Wheeler, spokesperson for Consumers Energy (CE) said that on average, 1 percent, or less than 30,000 of the 3 million customers are<human_error number=30000> granted shut-off notices during the winter months. Of these, he said fewer than half of those actually have power disrupted. These numbers vary from year to year, as does the length of a service interruption.

According to the Michigan Public Service Commission Act 3 of 1939, utilities may shut down power for non-payment. However, in the winter, or “heating season,” utility providers will postpone shut-off “if a customer is an eligible low-income customer that enters into a winter protection payment plan with the provider and the customer provides documentation that the customer is actively seeking emergency assistance from an energy assistance program.”

Wheeler said that adults over age 65 cannot be disconnected during winter months, providing they prove they are older than 65. Despite some misconceptions, utility companies can shut off your power in the winter — even with shut-off protection, for those under 65.

Wheeler said that even with shut-off protection, there’s an expectation that customers have to pay.
“A customer can see their service disconnected for not paying over time,” he said. “We encourage customers to reach out to us as soon as they know they may have difficulty paying their energy bills because we have programs that can help.”

“We want everyone to have power, to stay warm. These are friends, these are neighbors. We’d rather work with people to understand their options,” Brian Wheeler Consumers Energy spokesperson.

“If payment will become difficult, Wheeler said the client should contact CE right away to set up a payment plan. He said dialing 211 can link them to aid agencies. “Any payment plan gets you on the road to being fully caught up. That’s the goal,” he said.

Utilities, such as Consumers Energy, will split up unpaid balances to be handled over time.
DTE Energy also offers shut-off protection and payment plans for struggling customers. Both utility giants have donated $10 million in the previous year to local outreach agencies, such as the CARE program.

Wheeler said the CARE program allows customers to get on a path of self-sufficiency by providing an affordable payment plan with monthly energy bill credits, as well as gradual forgiveness of past-due balances as a reward for on-time payments.

Average heating bills
Wheeler said overall, the rough average bill for natural gas is $75/month over the course of a year. Most of that cost, two-thirds, is concentrated in the winter months.
Averages can change year to year. In 2018 residential customers spent 10 percent less on natural gas during the months of November and December than in 2017.
He’s expecting it to get colder during the rest of the month so that average could change. Basically, utility bills are “as predictable as the weather in a Michigan winter,” Wheeler said. “This is why there are plans for easing the burden of high utility costs in the winter, such as budget plans, which take an average over the course of the year. This means a resident would pay more than they normally would in the summer, but less in the winter.

Crank up the furnace or use space heaters?
As a metric, Wheeler said turning up your furnace is less expensive than using small space heaters to make up the difference in a home. “(Heaters) tend to be more expensive, degree for degree,” he said.

Many reasons why women experience serious hair loss

Compiled By Vera Hogan

The best way to think of the way hair grows is to picture a garden. How well it grows will usually be a result of what is happening “underground.”

“Like a garden, a normal hair cycle should lead to a product, which is the hair.” Wendy Roberts, MD, a dermatologist at a private practice in Rancho Mirage, California reported to WebMD.

“Growth cycles are important because when they go awry, that is one of the reasons we have hair loss,” she said.

Things that interfere with the growth cycle can include medication, illness, infection, or chemicals. These things have the potential to stop hair from being formed properly.

“It’s a very dynamic place and anything that can get the cycle off can cause hair loss,” Roberts said.

Although hair loss may seem like a more prominent problem in men, women are nearly as likely to lose, or have thinning, hair. Most women notice it in their 50s or 60s, but it can happen at any age and for a variety of reasons.

How hair grows

Hair grows in three different cycles: anagen, catagen, and telogen, according to WebMD. About 90 percent of the hair on the head is in the anagen, or growth phase, which lasts anywhere from two to eight years. The catagen, or transition phase, typically lasts two to three weeks, during which the hair follicle shrinks. During the telogen cycle, which lasts around two to four months, the hair rests.

An overwhelming majority of the time the hair is on the scalp, it is growing. Only about 10 percent of the strands are in transition or resting at any one time. Hair grows about 6 inches a year for most people.

Losing hair

Most people lose anywhere from 50 to 100 strands of hair each day, according to the American Academy of Dermatology. On the days when hair is washed, people can lose up to 250 strands, Roberts said. But don’t avoid washing in an attempt to keep the hair, because it will fall out eventually, anyway.

For those who don’t plan on counting their hair every day, there are ways to know when hair is thinning or being lost at a higher rate. Roberts told WebMD that women will see a difference. When waking up in the morning, there may be an unusually large amount on your pillow. When you comb your hair (especially without tugging, which can pull the hair out), more than normal will be left in the comb.

There are also other visual cues that women can look for over time. Although men’s hair tends to recede from the forehead or the crown of the head, women tend to notice thinning on the top third to one half of the scalp.

When women seek medical advice over concerns about hair loss, there is a combination of ways to make a diagnosis. Preliminary blood work is usually taken to make sure the thyroid gland or an autoimmune disease isn’t the culprit, according to WebMD.

Another way to diagnose what the problem is just by looking and listening. What does a patient’s mother, aunts, or grandmothers look like? Do they have similar, or greater amounts, of hair loss? Using magnification on the scalp can show if a woman’s follicles vary in size — with some thick and others thin. These are two telltale signs of female pattern hair loss, also called androgenetic alopecia.

This is a hereditary condition that affects about 30 million American women, according to the America Academy of Dermatology, and is the most common kind of hair loss. It happens to approximately 50 percent of women. Although it mostly occurs in the late 50s or 60s, it can happen at any time, even during teenage years.

Typically, each time a normal hair follicle is shed, it is replaced by hair that is equal in size. But in women with female-pattern hair loss, the new hair is finer and thinner — a more miniaturized version of itself, Rogers says. The hair follicles are shrinking and eventually they quit growing altogether.

Causes of hair loss

There are a wide range of conditions that can bring on hair loss, with some of the most common being pregnancy, thyroid disorders, and anemia. Others include autoimmune diseases, polycystic ovary syndrome (PCOS), and skin conditions such as psoriasis and seborrheic dermatitis.

Though there has been a link between menopause and hair loss, it could be that menopause and hair loss just occur at the same age.

Other reasons for hair loss include extreme stress; physical trauma like surgery or intense illness; dramatic weight loss over a short period of time; and taking too much Vitamin A. Hair loss can occur a couple of weeks to six months after any of these experiences.

Take it easy

One other way to thin hair is self-inflicted — hairstyles like cornrows or too-tight braids can cause hair loss called traction alopecia.

All of the things women do to manipulate their hair — dyes, chemical treatments, bad brushes, blow dryers, and flat irons — can result in damage and breakage. This includes brushing too much and towel drying aggressively when the hair is wet.

For most of these issues, the hair grows back or the loss can be reversed with medical treatments. But it is important to see a dermatologist if there seems to be something wrong, because the sooner treatment is started, the better the chances are for improving the growing season.

Maintaining a household budget, making sure the bills are paid and everyone’s needs are met with the funds available can be a daunting task. Imagine then the monumental task of maintaining the budget for an entire city.

The city of Fenton has a population of 11,756 as of 2017-2018, according to suburbanstats.org. It takes nearly 10 departments to run the city. Those departments include administration, the clerk, treasurer, assessor, building, public works, police, fire and more. Each of those departments is charged with budgeting its needs to provide specific services to city residents for each fiscal year, which runs from July 1 to the following June 30.

The accompanying charts (see sidebar) are from the city’s fiscal year 2019 budget.

“As demonstrated in the charts, the Taxable Value and Property Tax Revenues are still below the FY 2009 numbers,” said City Manager Lynn Markland. “Our property tax revenue is still approximately $800,000 per year less than 2009. Our revenue has not recovered from the recession.”

According to the U.S. National Bureau of Economic Research (the official arbiter of U.S. recessions) the recession began in December 2007 and ended in June 2009, and U.S. recessions) the recession began in December 2007 and ended in June 2009, and thus extended over 18 months.

Tax revenue at a 10-year low and 17 years of lost revenue make future projects difficult held the full Revenue Sharing amount for several years,” Markland said. “The cumulative amount is over $4.5 million.” According to SaveMICity (savemich.org), the link to which was provided by Markland, the city of Fenton has lost $4,580,458 in revenue sharing since 2002.

What is the reason for the loss?

Michigan’s cities and villages are the centers of our economy, according to the Michigan Municipal League (MML). They maintain the infrastructure and services that support the vast majority of state jobs. The revenue sharing distribution formula was designed to appropriately compensate the communities that support everyone and the higher costs they bear. Therefore, when that formula is underfunded, Michigan’s entire economy suffers.

A 2014 MML survey found cuts in revenue sharing have negatively impacted basic community services across Michigan. Capital projects such as street

Catch the ‘blood moon’ this Sunday

Total lunar eclipse will begin Sunday at 9:30 p.m. and end at 2:30 a.m.

By Tim Jagielo

If you train your eyes on the moon starting at about 10:30 p.m. Sunday, you’ll see something a little different — a blood moon.

A blood moon is essentially a more interesting way to describe a colorful total lunar eclipse, said Buddy Stark, manager of the Longway Planetarium in Flint.

Stark is in charge of educating the public on what’s going on in the night sky and keeps up with celestial events such as bright planets and eclipses. He said that depending on Earth’s atmosphere, the color of the moon will appear anywhere from orange to deep red in color.

He said that after humans knew what was going on with the atmosphere, an unexplainable “blood moon” was “pretty terrifying,” and was interpreted as a bad omen.

He said today, a small subset of people try to divine more meaning from lunar patterns, but added that there’s no science to back up a change in behavior for occurrences, such as blood moons.

These eclipses are fairly rare, happening only every year or so. This is not only a lunar eclipse, but also a “super moon,” meaning the moon will be as close as it can get to Earth in its orbit, though it may not look much closer to the naked eye.

According to Bloomberg.com, this is the last lunar eclipse until March 2021, in an “unusual lull” of lunar eclipses.

Celestial phenomena tends to bring people together. “It’s kind of a special thing that we only get here on earth,” Stark said. If they were seeing life forms on other planets in our solar system, they wouldn’t be able to view eclipses as we do because of the make-up of our atmosphere, and the optical effect it has on occurrences, such as eclipses.

Other planets would simply block the object from the sun’s light and it would disappear.

Also, eclipses are free, and in this case, anyone on this side of the planet can look at it, without eye protection, unlike a solar eclipse. “For the size of our planet, our moon is gigantic,” he said.

“We’re always, as a society, interested in space and what is out there, and what they can see. That’s been true for millennia,” Stark said. “That’s been true for millennia.”

January 20, 2019

Blood Moon schedule

9:30 p.m. — Eclipse begins. We will see a subtle difference in the moon.

10:30 p.m. — Moon will start to change color.

11:30 p.m. — “Totality” will start, meaning the entire moon will look red or orange. It will stay in totality until about 1:30 a.m.

1:30 a.m. — The moon leaves totality.

2:30 a.m. — Moon will be back to normal.

The Blood Moon in cinema

There are at least four movies named “Blood Moon” or “Bloodmoon.” “Blood Moon” (2014) is a horror western about a group of stagecoach travelers, riding under the red blood moon, arriving at a deserted town, only to have to fight off werewolves. “Bloodmoon” (1997) is a martial arts action film that “finds a retired detective returning to action to stop a martial arts master with steel fingers who is killing champions from all sports,” according to IMDb.com.

What is an eclipse?

According to space.com, “Lunar eclipses occur when Earth’s shadow blocks the sun’s light, which otherwise reflects off the moon. There are three types — total, partial and penumbral with the most dramatic being a total lunar eclipse, in which Earth’s shadow completely covers the moon. The next lunar eclipse will be a total lunar eclipse on Jan. 20-21 and will be visible from North and South America, Europe and Africa.”

BUSINESS BRIEFS

The State Bank promotes officer

The State Bank announced the promotion of Jessica Slieff as an officer in the company’s retail management division for the Fenton market. Slieff will be responsible for managing and expanding the retail portfolio in the Fenton region, interacting with multiple departments to expand relationships with our existing personal and commercial customers, and nurturing new relationships as well. Jessica began her career at The State Bank as a community office supervisor in 2014. Most recently, she is the community office manager of both the Silver Parkway branch, as well as the branch located inside VG’s.

“I take pride in working at a company that recognizes employee dedication. I also enjoy working for a company that makes the customer’s experience and community involvement a top priority,” Slieff said. Stacey Webb, senior vice president at The State Bank, said, “We are pleased to recognize Jessica with the promotion to retail banking officer. Jessica’s experience and proven ability to lead and mentor staff make her a natural candidate for this advancement.”

The State Bank promotes assistant vice president

The State Bank announced the promotion of Chris O’Connor as the company’s newest assistant vice president for the retail operations division. O’Connor will continue to be responsible for overseeing retail operations and project management. O’Connor has worked for The State Bank since 2000, starting as a part-time teller.

She became a full-time financial service representative in 2001, working her way to community office manager by 2013, and most recently the retail operations officer. “I have been fortunate to have held several different positions in my time with The State Bank. These opportunities have allowed me to develop not only professionally, but also contribute to the community in which I reside,” O’Connor said. Stacey Webb, senior vice president, said, “We are excited to recognize Chris with the promotion to assistant vice president overseeing retail operations and project implementation. She has been instrumental in completing several strategic initiatives and as a seasoned banker, brings her experienced skill set and technical abilities to the position.”

Taser laws are too strict

Getting a stun gun should be as easy as getting a gun

By Hannah Ball

An 18-year-old who wants to buy a long gun or rifle can walk into a store, fill out the proper forms, go through a background check and buy the weapon that day. At 18, you can vote, fight for your country, take out student loans and do “adult”-type things.

But you can’t buy a Taser.

In order to legally obtain a Taser, also called a “stun gun,” you need a concealed pistol license (CPL), which you have to be 21 to apply for. Michigan has more roadblocks to obtaining a non-lethal weapon compared to a lethal one. This makes no sense.

Our state is one of four that requires permit for ownership for stun guns. Approximately 35 states have little to no restrictions on Tasers, according to buy.taser.com.

I asked a few police officers about this. One police officer told me that, depending on the model, you might have only one shot with Tasers, and your aim has to be true. You can always “drive stun” someone by pressing the stun gun to the person. Another officer said they’re great self-defense weapons and a deterrent.

Not only can you get a gun at a younger age in Michigan, the laws are also stricter with Tasers.

You need a CPL in order to conceal carry a gun, but you can always open carry. This is not so for stun guns. CPLs come with a slew of rules, meaning Tasers are subject to tighter laws than guns, including mandatory training.

I have no issue with the age at which you can buy guns. What I have an issue with is how much harder it is to get a Taser.

Past 18-year-old me and current 25-year-old me would feel much better carrying around a Taser than a lethal weapon. What if I was carrying a gun and an attacker wrestles it away from me? I could die. If they grab my Taser, I could get electrocuted and experience the pain that the aforementioned officers described to me.

I’m not an expert in self-defense, but guns don’t have to be the first tool you turn to, nor should they be promoted as such.

Michigan needs to get in line with the majority of America and make it easier for young people, young women especially, to have a means of self-defense that isn’t lethal. Yes, there’s pepper spray, but that requires a closer proximity to the attacker, and a gust of wind could ruin those plans.

Also, it’d be incredibly satisfying to stun a would-be attacker and watch him writhe on the ground with 50,000 volts running through his body.

My solution? Don’t require a permit in order for people to buy a Taser. I’ll be emailing my legislators about this, and I encourage others to do the same.
NARCAN

(AHC) and hosted by the Holly Area Community Coalition Tuesday, Jan. 15.

Those who attended the class went home with a Narcan kit, funded by the Oakland County Health Network. The village police and fire departments, along with a firefighter from North Oakland County Fire Authority (NOCFA), gave brief presentations on opioid use in Oakland County, addiction and how Narcan has affected first responders’ jobs.

“There’s a good chance you could save a life with these Naloxone kits,” said Angela Spino-Bogota, community and school program coordinator at the AHC.

Administering the Narcan

Included in the Narcan kit are gloves, a facemask, informational brochures on support services and Hope not Handcuffs, instructions on how to use Narcan, and two 4 mg doses of the drug. Narcan reverses the effects of the opioids and puts that person into withdrawal. Narcan is not addictive.

Village of Holly Fire Chief Steve McGee told the class that someone who’s overdosing is going to appear dead, but stressed the importance of calling 911 and using the Narcan anyway.

Sano went through the motions of administering the drug. First, check their breathing and look for a pulse. If they won’t wake, lay the person on their back, uncap the Narcan, put the nozzle in one nostril, and firmly press the plunger. Then, put the person on their side to avoid vomit.

If they don’t wake, administer another dose. With these instructions in mind, students practiced doing chest compressions until help arrives.

“You just ruined their high,” said Donald Dewey, firefighter from NOCFA. The person will be angry.

It’s important still to call 911 if you’ve used the Narcan on someone and the person is awake. There’s a good possibility that person will still seek more opioids because their high was ruined.

Spino-Bogota said Narcan costs approximately $130-150 at Walgreens or CVS, but if you contact the AHC, they will refill the kit.

Don’t clean up after people

Spino-Bogota said not to clean up after a person who overdosed if pill bottles or heroin are around them.

“Whoever it is that’s coming to the scene really needs to understand what that person has taken,” she said. “Continuous doses of Narcan aren’t going to help that person if they are overdosed on benzodiazepines.”

You can find more information on the classes and get the kits refilled by calling the AHC at (248) 221-7101.

Good Samaritan Law and Hope not Handcuffs

Police Chief Michael Story spoke about Michigan’s Good Samaritan Law, which gives some legal protection to those calling for assistance with someone else’s overdose.

It prevents drug possession charges against people who call for medical assistance for an overdose in certain circumstances.

The village of Holly Police Department is a Hope not Handcuffs organization. If someone is fighting an addiction, they can go to the police department, or sign up online, and request help. The person will not be arrested, unless they have outstanding warrants, and are placed into a rehab facility.

Opioid use in Oakland County

Michigan is 16th in the nation for overdose deaths.

“Many people start with prescriptions,” said Fire Chief Steve McGee. “You become very dependent on it very quickly, within a week.”

In the cycle of addiction, as people use more and more opioids, their tolerance builds up and they need more to feel that same effect. The most common overdose fatalities occur after someone has a dry period, maybe in jail or a rehab facility, and then they use again. Their tolerance has gone down and they can’t handle as much as they used to, so they overdose.

In Oakland County, 165 people died from opioid-related deaths in 2016, according to accessoakland.oakgov.com. In that same year, approximately 750,000 opioid prescriptions were filled in the county, which is the equivalent to 6,035 prescriptions per every 10,000 residents, including children.

DRUG-RELATED DEATHS

2018……………………………………224

“We had 100 fewer deaths last year than the previous year,” said Police Chief Michael Story, adding that it’s due to Narcan. “We’ve had instances where we’ve administered Narcan to the same house three times in one evening.”

The average age of someone who overdosed and died in Oakland County in 2018 is 42. Of those deaths, 115 were male and 56 were female. Approximately 80 percent were white.

He encourages adults and kids who have an interest in learning to ski or snowboard to take advantage of Discover Michigan Skiing. This statewide program partners with McDonald’s restaurants to provide an affordable ski learning experience.

Sponsored by the Michigan Snowsports Industries Association, “Discover Michigan Skiing” offers a huge discounted package price of $35 for a beginner lift ticket, equipment rental and lesson for novice skiers of any age. Twenty-six Michigan ski resorts are participating in the program. For more details, visit GoskiMichigan.com.

Kurt Payne, director of Mt. Holly’s Ski School, believes that anyone of any age can learn to ski. “Nobody’s too old to come try,” he said. “We start lessons for kids as young as 3 years old. Skiing is such a fun family sport that every age is an optimum age.”

Tibbitts admits that this winter season has been a challenge so far, but that the biggest challenge is getting the word out that there is snow on Mt. Holly. “If it’s not in your backyard, you’re not inspired to get out,” he said. “People can’t even imagine that we’ve got snow, but we do. The entire mountain is open, 100 percent. We’re averaging two to three feet of snow. The conditions have remained very good the entire time. The grooming machinery fluffs the snow back up.”

In recapping the ski season so far this winter, it began with a bang in November with lots of snow, “but December was a disappointment, especially after we got going early like we did,” Tibbitts said. “There were three Fridays in December that were taken down by either rain that day or the day prior. It even rained on New Year’s Eve.”

Tibbitts admits he’s an eternal optimist and well-seasoned by Michigan’s unpredictable winter weather. “We still have the rest of the winter,” Tibbitts said.
Hungry for Restaurant Week?

Fenton restaurants entice winter diners with special menus for Jan. 20-26

By Sally Rummel

Restaurant Week in Fenton has become a special tradition for local eateries and diners who’ll enjoy unique menu items Sunday through Saturday, Jan. 20-26.

This is the fourth annual event and Mark Hamel, who has organized it every year, is pleased to have 14 restaurants on board. “For so many years, I wanted for Fenton to have enough restaurants to do a Restaurant Week, and we definitely do now,” Hamel said. “I’m really excited about this year’s event.”

He said the whole idea of Restaurant Week is to get people off the couch in the winter, and see what Fenton has to offer in the way of dining experiences. “The restaurants that participate really like it because it brings people out during a slow time of year for us,” he added.

Matt Sherrow, who owns Fenton Winery & Brewery with his wife, Ginny, said he has done all four Restaurant Week events since they started.

“This year Restaurant Week coincides with our Anniversary Week and Appreciation Party,” Sherrow said. “This is our 11th year, we’ve got a lot to celebrate.”

He and Ginny chose to feature their best-selling pizza, the Golden Ticket, and take $5 off the menu price and $1 off the Swinging Berry’s Draught. “They pair really well,” he said.

Beale Street Smokehouse BBQ is another local restaurant that has participated every year. Beale St. will be offering $6 off its Memphis-style St. Louis Rib Dinner, a full rack of slow-smoked pork ribs, served with sides and specially priced for Restaurant Week.

Nick Sorise, owner of The Fenton Hotel, is very pleased with the response he gets during Restaurant Week. “People like it, it generates business and it’s a nice deal,” he said. “We kicked around the menu a bit and decided on our three-course menu with lots of choices for people. We kept it priced under $20.”

Participating restaurants include:

- Beale Street Smokehouse BBQ
- Boston’s Restaurant & Sports Bar
- Ciao Italian Bistro & Wine Bar
- CRUST
- El Toro
- Fenton Firehall
- Fenton Hotel
- Fenton House
- Fenton Winery & Brewery
- Mega Coney Island
- Sagebrush Cantina
- The Laundry
- The Relief & Resource Co.
- Tropical Smoothie Cafe

According to the Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement Standards, there are nearly 2,315 fewer police officers and 1,800 fewer firefighters on the streets of Michigan since the tragedy of Sept. 11, 2001.

In the city of Fenton, police activity represents the majority of 2019 budget expenses at 40 percent ($2,492,383). Fire services comes in second at 11 percent ($705,360). General services is next at 10 per-cent ($622,446).

ROBOCALLS

But it’s still not able to block “neighbor spoofing” calls, unless it is allowed access to your smartphone contacts to block almost everything but those on your contact list and global white list. Nomorobo creator Aaron Foss said it blocks anywhere with your area code, and the same first numbers of your cell phone to limit spam calls.

“Neighbor spoofing” is when you receive a call from a number that is very similar to your own, and can look familiar or legitimate. When you answer the call, it’s either silence or an automated message. The call was generated randomly by someone using a web-based system, and is probably a legitimate number used by someone else.

A return call to this number will likely lead you to a confused, innocent party at that number.

Nomorobo was created by Foss, whose idea won the 2013 Robocall Challenge run by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to shut down robocalls.

His system is a cloud-based solution that uses “simultaneous ringing,” which allows incoming calls to be routed to a second telephone line, reported the FTC in April 2013. In the Nomorobo solution, this second line would identify and hang up on illegal robocalls before they could ring through to the user.

Foss testified to a U.S. House of Representatives subcommittee on combating robocalls in April 2018. He said that his system has stopped 650 million unwanted robocalls in the U.S., and is stopping 30 million every month. He said that the more people use the system, the more effective the system will be.

“It will work on smartphones, such as the iPhone 5s and newer, running iOS 10 and up. It will also work on Android devices 4.1 and newer.”

WE ARE A Republic. If we can keep it. You left off thinking in front of representa-tive Democracy. Close to ‘to each according to his needs from each according to his ability.’ Hello Marx.

JOHN ENGLER’S REIGN of terror is over. Michigan State University will be returned to its people.

RE-OPEN GOVERNMENT AS soon as possible and then have immediate discus-sions between both parties and the White House over security concerns along the southern border.

IT’S NOT AN exaggeration to say that the future of constitutional government may depend on Barr’s ability to keep the promises he made under oath Tuesday. What senators who vote to confirm him will be gambling on is that he cares more about history’s verdict than about Donald Trump’s approval.

Today, the website boasts more than 1 billion calls stopped. The system is utilized by wireless providers, such as Xfinity, to block robocalls.

While the system blocks most robocalls from a database of 1.3 million known spam numbers, he reported that these “neighbor spoofing” calls have increased 10 times in one year.

This isn’t a concern for landline users but it’s irritating for smartphone users. With the Nomorobo app, these calls come across as “Robocaller (unblockable),” which according to the Nomorobo website, tricks most call blockers.

If you allow the Nomorobo app to use your contacts, it can block such calls, without blocking family and friends.

In the beginning, it was a landline protection plan, but today a mobile service is offered. Landlines are protected for free, while mobile phones are $1.99 per device, per month or $19.99 annually.

“It’s been amazing to have stopped one billion robocalls from scamming and annoying people,” Foss said. “We protect millions of people each and every day.”

How it works:

For landlines uses a feature known as “Simultaneous Ring.” When simultaneous ring is enabled, your phone will ring on more than one number at the same time. The first device to pick it up gets the call and the other phones stop ringing.

So, when the Nomorobo number is enabled as a simultaneous ring number it is the first number to screen the call. If it’s a legitimate call, the Nomorobo through to your number. If the call is an illegal robocaller, Nomorobo intercepts the call and hangs up for you. Your phone will ring once you let knowing that the robocall has been answered and sent to Nomorobo.

It will also work on smartphones, such as the iPhone 5s and newer, running iOS 10 and up. It will also work on Android devices 4.1 and newer.

WEEKEND TIMES

W-31, with the intention of shaking a stodgy image and appeal to the youth of the times in a semi-secret project.

The MSU student chapter of the Society of Automotive Engineers used the car. They outfitted it with aftermarket performance parts to make it into a super stock drag racer. They raced it until graduating in 1974, following many races that included a blown transmission and engine and other mishaps.

The team of young racers went on to become successful engineers in the adult world, but they never forgot about the race car they worked on for four years.

One such engineer is Dennis Kline of Troy. “We had fun doing this and the experience proved to be very valuable in securing employment within the automotive industry,” he said. “Virtually all of us became life-long ‘car nuts’ and fondly recall this unique opportunity.”

Kline is a former Chrysler designer, who drives a Dodge Challenger hot rod. Other team members went on to drag race professionally.

He attended a reunion meeting of the engineers in January 2018, where he learned that somehow, the vehicle had survived the decades, and had been seen on public streets in Michigan as recently as 2013. “This has triggered a year-long search to figure out what happened to the car and how could it possibly still exist after almost a half of a century later,” said Kline, while reaching out to the Times.

Review magazine. An in-depth television story is in the works by WZZM 13 (ABC Grand Rapids) for their show “Our Michigan Life” to be broadcast in February.

In late December, Kline placed a local Craigslist ad seeking information about the car — a long shot. To his surprise, someone reported that they’d seen it in Fenton at the former Fenton Auto Salvage (now Scrap Dogs.) “The sighting was about six years ago…and as you might imagine, we were extremely excited,” Kline said.

He came to Fenton seeking information, but came up empty-handed. “The management at Scrap Dogs explained that they simply recycle cars and crush anything that comes in. Since our racecar had no title, they had no idea if it was there when the yard was purchased. And because the car did not have a title or VIN, they would have no way of looking up its history,” he said.

While the lead was exciting, former scrap yard owner John Abee said he would have remembered such a car, and therefore it’s unlikely it ever made it to his former business.

“Special cars like Project W-31 bring fond memories to people, and it’s a way to relieve their youth,” Kline said. “The broad interest in this story has been nothing short of amazing.”

Tips have come out of the woodwork for their unique story, and he’s still no closer to finding the car. He said it was last seen with MSU decals still intact. He said he doesn’t want to get the car back, he simply wants to know what happened to it.

But the most common reason for an ER visit, in Skinner’s experience, is abdominal pain. It could be a kidney stone, gastroenteritis, a bladder infection, even a pregnancy.

Deciding the best place for treatment within the ER is the job of the triage nurse, who determines the treatment priority of incoming patients, based on an initial assessment and monitoring. Critically ill or injured patients are always given top priority.

The Fast Track area is for non-life-threatening illnesses or injuries, to quickly treat patients with mild ailments like cuts and colds, broken bones, etc., without interfering with the treatment of seriously ill patients.

The Short Stop area is for patients with abdominal pain and similar issues, who may need additional testing. The main ER is for patients with chest pain, stroke symptoms, trauma or older patients with abdominal issues.

If you find yourself or a family member in need of emergency care, Skinner said people should know that it’s not always going to be fast. “People think they’ll get in and out. But you might have to wait on labs or X-rays. Be patient.”

Many ERs, including McLaren, do have online ER check-in so you can register into the ER system, yet wait at home.

Sometimes the reason for long wait times in any ER is that people often use the ER as their doctor’s office, especially if they don’t have health insurance.

“Other people have to wait longer then,” Skinner said. She added that time-management is an especially important tool for ER nursing. “It’s super crucial,” she said. “It’s all on you. You’re going to be behind if you don’t learn it.”

She feels especially suited to ER nursing compared to being an ICU (Intensive Care Unit) or floor nurse because of the personality traits she has for the ER. “I love it,” she said. “It’s crazy down there and I wouldn’t trade it for anything.”

Should I go to the ER or Urgent Care?

• Urgent care can fill in for your regular doctor on evenings and weekends, for routine injury treatment and acute medical care that a primary physician would typically perform in their office. For example, this means colds and flu, sprains, sprained ankles, minor cuts that require stitches. Some may offer routine X-rays and simple labs.

• ERs are for emergencies, the “bigger stuff” that require immediate care through surgery, labs, CAT scans and MRIs, ultrasound and access to doctors’ expertise across a variety of disciplines. If you’re experiencing chest pain or weakness on one side of your body, definitely go to an ER via ambulance.

Which hospital ER should you go to in an emergency?

• Understand your insurance policy before an emergency actually happens. Know your co-pay and co-insurance and what your plan will cover if you’re not admitted to the hospital. Your insurer can also tell you which area hospitals take your insurance. Ask the billing department at your hospital of choice whether the ER doctors participate in your insurance plan.

• Know how your insurer covers medically necessary ambulance rides and how your plan defines that term.

SHUTDOWN

shutdown because they’re considered mandatory spending.
Missouri checkpoints and affected departments

Furloughed federal employees shared photos of their paychecks with a bottom line of $0 last week. This includes the Coast Guard, food safety inspectors, the Environmental Protection Agency, staffing at national parks and more.

Nine out of 15 federal departments and additional agencies are affected, including the Departments of State, Treasury, Agriculture, Interior, Justice, Housing and Urban Development, Commerce, and Homeland Security.

Departments that remain open are Labor, Education, Health and Human Services and Veterans Affairs.

Many of these employees, such as the Coast Guard and food inspectors can be deemed “essential” employees, meaning they have to work without pay. Not all of the workers comply.

This affects not only federal workers, but the companies they do business with. The shutdown is halting projects by contractors hired by the federal government. This includes researchers, machine operators, chefs in government buildings, health aides, computer programmers and more.

However, Trump signed a law guaranteeing back pay for these federal workers when the government reopens. Our legislators and members of the executive branch are still paid during a shutdown.

The Transportation Security Administration asked its agents to work without pay, but many are electing not to report to work, causing long wait times at airports. Michael Bilello, TSA’s assistant administrator for public affairs, told The Washington Post, “The number of people calling out because of financial concerns is increasing.”

Approximately one out of every 16 TSA agents isn’t going to work. Three major airports, Atlanta, Houston and Miami, are currently operating under contingency plans.

Bishop International Airport in Flint released a statement on its Facebook page about the shutdown, which states, “We want to let all of our passengers know that wait times are normal at Flint Bishop. We do appreciate the concern for our amazing TSA staff. They are working hard to make sure there is minimal impact to travel in our region. Rest assured things are running smoothly at FNT. We will update you if anything changes! Just join us in thanking our TSA agents when given the opportunity.”

With the IRS shut down, many are questioning how tax returns and refunds will be handled. The Trump administration announced it will still send tax refunds. However, a few experts and financial websites are questioning whether this is possible.

According to Barron’s, a financial website, Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin ordered some IRS workers back to work to process returns. Within the first week of the 2018 filing season, more than 18 million taxpayers filed returns, amounting to approximately $12.6 billion in refunds.

However, without an approved budget or funding for the Treasury Department, the IRS may not legally be allowed to issue return checks.

Government assistance

Trump has promised aid to farmers affected by tariffs, but there are delays due to the shutdown. The U.S. Department of Agriculture, the department that handles food stamps, announced that food assistance is funded through February.

Other effects

The shutdown is also affecting the beer industry. Because beer brewing requires approval for labels, beer names, distribution and packaging, many companies are delaying new beers.

Griffins win thriller vs. Alliance, 2-1

The Fenton/Linden varsity hockey team is proving they can win any type of game.

Earlier this season, the Griffins were winning high scoring games, providing five or more goals in most of their wins.

On Wednesday, the Griffins won a defensive-minded game against the Alliance Hockey team.

Trailing 1-0 entering the final period, Zach Eakes scored his 14th and 15th goals of the season, leading the Griffins to the 2-1 conference victory.

The win keeps the Griffins (4-1-0) in first place in league play.

The teams played to a scoreless first period and the Alliance eventually took the lead when Jonny Kippe scored an even-strength goal with 3:48 left in the second period. That lead held until Eakes scored his first goal with 11:22 left in the period.

Eagles proving they are a Metro contender

By David Troppens

Flint — With each week the Linden varsity wrestling team grows in confidence.

Maybe at the start of the Metro League season, the Eagles thought they were contenders for the league crown. After all, they had worked hard during the offseason to be considered one of the contenders. But now, four duals into the season, the Eagles realize that they are legitimate contenders who could possibly finish the season on top.

The Eagles improved their Metro dual record to 4-0 by beating Brandon 59-23 and by beating Kearsley 48-27, Wednesday at the Hornets’ home gym. The wins leave Linden as one of the only two undefeated teams in the Metro. Holly also remains 4-0 in dual play. The Eagles are a confident group.

“We have guys in the room working hard,” senior tri-captain Colton Powell said. “Our coaches are pushing us. We’ve been doing this year round, so this is nothing new. We are ready to take the Metro.”

“We’ve come a long way (since the start of the season). We have a lot of young and new guys on the team that have come a long way that are buying into the program, buying into the coaching and pushing themselves.”

“Everyone is learning what we learned in practice. They are coming out on the mat, hearing what the coaches are saying and that’s what they are doing,” senior tri-captain Caleb White said. “They are going out and wrestling hard. People with losing records are getting winning records. People who don’t know us, are about to know us.”

Brandon and Kearsley learned a lot about the Eagles on Wednesday. The match with Kearsley was close at the start. In fact, the Eagles trailed 27-24 nine matches into the bout. However, Linden won each of the final five matches, three by pinfall, to earn the victory. Uziah Delgado (160), Wyatt Gocha (171) and Johnathon Marme (215) earned pinfall victories while Powell (189) and Preston Parker (285) earned decision victories during the stretch. Parker ended the match with a 9-7 overtime victory.

Fenton swimmers embracing family atmosphere

By David Troppens

Fenton — Ask Fenton senior captain Josh Kippe to describe the current Fenton varsity boys swim team and he can name off quite a few words mighty fast.

“We are fun, charismatic, out of the box, sometimes crazy and most of the time just fun and loving,” Kippe said.

He could’ve added another word to the list — talented.

The Tigers proved how talented they are in a dual meet against Owosso on Tuesday. The Tigers posted the top three times in each individual swim at the event, earning a 106-42 victory. The final score would’ve been an even larger deficit, except Fenton competed in the last few events as an exhibition to keep from piling more points on their team score.

“The team is just great,” Kippe said. “Every-

Tigers get tangled up in another tight game, fall to Flushing

By Dale M. Smith

Fenton — The Fenton varsity boys basketball team has had a habit this season of rallying behind early.

What happened again Tuesday night at the Jungle as the visitors from Flushing came out strong in the first minutes of the game, led by three 3-pointers from Raiders’ junior Landen Mores-Pierce in the first 3:15 of the game. The Tigers fought back but were not able to overcome that slow start, falling 50-45.

With Moore-Pierce hitting another three late in the first to make it a 16-7 Flushing lead, the Tigers had to get out of their funk on the offensive end and battle back. They did.

Down only two points after the first quarter, Fenton used an early second quarter bucket from junior James McArthur courtesy of a nice long pass from Addison McIntosh to tie the game at 19. The Flint Metro League rivals played each other tough to finish out the first half with the Raiders taking a 29-25 lead in to the locker room.

Fenton forward Jacob Boulay had a really strong first half with four points, seven rebounds and a block.

Fenton’s Trent DeGayner got the Tigers going early in the third quarter with a long three only 20 seconds into the second half. A bucket from Parker Brady gave Fenton its first lead of the game at 30-29. A McIntosh 3-pointer made the Fenton lead 35-32 heading into the final stanza.

Blue Devils growing more confident, defeat ND Prep

By David Troppens

For those who haven’t noticed, the Lake Fenton varsity girls basketball team is having a pretty solid season.

The squad is nearing the halfway point of the season and are 7-2. The Blue Devils earned their seventh win on Tuesday, earning a tight 51-47 victory against Notre Dame Prep.

Lake Fenton found themselves in a dogfight with the Irish from the start. Both teams had issues with keeping possession of the ball, turning it over 19 times each, that helped keep the game close throughout.

The Irish took the early lead, establishing a 14-10 lead in the first quarter and leading by as many as eight early on. Scoring points has been an issue for both teams for most of this season.
