Weddings of 2019

A CONSTANTLY CHANGING INDUSTRY

Raska said that for a while the trend was toward shrinking guest lists. Today, lists are actually getting bigger again. Raska said he has a client with a 475-guest wedding coming up. They can expect to spend $145 per guest, according to ValuePenguin.com, a company from LendingTree. Yes that’s an approximate $70,000 wedding.

On the other end, there’s the pop-up weddings, which Raska said is for immediate family only. They order flowers a week ahead of time and throw a nice party in their backyard.

Summer is no longer king for weddings. He said September and October are becoming the most popular months for weddings.

According to Dustin Rourke with Gerych’s Events, traditional wedding dresses are coming back in style. These include longer trains, long sleeves and less skin. He said brides are requesting personal items to be added to their bouquets, like pieces of fabric from a deceased grandmother.

THE WEDDING BUDGET

According to The Knot, the average cost of a wedding nationally was $33,931 in 2018. This includes clothing...
Generally speaking, I am not a fan of war movies. There is one though that I have watched several times — The Dirty Dozen, which was first released in 1967.

During WWII, Major Reisman (played by Lee Marvin) is charged with training a team of soldiers to parachute across enemy lines and assassinate German personnel at a French chateau. The soldiers, recruited from convicted criminals on death row, are promised commuted sentences. The 12 men proved to be a competent unit and accomplished their mission.

The film is based on a novel of the same name that was inspired by a real-life group called the “Filthy Thirteen.”

We watched this movie again recently and it got me to thinking. What if the U.S. and major countries of the world recruited some of their death row prisoners to form a massive international army to combat the horrific problems in Central American countries that are causing the people there to flee to our borders in order to save their lives?

This new world army of enforcers could be trained to wipe out organized criminal groups like gangs and drug traffickers, and identify the police, prosecutors and judges who are allowing these criminals to get away with their crimes and put them on the hot seat. Send ‘em all to Guantanamo Bay detention camp or some deserted island. I read Gitmo only has about 40 prisoners now, down from 245 back in the day.

If members of this special army are successful, they can get their sentences commuted, or if they really prove themselves worthy, can remain in Central America to keep the peace as law enforcement officers — forever. If they are not successful, and actually become part of the problem, they go back to death row.

In the meantime, the smart young people in these countries, who must be frightened and tired of living the way they do, can be called upon for ideas to rebuild and strengthen their countries. And, instead of spending billions on a wall to keep them out of the United States, maybe those billions could be spent on building schools, medical facilities, affordable housing communities, churches, small start-up businesses and more to boost their economy and make them want to stay home.

Shoot, if our president built a couple of hotels and a golf course in Honduras, it would put thousands of local citizens to work. Costa Rica, which is just over 400 miles from Honduras, entertains 1.7 million tourists a year from the U.S. and Canada. Earnings from tourism, according to the Costa Rican Embassy, amounts to more than $1.7 billion U.S. dollars per year.

Think this is a dumb idea? Well, it’s no dumber than what’s happening now. Just sayin’!
Bridezillas
...that really take the cake

You want me to what?
The bride was a blonde. All bridesmaids except for me were brunette. She asked me to dye my hair brown for the wedding because she “wanted to be the only blonde.” I suggested that instead I just give up my bridesmaid spot. Thankful to this day because I heard the dresses and bachelorette party cost all the other girls more money than I make in a month.

Fired for losing fat
Between the time I agreed to be a bridesmaid and a couple of months before the wedding I lost some weight. The bride got angry at me because she wanted to be the skinny one and threw me out of the wedding party.

Mommy dearest
I recently attended my father’s wedding in August of this year, of which I was not asked but required to be a bridesmaid. About 24 hours after the wedding, my new “stepmother” was screaming at me in front of the entire wedding party for not referring to her as my mother. My real mother is very much alive and we are very close.

Not those green beans
This was the most expensive wedding I had catered at around $100,000. The bride went absolutely crazy because she was given cut green beans as opposed to French-style cut green beans. She was rude to everyone and spent the entire reception screaming at her new spouse. He looked miserable and beaten down at his own wedding. Three months later, she never made the final payment on the food or the venue. Why? Because she couldn’t afford it — her divorce lawyers were costing her a fortune.

Don’t you die on me now
The father of the bride had a heart attack and as he was being carried out on the stretcher the sobbing bride yells, “How could you ruin my wedding like this?”

Not a cheapskate
Went to a wedding in Cuba once (live in Canada) and after paying to fly and stay there and getting a suit (wasn’t wedding party, just a close friend), I only gave a $100 cash present (since the rest of the trip easily cost me $1,300). The bride’s family had the nerve to email me asking why I only gave $100 as a present, especially since I had the privilege of seeing the wedding in person. I was a guy just out of school at his first job less than a year.

Weddings are beautiful occasions, the joining of two people who love each other and have committed to sharing the rest of their lives together. There are some occasions though, when a seemingly little thing can turn the whole affair ugly. Here are a few anonymous stories about bridezillas that really take the cake:

WEDDINGS
Continued from Page 21 and the rings, but not the honeymoon. “I don’t think those numbers are realistic in our marketplace in Michigan; I think they’re low,” he said.

Raska said the cost of a wedding greatly depends on the individuals and the location. Holly would be the most economical area of his three locations. The Detroit and Ferndale spots could end up being even more than that $33,000 average.

TIPS FROM THE PROFESSIONALS
The biggest factor in the cost of a wedding is the guest list and the size of the bridal party. Raska has had clients approach him expressing the need to have an economy wedding, but also want a group of 12 bridesmaids.

Like with anything, the clients have to be realistic about what their budget can get them. At a lower budget, “They can still be lovely; you just have to keep that in mind when you’re making your guest list.”

Raska said asking for “inclusive” prices will get the final cost with taxes and fees. Otherwise, there may be surprises regarding costs.

Both Raska and Rourke said Pinterest is a popular wedding planning tool. Rourke said the fun things couples find might not be affordable in the real world. Raska said it’s useful to see what couples like, but then they have to focus in on specific themes they can do within their budget.

Michigan State’s Jones presents his message to Holly athletes

By David Troppens

Holly — Greg Jones has earned himself a great life through football.

He went to an outstanding prep school in Cincinnati, Archbishop Moeller High School, and continued his athletic career at Michigan State University.

The linebacker was a four-year starter, earning All-American honors twice and First-Team All Big 10 honors three times.

He then was drafted in the sixth round by the New York Giants and played on the Super Bowl championship squad. The Giants defeated New England 21-17.

Jones ended up playing in the NFL for three seasons, and then spent parts of four seasons in the Canadian Football League.

Tigers close 7-on-7 scrambles excited about future season

Experienced Fenton looking to return to top of Flint Metro League this fall

By David Troppens

Fenton — Fenton varsity football coach Jeff Setzke says there is a different sense of purpose during this summer’s sessions together.

After earning at least a share of the Metro League title for the last seven seasons, and outright championships for four straight seasons, those runs ended last year when Brandon and Flushing earned the co-Metro title.

That has the Fenton Tigers working on a mission.

“It is a very veteran football team that has a chip on its shoulders,” Setzke said. “We have 25 seniors coming back with multitude of starters on both sides. From that standpoint, we have been able to hit the ground running. We have a little chip on our shoulder because we did not like the way last year finished. You don’t realize what you miss until you don’t have it anymore. Last year some teams finished ahead of us, and that doesn’t settle well.”

The Tigers concluded a summer of Wednesday 7-on-7 camps at Fenton High School, competing with three other schools. The scrambles are one of many things the team has done to prepare for the upcoming season.

“We’ve had a good summer,” Setzke said. “The weather for everybody has gotten in the way of things, but we’ve had a good summer with our conditioning, speed, agility and training.

“We’ve had many 7-on-7s. We went

However, none of it happened without Jones making some serious decisions at an early age. Jones had to deal with gangs, violence and drugs as he grew up in Cincinnati. And it was the decisions he made as he grew up that assured he kept the doors open to a successful future.

Jones visited the Holly varsity football team on Tuesday, discussing his message to the squad. A week earlier he spoke to the cross country program.

“I was able to steer away from those things, using the things my parents taught me,” Jones said. “I was a little bit scared knowing if I didn’t do it (succumb to peer pressure), this was going to happen, but at the same time I had to make decisions and this is what this program is all about.”

Jones said he remembered when he was as young as 8, when he may have made his first realization.

“I was talking to my cousin and he said, ‘I could’ve played football,’” Jones said. “I asked what happened and he said he didn’t like the coach, didn’t want to get yelled at and that’s it. I thought what if I just keep going on and ignore it. It sucks. No one likes that, but I wondered why they yell at you and that’s why they are good coaches. What they are telling you is important as well.”

TALKING ABOUT CONCERTS

As much as we possibly can be, we are pretty big concert goers. The key words are ‘as much as we possibly can.’ Anna and I work a lot of opposite shifts, so that limits our concerts we attend, but somehow it seems we make it to at least three a year, with most coming during the summer.

I thought it may be fun listing my favorite artists I’ve seen in concert. My top three

Without a doubt, Alice Cooper is on top of the list. Alice is now 71 years old, but anyone who sees him in concert probably wouldn’t believe it. He’s routinely breaking out of straight jackets, dealing with guillotines and seeking more victims on stage during his shows.

His crowds are passionate fans and range from age 8 to 80. He came to Meadowbrook earlier this month and it’s very common to see families from kids to grandparents going to the concert together. Weird Al has done a few interesting things during his last couple of concerts. He was ‘unplugged’ last year and now he has an orchestra backing up his regular band.

Godsmack is very good live. The double drum solo is always very cool, and their song ‘Voodoo’ is easily my favorite live. If you get a chance, go see them.

Also, a quick shout out to Iron Maiden. Anna and I lost about 20 percent of our hearing at a show we saw probably about five years ago. It was worth it.

Never want to see again
A few years ago Whitesnake came to Pine Knob and we attended the show. It was hard watching lead singer David Coverdale on stage. Apparently, has had a few face lifts because it seemed every time he sang, his mouth hardly moved. I just found it disturbing and it made it hard for me to concentrate on the show.

Just looking at her, no one would guess Anna to be a fan of the hardest music alive. Consequently, I’ve been dragged to my fair share of Five Finger Death Punch, Megadeth and Slayer concerts over the years. I once fell asleep while Volbeat were playing, so now Anna considers the group my lullaby music. I think it was when we saw Slayer I had earplugs on and didn’t think they were working. I took them off to reset them, and quickly found out they were working. The music was just that loud.

In the ‘interesting’ chapter
In 1994, I attended the 25th anniversary of Woodstock concert. It was interesting because so many of the artists were new artists supporting their first albums. Most of the songs I didn’t know, which created some lulls.

That said, there were plenty of my favorites to make it super memorable. And even without the music, our bus’s drug bust on our way up to the concert and Saturday’s rain and mud made it super memorable.

to Notre Dame and Hope College and also went down to Clarkston.”

Some of the sessions were bothered by bad weather, including the traditional trip to Notre Dame.

“There was a monsoon in Notre Dame,” Setzke said. “After pool play, they cancelled the rest of it. There wasn’t a little rain, but a lot of it — too much to the point of not being fun. We still got a chance to play in the stadium and it was a great experience.”

All eyes will be on last year’s starting quarterback, Sophomore Dylan Davidson. Of course, Davidson suffered a first half injury in the opening game of the season and missed the rest of the year. Now stronger and taller, Davidson has had a solid summer.

“He’s been fantastic,” Setzke said. “He can really throw it. He’s our best pure thrower we’ve had in my tenure here. ... He can make any throw.

“He’s grown. He’s 6-foot-1 and 205 pounds. He’s not a small quarterback. He’s the real deal.”

Diet and exercise are integral parts of the formula for a healthy life. Though few people may look forward to giving up certain foods in favor of more nutritious diets, healthy, low-calorie foods don’t have to be boring and bland.

Breakfast smoothies are a great way to maximize nutrient profiles and flavors to achieve a filling and fast meal. Smoothies that capitalize on tropical tastes rife with fiber can tame hunger and offer a jolt of energy to get you through the day. Such is the case with this recipe for “Fiber-Filled Banana Colada Smoothie” from Ellen Brown’s “Super Smoothies” (Crestline). This recipe offers fruits with wonderfully complementary flavors that are both high in fiber and rich in supercharged nutrients like potassium, vitamin A and vitamin C.
Understanding feline diabetes

Diabetes is a condition most often associated with humans. But this potentially debilitating disease can even affect pets, including the family cat.

Feline diabetes can greatly affect cats' quality of life. The Cornell University College of Veterinary Medicine estimates that between 0.2 and 1 percent of cats in the general population suffer from feline diabetes. While that’s a low number, the potential dangers faced by cats with undiagnosed cases of feline diabetes makes it imperative that cat owners understand this disease and how to recognize it.

What is diabetes?
The cells in a cat’s body require sugar in the form of glucose for energy. Glucose in the blood requires the hormone insulin, which serves as something of a key that unlocks the doors to the cells, making them capable of employing the glucose for energy. The insulin attaches to the cells and lets the body know when to absorb the glucose. That process is essential for muscle function. When a cat has type 1 diabetes, glucose concentrations are high because of a decrease in insulin production. Type 2 diabetes, which is more common among felines than type 1, occurs when glucose levels are high because the cells are not responding to the insulin in an appropriate way.

What are some signs that may indicate the presence of feline diabetes?
Diabetes deprives the body of a necessary energy source, so when cats are suffering from diabetes, be it type 1 or type 2, weight loss is likely to occur. That weight loss occurs because cats’ bodies will turn to sources other than glucose for energy. In these instances, the body breaks down fats and proteins, resulting in weight loss. The CUCVM notes that this weight loss occurs even though cats’ appetites increase.

Excessive thirst and urination is another potential indicator of feline diabetes. Cats’ bodies respond to elevated levels of glucose in their blood by excreting excessive amounts of the glucose in their urine. That high concentration of glucose in the urine pulls excessive amounts of water into the urine. According to the CUCVM, this results in increased urine volume, increased urinary water loss, a higher likelihood of dehydration, and an increase in thirst.

Some cats experience nerve damage in their hind limbs as a result of feline diabetes. However, the CUCVM notes that this is a rare occurrence.

Cat owners who suspect their cats may be suffering from diabetes should report their concerns to their veterinarians immediately. Treatment can be very effective and restore quality of life to cats.
