What's for breakfast?

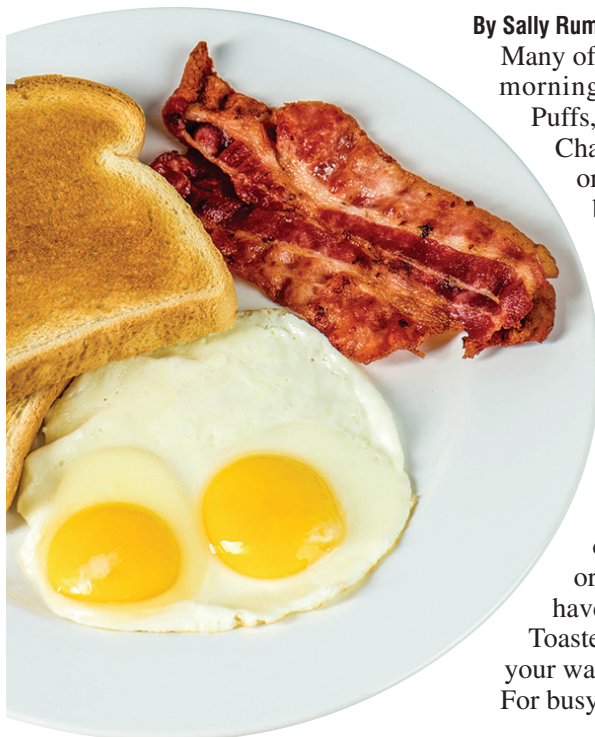

■ The morning meal, dubbed the most important meal of the day, is changing its food trends

By Sally Rummel

Many of us grew up on sugary morning cereals like Cocoa Puffs, Cap'n Crunch, Lucky Charms, Golden Grahams or a healthier Special K breakfast, topped off with a splash of cold milk.

Oh, how we loved that morning rush of sugar and carbs. Many of our favorites are still nostalgic reminders of our childhood.

If you were a child of the 1960s, '70s, '80s or '90s, you also might have grabbed a Pop-Tart, Toaster Strudel or yogurt on your way out the door to school. For busy commuters on the go, Server Becky VanDriessche of Shirley's Café in Linden delivers a breakfast order in February 2018. Times file photo.

SUMMARY

■ Breakfast is often touted as the most important meal of the day, but changing trends are putting different food items on the morning table.

McDonald's unveiled the first fast food breakfast sandwich, the Egg McMuffin, in 1972 and it remains a popular menu staple.

About a third of our breakfasts are eaten on the go, according to market researchers, the NPD Group.

My T.J. Maxx summer

The new T.J. Maxx is set to open its doors in Fenton in a couple of weeks. For the one or two women in town who may not know, it is on Silver Parkway where Kmart used to be.

I worked part time during the summer of 1993 at the Rochester Hills store. Our sons were 1½ and 3 years old at the time. My husband worked full time in Auburn Hills and I worked days at Oakland University nearby. Although we owned a house in Holly, we had the bright idea that we would rent a little place closer to work, and make a little extra money renting out our Holly house.

And I decided it would be fun to work part time at T.J. Maxx a couple nights a week.

In my early 40s at the time, I was one of the oldest employees there. I think it is because of that and because I knew how to do it, that management stuck me in the men's department. When I say I knew how to do it, I mean fold and pin a new dress shirt back together, repackage it and put it away. At the time, men's dress shirts were displayed on long tables. They were stacked on an angle, back to back in clear plastic bags. The shirt itself was folded around cardboard stays to keep its shape and pinned together with dozens of tiny straight pins.

It was a nightmare! Have you ever seen what women do with packaged goods in a department store? They just have to open the package, pull out the item shake it a few times and see how it looks.

"Nope, I don't like this one!" Then they left the shirt, the bag, the cardboard and all the pins in a pile on the table. Near the end of my shift, I had to repackage dozens of shirts.

Today, most stores don't display dress shirts this way. All I have seen in later years are shirts on hangers. Because a dress shirt is no longer required for all jobs men hold, I'm sure the demand for crisp dress shirts has dwindled significantly.

It was a very hot summer that year. My husband would load up our kids in the Oldsmobile and pick up Mommy just after 9 p.m. The boys wore only a diaper. They were sweaty and filthy from playing in the yard and had the telltale evidence of a fruity Popsicle on their faces.

Seeing them at the end of my T.J. Maxx shift made it all worthwhile. I would give everything I own to have one more evening when my little guys greet me with big hugs and sloppy, sweaty, sticky kisses.

 37 YEARS EXPERIENCE

BREAKFAST AROUND THE WORLD

Compiled By Vera Hogan

Whether it's a big fat farmer's breakfast of eggs, bacon, sausage, ham, toast, hash brown potatoes and a side of flapjacks with syrup, or the more healthier option of oatmeal, yogurt and fresh fruit, there is no doubt that breakfast options in America are quite diverse. The following is how some of our friends in other countries start their day.

Germany, it's the 'wurst'

In the land of many wurst, it's not surprising that sausage and other meats take a starring role in frühstück, the traditional German breakfast. A buffet spread would be filled with variety: sausages, cold cuts, cheeses, bread and rolls (including pretzels), as well as fresh fruit, soft-boiled eggs and condiments like homemade jam. And it's all enjoyed with coffee.

England, serve with a selection of newspapers

A proper English breakfast, according to englishbreakfastsociety.com includes pork sausages, strips of back bacon, eggs, tomatoes, mushrooms, baked beans, black pudding and sliced bread.

It is served with tea or coffee, and fresh orange juice.

China, lungs, intestines and blood — nummers

Bittern flapjack is a very famous traditional dish in Beijing. Pig lungs and intestines are cooked together in a big pot with blood tofu, bean curd and are served with hot soup. These things are full of aroma. Chinese food is abundant and rich. Whether you want sweet, sour, spicy or salty, you will find it for breakfast in China.

Tunisia, it's a spicy soup

Fans of savory meals will love lablabi, a spiced chickpea soup that is a breakfast food in Tunisia, the smallest country in North Africa. Chickpeas and harissa paste are the two constants in virtually every lablabi recipe, but the customizations of this simple, soul-warming soup are up to every cook. It is often topped with a poached egg.

Jamaica, sounds kinda fishy

For breakfast in Jamaica, the national dish is ackee and saltfish. Ackee is a delicately sweet pear-shaped fruit. It is sautéed with salt cod, tomatoes, garlic, chilies and onion in a breakfast scramble that brings together sweet, salty, and spicy for a one-of-a-kind island taste.

Argentina, simple, not boring

In Argentina, breakfast is a simple affair, but not boring. If there's one thing they're serious about in Argentina, it's their pastries. Medialunes are the staple Argentina breakfast pastry. Shaped like a croissant with a brioche-like texture, Argentinians traditionally cook medialunes in either manteca (butter) or grasa (vegetable oil). They go well with coffee.

Iceland, ooh, cod liver oil

Start your day in Iceland with a jolt of life-giving lysi: cod liver oil, a plentiful source of omega-3 fatty acids and one of the byproducts of the country's fish industry. For a more palatable morning meal, have a bowl of hafnagrautur, a thick oatmeal. Top it with nuts, raisins, and sugar, or add a helping of skyr, the thick yogurt-like cultured dairy product that's actually a fresh cheese.

American Heart Association
Award recognizes McLaren Flint’s commitment to quality stroke care

McLaren Flint, Genesee County’s first comprehensive stroke center, has received the American Heart Association/American Stroke

Association’s “Get With The Guidelines Target: Stroke Honor Roll Elite Plus Gold Plus Quality Achievement Award.” The award recognizes the hospital’s commitment to ensuring stroke patients receive the most appropriate treatment according to nationally recognized, research-based guidelines based on the latest scientific evidence. McLaren Flint earned the award by meeting specific quality achievement measures for the diagnosis and treatment of stroke patients at a set level for a designated period. “McLaren Flint is dedicated to improving the quality of care for our stroke patients by implementing the American Heart Association’s Get With The Guidelines-Stroke initiative,” said Chad Grant, president and CEO. “The tools and resources provided help us track and measure our success in meeting evidenced-based clinical guidelines developed to improve patient outcomes.” McLaren Flint additionally received the association’s Target: Stroke Honor Roll Elite Plus award. To qualify for this recognition, hospitals must meet quality measures developed to reduce the time between the patient’s arrival at the hospital and treatment with the clot-buster tissue plasminogen activator, or tPA, the only drug approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to treat ischemic stroke. According to the American Heart Association/American Stroke Association, stroke is the No. 5 cause of death and a leading cause of adult disability in the United States.

AUG. 4
1944: Acting on a tip from a Dutch informer, the Nazi Gestapo captures 15-year-old Jewish diarist Anne Frank and her family in a sealed-off area of an Amsterdam warehouse. Anne spent much of her time in the so-called "secret annex" working on her diary. The diary survived the war, overlooked by the Gestapo that discovered the hiding place, but Anne and nearly all of the others perished in the Nazi death camps.

AUG. 5
1981: President Ronald Reagan begins firing 11,359 air-traffic controllers striking in violation of his order for them to return to work. The executive action, regarded as extreme by many, significantly slowed air travel for months. Two days earlier, on Aug. 3, almost 13,000 air-traffic controllers went on strike after negotiations with the federal government to raise their pay and shorten their workweek proved fruitless. Across the country, some 7,000 flights were canceled.

AUG. 6
1890: At Auburn Prison in New York, the first execution by electrocution in history is carried out against William Kemmler, who had been convicted of murdering his lover, Matilda Ziegler, with an axe.

AUG. 7
1987: Lynne Cox braves the freezing waters of the Bering Strait to make the first recorded swim from the United States to the Soviet Union.

AUG. 8
1988: The Chicago Cubs host the first night game in the history of Wrigley Field. The first-ever night game in professional baseball took place nearly 60 years earlier, on May 2, 1930, when a Des Moines, Iowa, team hosted Wichita for a Western League game.

AUG. 9
1969: Members of Charles Manson's cult kill five people in movie director Roman Polanski's Beverly Hills, California, home, including Polanski's pregnant wife, actress Sharon Tate.

Less than two days later, the group killed again, murdering supermarket executive Leno LaBianca and his wife Rosemary in their home. The savage crimes shocked the nation and, strangely, turned Charles Manson into a criminal icon.

AUG. 10
1978: Three teenage girls die after their 1973 Ford Pinto is rammed from behind by a van and bursts into flames on an Indiana highway. The fatal crash was one of a series of Pinto accidents that caused a national scandal during the 1970s.

Many people love to dine out for breakfast, especially on weekends when daily schedules are more relaxed. Saturdays and Sundays are “standing room only” at Shirley’s Café in Linden.

“We serve a lot of breakfasts,” said Becky VanDriessche, daughter of owner Shirley Baldwin. “Our home-style potatoes and biscuits and gravy are the most popular, then our sweet buttermilk pancakes and eggs.”

For those of us who love breakfast, it’s surprising to find out that breakfast hasn’t always been “a thing.”

The Ancient Romans did eat breakfast and included eggs, if available, according to Bonappetit.com. However, in the Middle Ages, Europeans only ate two larger meals and the religious and medical thinkers of the day suggested that it would be gluttonous to eat before these big meals. Breakfast at that time was reserved only for children, the elderly and manual laborers.

As the English began taking their dinners later and later, it created the need for a third meal — breakfast. So it was in the 1800s when breakfast really took off. Eggs provided protein for the worker and were a cheap alternative to meat.

To this day, eggs remain a popular morning staple.

Other popular breakfast items include bacon and sausage, cereal, fruit, oatmeal, waffles, pancakes, French toast, toast, English muffins, hash browns, bagels, yogurt, breakfast burritos and indulgent treats like doughnuts, muffins and croissants.

Cereal manufacturers like General Mills and Kellogg’s are feeling the decline of cereal sales over the last decade. Yet they continue to reinvent themselves with new breakfast and snack options, including cereal and granola bars.

Convenience is the No. 1 attribute of choosing a breakfast option, according to Forbes.com. There’s also a focus on items that require little preparation, contain nutritious ingredients, portioned and ready to go.

Today’s breakfast eaters might nourish on eggs, overnight oats, smoothie bowls or the biggest trend on the Millennial breakfast table — avocado toast. This versatile, easy-to-make, breakfast slathers on a carbohydrate and fat combination that makes it a healthy meal anytime.

Not everyone enjoys a morning meal. About 10 percent of Americans, or 31 million people, don’t eat breakfast at all and half of all Americans aren’t consistent breakfast eaters, according to the NPD Group.

“Our home-style potatoes and biscuits and gravy are the most popular, then our sweet buttermilk pancakes and eggs.”

TIMES  COMMENTS

Cereal or eggs - what kind of breakfast eater are you?

Nancy: Toast with peanut butter.

Angela: COFFEE... lots of coffee.

Lisa: A protein chocolate drink because I’m old 😊

Sharon: Weekdays...cereal and hot tea. On Sunday, my favorite is pancakes with an over-easy egg on top.

Lexi: What’s breakfast? 😭😭 I normally grab something at work or wait until lunch.

Lori: I thought cereal was for a late dinner 😊 My breakfast is usually a protein drink with a handful of spinach and half a banana (sometimes a spoon of peanut butter). If I have time, I’ll make an English muffin with egg and cheese.

Christine: A pastry; bagel, English muffin or BelVita. With coffee.

Christian: Pancakes, eggs and bacon.

Ros Lyn: Cereal, no time for all that other stuff before work. 😊

Shelby: Cereal or English muffin and out the door about 6:30!

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME!®

By David L. Hoyt and Jeff Knurek

The letters of these crazy words are all mixed up. To play the game, put them back into the right order so that they all make real words you can find in the dictionary. Write the letters of each real word under each crazy word, but only one letter to a square.

Now you're ready to solve today's Jumble for Kids. Study the picture for a hint. Play around with the letters in the circles. You'll find you can put them in order so that they make your funny answer.

Guess Who?

I am a singer/songwriter born in Las Vegas on July 14, 1987. I am one of nine children in my family, and I once worked as a Mormon missionary. My career has been anything but radioactive, with many chart-topping hits with my band.

I am an animal rights promoter and television host born in Australia on July 24, 1998. I grew up in the spotlight thanks to my famous father, who had an over-the-top and infectious personality. I continue his legacy with my work with animals.

UGLYDOLLS

In the adorably different town of Uglyville, weird is celebrated, strange is special and beauty is embraced as more than simply meets the eye. Here, the free-spirited Moxy (Clarkson) and her UglyDoll friends live every day in a whirlwind of bliss, letting their freak flags fly in a celebration of life and its endless possibilities. In this all-new story, the UglyDolls will go on a journey beyond the comfortable borders of Uglyville. There, they will confront what it means to be different, struggle with their desire to be loved, and ultimately discover that you don't have to be perfect to be amazing because who you truly are is what matters most. PG, 1 hr. 27 min.

Critics Consensus: Very young viewers may be entertained by UglyDolls — if only because they're less likely to recognize the many familiar elements in its affirmative yet formulaic story.

Make barbecues safer for pets

The season for outdoor entertaining is here and the time we spend in the yard entertaining friends and family tends to increase. Barbecuing lends itself well to informal warm weather gatherings.

While spending time outside, many pet owners like to have their furry companions nearby so they can enjoy the fresh air and fun as well. However, allowing pets outdoors when grilling or entertaining friends requires some forethought to ensure pets stay safe.

Grilling

The act of grilling can be hazardous to pets that can't resist the aromas of food cooking. Dogs or cats may be drawn to the succulent smells without realizing that there are hot coals or gas nearby. It may be safer to keep animals leashed or contained until the grill has been extinguished to prevent burns and other injuries.

Watch the leftovers

As diners finish their meals, they may leave scraps strewn around on plates. The occasional nibble here and there may not be overly problematic, but if a dog or cat gets into a food he or she shouldn't eat, the consequences can be anything from gastrointestinal distress to severe allergic reaction. Any raw meat or seafood can pose a danger to pets. Other foods that can be toxic for a dog include avocado (and guacamole), garlic, onions, grapes, peaches, and chocolate.

No bones about it

It may be tempting to toss a dog a bone from the grill, but the Association for Pet Obesity Prevention warns pet owners against feeding their dogs or cats chicken on the bone due to the risk of the bone splintering and causing intestinal obstruction. Even large bones can splinter. Owners who want to offer bones to their dogs should consult with a vet about which types of bones are safe, or look for a manufactured bone from the pet store.

Allowing pets outdoors when grilling or entertaining friends requires some forethought to ensure pets stay safe.

Alcoholic beverages

Both dogs and cats are sensitive to alcoholic beverages, offers the environmental wellness resource TreeHugger. In addition, the APOP warns that even a few ounces of beer or wine can be poisonous to a dog or cat. Discard half-drained wine glasses and beer bottles promptly.

Fireworks

If fireworks are part of the festivities, make sure to keep skittish pets away. The loud sounds and brilliant sights can frighten pets, and an animal may dart out of the yard to escape, getting lost or injured in the process.

Pet owners must emphasize safety when grilling and entertaining outdoors with their pets in tow.
