INTERESTING INSTRUMENTS

*The Tri-County Times is publishing a series on unique and interesting musical instruments played by local residents. The series is starting with the large stringed instrument,
the harp.*

So what makes the harp unique?
"It's in a family all its own," said harpist Julie Hussar of Fenton. She said the harp doesn't fit into any other family of musical instruments, like woodwinds or stings.

These instruments take specific sheet music, because unlike a piano that can play in any key (chromatic), a harp can only be set to play in one key at a time (diatonic).

"You can walk into most any music store and buy a guitar; you can't walk into any music store and buy a harp," Hussar said.

She transports her 90-pound pedal harp to Fenton Community Orchestra concerts where she plays.

The instrument is plucked by four fingers on each hand to make full or partial chords or to play individual notes. The seven floor pedals adjust the individual seven notes from flat to "natural" to sharp.

Full-sized harps have between 40 and 47 strings, nearly matching the range of a piano, according to harpsspectrum.org.

Hussar said she started playing the Celtic harp for therapy work at the University of Michigan Hospital. "The harp is very calming," she said.

Her background as a multi instrumentalist made it easier to learn the instrument. She said there's a learning curve to playing the harp correctly for the human body. One can damage their shoulder and hands if they play incorrectly.

She has two harps. One is a lever harp, which she took to the hospital to play. These are also known as Celtic harps. This is much easier to maintain than the pedal harp, which requires a certified maintenance technician.

Kelly Yousoufian of the Michigan Harp Center in Clawson said the harp has more than 2,000 pieces when disassembled.

Hussar said learning unique instruments can be very frustrating. "It might be difficult to find someone to teach you," she said. She added that the skill could make you very in-demand as a professional player, and offer the satisfaction of learning a unique instrument.

Origin of the harp

According to The International Harp Museum, the harp is one of the oldest instruments in the world. Harps evolved from hunting bows. Early bow-like harps are depicted in Egyptian tomb paintings as early as 3000 B.C. It also has origins in Asia.

Through the centuries, the harp evolved into what it is today.

What does a harp cost?

According to Virginia Harp Center, a Celtic harp usually costs between $2,500 and $5,000. A full-sized pedal harp costs between $15,000 and $20,000.

Yousoufian said a $199,000 harp would be highly carved and plated with gold.

Level of difficulty

"Anyone can walk up to a harp and pluck a string and a beautiful sound will be produced," Yousoufian said. She compares playing the harp to driving a car. "Most of us do drive. However, those of us who want to drive on the racetrack have to develop a special skill set."

What do they sound like?

Yousoufian describes the modern pedal harp this way: "Resonant bass made with metal strings, warm mid-range with gut strings and usually a brighter treble resulting from monofilament nylon strings."

The next installments of the series will include the accordion played by a young local multi-instrumentalist.

'The Wizard of Oz'

Opened in theaters 80 years ago today

Compiled By Vera Hogan

One of the best-loved movies in history first appeared in theaters Aug. 25, 1939. The movie was first shown on TV in 1956 and continues to be an annual favorite. Though the scenes in Kansas were shot in traditional black and white, Oz appears in vivid Technicolor, a relatively new film process at the time. Here are some other things Oz fans may not know.

Dorothy's dress was really pink

Dorothy's blue and white gingham dress was actually blue and light pink, which was easier to shoot in Technicolor.

The ruby slippers weren't always red

The famous sequined shoes were originally silver, like they are in the Oz books created by author L. Frank Baum. However, MGM studio head Louis B. Mayer wanted to show off Technicolor, so he did with the red shoes.

Three actors were set to play Tin Man

Buddy Ebsen (later of The Beverly Hillbillies) was originally cast as the Scarecrow, but he swapped roles with Ray Bolger. Then when filming started, cramps and trouble breathing due to a severe allergic reaction to the aluminum dust used in the makeup sent Ebsen to the hospital and forced him to leave the production. Ebsen was then replaced with Jack Haley (pictured).

Tin Man cried chocolate syrup

Of course, he is supposed to shed machine oil, but that didn't photograph well. The solution? Chocolate syrup is what was really streaming down Jack Haley's silver face.

Toto earned more than the munchkins

Terry, the little female Cairn terrier that plays Toto, was paid $125 a week. While the dog's trainer always bemoaned not asking for more (the producers were desperate to cast Terry), the residents of Munchkinland only made $50 a week. Terry was also injured during filming when one of the guards stepped on her.

The Wicked Witch had a rough time — and many of her scenes were cut

Margaret Hamilton, who played the Wicked Witch, was badly burned making her smoky exit from Munchkinland — her dress, hat, and broom caught on fire and severely burned her face and hand. She had to recuperate for six weeks before resuming filming. Even worse: The green face paint was so toxic that she (and several other actors) couldn't eat once it was applied and had to subsist on a liquid diet via straw during the day. Plus, her face stayed green for weeks after shooting because of the copper-based ingredients.

On top of the physical torture, most of the Wicked Witch's scenes had to be edited or cut completely after being deemed too terrifying for children.

Glinda had incredible genes

The beautiful Billie Burke, who played Glinda the Good Witch of the North, was 54 years old at the time — 18 years older than her counterpart Margaret Hamilton, who portrayed the Wicked Witch of the West.

Jell-O gave the horse its different color

Jell-O crystals were stuck over all the multiple Emerald City horses playing the Horse-of-a-Different-Color to give them their color. But the scenes were shot quickly, because the horses started to lick them off.

Just sayin'...

vhogan@tctimes.com

They earn every penny!

The sign in your yard says "For Sale By Owner," call (810) 123-4567.

It's the weekend and your teenager is at home enjoying some alone time while Mom and Dad are out running errands. A well-dressed young couple drive up in a nice car and come to the door. Your teen opens it. They apologize and say they would normally call first but are only in town house hunting for one day. They were about to give up when they saw your house and it looks perfect. Would it be okay if they came inside for a few minutes to take a quick look around?

Would your kids let these seemingly innocent-looking people in?

I sure hope not!

This is one of the negative aspects of trying to sell your house without the assistance of a professional real estate agent. Put that sign in your yard and it screams "Come on in." And anyone who watches the news knows what can, and does all too often, happen.

My article about FSBOs and reasons to reconsider doing it can be found on page 3A of this edition. In it, I explain that the reason most people want to sell their own home is the commission. For some reason, people think commission is astronomical, something they shouldn't have to pay and that all Realtors are rich.

I'd like to clear that up. I was once a licensed Realtor and speak from experience. Yes, some Realtors are rich, but not like Barbara Corcoran (Shark Tank) rich. Most wealthy real estate professionals work long and hard for many years to achieve financial success.

Let me explain how this works. A 6 or 7 percent commission on a home that sells for a couple hundred thousand dollars would result in a pretty decent paycheck, right? Wrong.

That commission could potentially be split four ways. If you work for Real Estate Co. A and sell a listing by Real Estate Co. B, that commission would be split with your broker (A), the other (listing) agent's broker (B), and the other agent, leaving you with the balance. From that balance, you have to pay for your required association dues, your own advertising, the expenses related to your business such as fuel and insurance for your vehicle, yard signs, business cards, etc. This is not to mention your normal household and living expenses. If you only close on a couple transactions a month, you're making the same amount of money, if not less, than others with average 9 to 5 jobs.

The only way you can make more is to sell your own listings, which means you and your broker get to split the whole pie.

Don't get me wrong, real estate can offer a very fun, exciting and rewarding career. But make no mistake, these hard-working people earn every penny of their commission.

Opinions offered in Just Sayin' are the author's alone and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the Tri-County Times or its staff. Email Vera at vhogan@tctimes.com.

Easy appetizer for entertaining

Impromptu entertaining can be a fun way to get together with friends or family without the pressures of hosting more formal affairs. But hosts will still need to provide some refreshments for their guests, and having some easy recipes at the ready can make it easy to pull together a few bites in a hurry.

An arsenal of appetizers and small plates at the ready can feed a few or a crowd. By sticking with simple fare of readily sourced ingredients - including staples kept in the refrigerator and pantry - it's a snap to entertain. This recipe for "Flaky Tomato and Mozzarella Tart" from "Real Simple: Easy, Delicious Home Cooking" (Time Home Entertainment) by the editors of Real Simple, is a recipe that can be pulled out time and again for anytime entertaining.

Flaky Tomato and Mozzarella Tart

Serves 4

- INGREDIENTS:
- All-purpose flour, for the work surface
 - ½ sheet frozen puff pastry (one-quarter of a 17.3-ounce package) thawed
 - 1 cup grape or cherry tomatoes, halved if large
 - ¼ pound mozzarella, grated (1 cup)
 - 1 tablespoon olive oil
 - Kosher salt and black pepper

Tip: Be sure to use commercially packaged mozzarella in this recipe. Fresh mozzarella loses its water during baking and will leave the pastry soggy.

- DIRECTIONS:
1. Heat oven to 425 F. Line a baking sheet with parchment. On a lightly floured surface, roll the pastry into a 9-by-6-inch rectangle. Place on the prepared baking sheet and refrigerate until firm, at least 30 minutes.
 2. Prick the pastry all over with a fork, then top with the tomatoes and mozzarella. Drizzle with the oil; season with 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper.
 3. Bake the tart until golden brown and cooked through, 20 to 25 minutes. Cut into pieces before serving.

What is the right type of pet for your family?

Welcoming a pet into one’s life can be a rewarding experience. Pets promote compassion and discipline in their owners, and their companionship can be incredibly rewarding. They also can be helpful tools for teaching children responsibility.

Pets require commitment, patience and financial investment. Potential pet owners also need to understand just what they’re getting into when they decide to bring a pet home. Certain animals require a greater level of attention than others, and some pets might not be the right fit for all involved. After all, a pet is not a temporary playmate, but a long-term family member who will require considerable love and attention.

Prospective pet owners should consider various factors to help them find the pet that suits their families.

Decide if you want a young pet or prefer an older animal, each of which has its advantages and disadvantages. While puppies and kittens can be attractive, they require extra time and care upon being welcomed into a home, and that can be rough if young children are in the home and not accustomed to pets and their unique behaviors. In such instances, an older established animal may be a better fit, especially if you can devote the time to retraining the animal to your preferences. If you already have pets, you’ll need to find one that’s compatible with your existing animals.

The American Veterinary Medical Foundation says to carefully consider if you can provide the amount of attention your pet will need. Different species and breeds require various amounts of care. A ferret or hamster may be self-sufficient most of the day, while a boisterous puppy will not be. People who travel frequently or are out of the house most of the day will have to keep this in mind as well.

Affordability is another factor to consider. Assess whether you have the money necessary to offer shelter, recreation, medical care, food, exercise, and socialization for this particular pet. If you cannot budget for a pet that has a lot of needs, look for one that has relatively inexpensive care requirements, like a fish.

Remember that some animals can live many years, while others have a relatively short life span. Factor this into your decision as well. Once you make the commitment to the pet, it’s unfair to surrender an animal simply because you failed to recognize the time and energy required to take care of it.

For more assistance choosing a pet, speak with a trusted veterinarian or animal expert about the traits of certain animals and breeds up for consideration.
