COVID hasn’t canceled art

Fenton art gallery holding showcase through Aug. 8; features local students

By Hannah Ball

The COVID-19 pandemic forced many events to cancel this summer, but the Cause & Affect Gallery in Fenton is still open with showcases and artwork.

Currently, the ongoing art show, the Fenton Arts Council Member Art Exhibition, features art from 29 artists. It runs from July 10 to Aug. 8. Owner of the gallery, Annie Anglim, said they weren’t able to have an opening event due to the COVID-19 pandemic, and operations have been changed to implement safety measures.

“That’s tough. This not only is an art gallery, but it’s also a venue space. I can’t do that anymore, just because of the sheer quantity of people that would be in here,” Anglim said. “Whenever we have an opening for a show, we have a large reception. It is extremely well attended. We weren’t able to do that with this show. That See ART on 9

‘Stronger’ is the new ‘Bigger and Better’

Emily Caswell

I n the early days of the COVID-19 pandemic, we all came to hate particular terms—“unprecedented,” “new normal,” “uncertain times,” and now there is a new term I don’t so much hate but somewhat fear: “Bigger and Better!”

With so many events being canceled because of the pandemic, organizers want to stress the point that they will be back in 2021 and they will be “Bigger and Better” than ever. I have even said it myself. And while I love optimism, as a brand professional and event planner, I’m hearing the phrase so much that I’m starting to sweat a little.

As a natural optimist, I’m not always best at being a realist, but as the months tick on, the toll of a worldwide pandemic is hard to ignore. The truth is that some events may not return, some events will be smaller, some will be missing familiar faces and some will just be the same as they’ve always been. And it’s not just events. It’s companies, towns, your own bank account. “Bigger and Better” may not be the case in the months to come and while that’s not a super-fun concept to grab a hold of, there is a concept I think we should all grab onto.

I saw a sign the other day that read “The comeback is always stronger than the setback.” I did a little online search of the phrase and stumbled upon an inc.com article about setbacks. Author and business coach Amanda Abella’s advice for a strong rebound from setbacks was so simple that it resonated with me. Here is what she says and how I see it as it relates to current circumstances:

Accept what you cannot control: When the pandemic first started, a strange wave of calm washed over me knowing that this was a problem I could not fix. Abella wrote about a time that a hurricane hit her business and how she experienced that same calm, knowing she could not stop nature. She used that time to her advantage, relaxing a bit before the real work of rebuilding began.

Focus on the things you can control: I can’t control when we cancel an event, but I can control the message.

Look for the lessons: Abella writes that the best remedy to a setback is to “look for the lessons without judgment so you can improve.” It’s a little too early to look for all of the lessons learned during Coronavirus since we are still so deep into it, but so far, the above items in bold, along with having a positive attitude and team work, are lessons that come to mind. I look forward to the day when we can sit back and list everything that we’ve learned and move forward in a positive way.

COVID-19 has presented everyone a set of unimaginable setbacks and while we may not emerge “Bigger and Better,” the hope is that we will be stronger.

Holly police chief offers helpful tips to keep our motorcycle driving friends and family safe

Compiled by Sharon Stone

It’s summertime and for many it’s also motorcycle riding time.

Holly Police Chief Jerry Narsh is asking everyone to take a moment to consider some scary and some interesting data that tells us cycle riders and crash statistics are changing — and we have some simple safety ideas to help mentally look for motorcycles before we pull out or turn.

CRASH FACTS AND DATA
• In 2018, 4,985 people died in motorcycle crashes, and 88,000 motorcyclists were injured according to a National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) report.

Motorcyclists were about 28 times more likely than passenger car occupants to die in a crash per vehicle mile traveled and five times more likely to be injured.

• Majority of fatal crashes are a result of impact with passenger cars.

• Most dangerous time: 3 to 6 p.m.

• Michigan has the 10th highest rider fatalities in the USA with 142 killed in 2017. Florida is the highest with 574.

CHANGING DATA ON WHO IS RIDING

Older motorcyclists account for more than half of all motorcyclist fatalities. NHTSA data show that 56 percent of motorcyclists killed in crashes were age 40 or over. The number of motorcyclists age 40 and over killed in crashes increased by 63 percent from 2003 to 2017. In contrast, fatalities among young motorcyclists have declined, relative to other age groups.

QUICK TIPS - 10 things all car and truck drivers should know about motorcycles
• Over half of all fatal motorcycle crashes involve another vehicle. Most of the time, the car or truck driver, not the motorcyclist, is at fault. There are a lot more cars and trucks than motorcycles on the road, and some drivers don’t “recognize” a motorcycle — they ignore it (usually unintentionally).

• Because of its narrow profile, a motorcycle can be easily hidden in a car’s blind spots (door/roof pillars) or masked by objects or backgrounds outside a car (bushes, fences, bridges, etc.). Take an extra moment to look for motorcycles, whether you’re changing lanes or turning at intersections.

• Because of its small size, a motorcycle may look farther away than it is. It may also be difficult to judge a motorcycle’s speed. When checking traffic to turn at an intersection or into (or out of) a driveway, predict a motorcycle is closer than it looks.

• Motorcyclists often slow by downshifting or merely rolling off the throttle, thus not activating the brake light. Allow more following distance, say 3 or 4 seconds. At intersections, predict a motorcyclist may slow down without visual warning.

• Motorcyclists often adjust position within a lane to be seen more easily and to minimize the effects of road debris, passing vehicles, and wind. Understand that motorcyclists adjust lane position for a purpose, not to be reckless or show off or to allow you to share the lane with them.

• Turn signals on a motorcycle usually are not self-canceling, thus some riders (especially beginners) sometimes forget to turn them off after a turn or lane change. Make sure a motorcycle’s signal is for real.

• Maneuverability is one of a motorcycle’s better characteristics, especially at slower speeds and with good road conditions, but don’t expect a motorcyclist to always be able to dodge out of the way.

• Stopping distance for motorcycles is nearly the same as for cars, but slippery pavement makes stopping quickly difficult. Allow more following distance behind a motorcycle because you can’t always stop “on a dime.”

• When a motorcycle is in motion, see more than the motorcycle — see the person under the helmet who could be your friend, neighbor, or relative.

• If a driver crashes into a motorcyclist, bicyclist, or pedestrian and causes serious injury, the driver would likely never forgive himself/herself.
MCKANE LAKE

Allen said Roberts’ 44-year-old stepson and his girlfriend were on the pontoon with Roberts. The police chief said Roberts reportedly dove into the lake and was treading water. When he began to struggle, the woman dove in to help. When she was unable to help, she yelled for help and Roberts’ stepson dove into help, at which time Roberts went under. They called 911 for help.

Divers searched for several hours Sunday evening and resumed their search Monday morning, July 27. Genesee County Sheriff Chris Swanson said the sheriff’s dive team recovered Roberts’ body at approximately 11:30 a.m., in 20-foot deep water and about 250 to 300 yards from shore.

This incident remains under investigation.

Small claims court

In 1968, our Michigan legislature created the District Court to hear both criminal and civil cases.

The District Court is sometimes referred to as “The People’s Court” for a number of reasons, including the fact that in many cases litigants represent themselves instead of hiring an attorney. Small claims court is one of the best examples of this because attorneys are simply not allowed.

Here’s how it generally works. Michigan has a statute, which provides that a complaint may be filed in the District Court as a small claims if the amount in controversy does not exceed $6,000. Over the years, this amount has steadily increased and is scheduled to go up to $6,500 on Jan. 1, 2021. Claims cannot be filed for intentional harm such as fraud, libel, and assault and battery.

When there is a trial, the judge informs both parties, orally or in writing, that either of them has the right to remove the case to the general civil division and if the case remains in small claims court, they waive their right to an attorney, a jury trial, and to appeal the court’s decision.

If the case is heard in small claims, the statute also provides that the trial is to be conducted in an informal manner to do substantial justice between the parties according to substantive law.

The procedural rules of practice, procedure, pleading, and evidence do not apply except for privileged communications.

The sole object of the trial is to dispense expeditious justice between the parties.

The witnesses are sworn and testimony is taken from the parties and any witnesses they may have. The judge then makes a decision based on the evidence.

If a judgment is granted, the plaintiff may attempt to collect it as any other civil judgment including setting up an installment payment plan for the defendant to pay it off over time.

Over the past 50 plus years, small claims court has been proven to be a successful alternative to traditional court proceedings and has been structured to be a quick, informal, and inexpensive way of resolving disputes.

For a more in depth explanation of small claims practice and procedure, I recommend going to the “Michigan Legal Help” website under “small claims.”

Stop the complaining about masks. We can work, shop and go to school only when safe. Early on, medical people asked that we not use masks needed for medical staff. Six months of exposure has proven masks for all will slow the spread to protect all.

The data is bad. The experts are guessing. At the pandemic’s half-time, no one knows which decisions are best. The backlash to Gov. Whitmer’s heavy-handed methods likely made things worse. Masks, social distance and hand washing seem prudent.

The propaganda media are all fake news. All of the media, liberal and conservative, first get their audience worked up. Then they push their agenda. If you only watch one media, their opinion soon becomes your opinion.

Maybe most men are ‘created equal’ because when I talk to women I know they will say there are so many similarities in the men they know. Some men will say that about the women they know. I do get your point otherwise.

Sheriff seeks identity of hit-and-run driver

Newer model white Ford pickup truck strikes bicyclist on Bull Run Road in Livingston County

On Sunday, July 26, at approximately 9:30 p.m., deputies with the Livingston County Sheriff’s Office were dispatched to Bull Run Road near Munsel Road for a hit and run crash involving a bicycle and a white Ford pick-up truck.

The preliminary investigation has revealed that a 17-year-old Howell resident was southbound on Bull Road riding a bicycle when he was struck by what witnesses said was a newer model white Ford F150 crew cab pick-up. Witnesses said the pick-up had damage to the front passenger head light area.

After witnesses spoke to the driver of the pick-up, it left the scene southbound on Bull Run Road.

The injured bicyclist was transported to the University of Michigan Hospital with life threatening injuries by Livingston County Ambulance.

Bull Run Road was closed for approximately three hours during the investigation. Deputies were assisted at the scene by Livingston County Ambulance and the Fowlerville Area Fire Department.

Anyone with information reference this crash is asked to contact Dep. Brad Neff at (517) 540-7984. This crash remains under investigation by the Livingston County Major Crash Team.

Linden Library has new librarian

Eager to start children’s and adult programs as soon as pandemic allows for them

The Genesee District Library (GDL) has named Katie Badgley as the new branch librarian at the Linden Library. Badgley’s 25-year career in libraries includes 12 years at GDL, six as the children’s librarian. She also served as head of Children’s Services at the Orion Township Public Library, and as a school media specialist for Mill Valley Schools in California. She also is a storyteller for the Michigan Humanities Council grant-funded Prime Time program.

She replaces John Ekleberry, who was named technical services manager of the GDL.

“The challenges we are facing in 2020 are making the library more important than ever,” Badgley said.

The library provides free digital access to ebooks, audiobooks, music, magazines, videos, and a variety of educational materials and databases that people can access right from their homes, 24/7, during a quarantine.

“The library is happy to visit the library for special programs and have kids cuddle up and read to him.”

Badgley also would like to start a monthly book club for adults, and have programs for teens exploring their creativity through things like green screen videos, painting, and henna body art.

Badgley holds a bachelor’s degree in elementary education from the University of Michigan-Flint, and a Master of Library Information Science from Dominican University in River Forest, Illinois.
Fenton’s Open Book plans 10-year celebration

Bookstore owner plans day of discounts, prizes and giveaways

By Hannah Ball

After years of selling books, hosting events and being involved in city activities, Fenton’s Open Book will celebrate its 10th anniversary Aug. 29.

Owner Karen Piacentini is planning a 10th anniversary celebration to take place at her Dibbleville store from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

“It feels great,” she said. When her husband died seven years ago, she wasn’t sure if she was going to keep up the store. Piacentini said she’s “glad” she kept running it. “It keeps me busy and I just love working with books and customers. I’ve got great employees who do a lot when I’m not here. You couldn’t do it without everyone,” she said.

Piacentini also works with local schools as a paraprofessional teacher for special needs students. She’s done this for more than 18 years.

“I always said I had the two best jobs, working with kids and then coming to the store,” she said. “I think the town just needs a bookstore. I just can’t believe it’s been 10 years.”

Even people who don’t live in Fenton will come to support Fenton’s Open Book. They can ask Piacentini to order books or they can order them online through the store’s website.

“Please, visit my website timdraeger.com to learn more about me and what I hope to deliver for you. I will appreciate your WRITE-IN vote in the Democratic Primary on Aug. 4. Thank you.”

was really tough for the artists as well as the patrons because the patrons want to interact with the artists.”

On the floor of the gallery are markers spaced 6 feet apart. Instead of normal black dots, these markers are images of artwork provided by Mural Arts Philadelphia. Wearing masks inside is required, and walk-ins are allowed, but residents are encouraged to call and make an appointment.

It ends Aug. 8, and Anglim said if conditions improve, they might have a closing reception, but it’s unlikely.

Sally Bright, local artist, has a piece in the show. She’s been showing at The Cause & Affect Gallery since Anglim opened it.

“It’s about the art and about the community. Annie’s just a wonderful person. She includes everyone. She makes donations to the local community organizations,” she said. Every quarter, the gallery donates 10 percent of sales to a local non-profit.

Anglim was inspired to open the Cause & Affect Gallery more than a year ago because she wanted to create a place for art that was accessible. She has a friend in a wheelchair who can’t access certain spaces.

“There are a lot of places here in town that are not accessible,” she said. “I try to be as accommodating as possible. I want everyone to be able to come in here and experience art, whether you’re creating it or visually looking at it.”

Anglim, a silversmith, has her own working art studio, Anglim Art & Design, inside the gallery, where she holds workshops. She does jewelry design and has a few pieces shown in the front of the building. She also personally represents 57 artists.

Anglim has been busy applying for grants that help businesses hurt by COVID-19. However, the pandemic hasn’t halted operations or shows.

On Sunday, July 26, the Cause & Affect Gallery had a show on healing and loss, and more showcases are being planned for fall.

“Art does a lot of positive stuff in the world,” Anglim said. “This gallery, to me, is all about community and how can we bring everyone together. Art is a common denominator.”

Cause & Affect Gallery is also featuring art by students from nearly all of the local schools in the Virtual Gallery & Virtual Student Show. A monitor is set up to display the artwork, which is also shown on the Cause & Affect Gallery website and social media.

Kids often come in to show her their artwork. One local 11-year-old, whose work is featured in the virtual show, brought in her sketchbooks.

“I was blown away by the quality of her drawings. I asked her if she wanted to join the gallery,” Anglim said, adding that she talks with students about how a career in art is possible.

Last summer, an 8-year-old walked in and asked how he could learn to draw. His artwork was eventually featured in the gallery for a year.

We thank those who are certain of their mission during these uncertain times.

Dozens attend ‘Pandemic Prom’

Organized by local students to have one classic high school experience

By Hannah Ball

Dozens of area students were able to have one classic high school experience after COVID-19 forced many to cancel.

Approximately 80 students from Fenton, Lake Fenton, Linden, Lapeer and other school districts attended The Senior Pandemic Prom 2020: ’20s Gatsby Gala at the Ponemah Lakeside Lodge on Thursday, July 23.

It was organized by Gracie Warda, Fenton High School graduate, and sponsored by The Warda Foundation.

“It went really well,” Gracie Warda said. “I’m really happy with how everything came together. It seemed like everyone had a really great time. Obviously, we were all super excited to actually get a prom, so I would say everyone had a great attitude. We also had support from the community, and they all had a great attitude as well.”

The event had a DJ, photographer, dinner, dancing and fireworks.

Gracie Warda planned the event because she wanted to have this high school experience.
Looking back: Fenton girls golf team places fifth at team state meet

The Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA) expects to begin the fall sports season as traditionally scheduled based on a press release dated July 17.

However, the MHSAA Representative Council, a 19-member legislative body, will meet again July 29, so things could change. At this time though, high school football practices are expected to begin Aug. 10 while other fall sports will start practices Aug. 12.

The MHSAA is moving forward with a plan that first calls for fall sports to be played as scheduled with the idea that if it’s necessary, seasons can be suspended or postponed until later in the school year. The MHSAA’s plans remain reliant on progress by schools and regions across the state according to Governor Gretchen Whitmer’s MI Safe Start Plan.

“Our student-athletes just want to play, and we’ve gone far too long without them playing. But doing so safely, of course, remains the priority,” MHSAA Executive Director Mark Uyl said. “Our plan moving forward is Fall in the Fall, starting on time. We’re excited to continue moving forward to bring back sports safely. It’s important for keeping students in our schools and keeping students in our sports programs.

“We remain grateful to the governor for the opportunity to build the schedule and policies for returning sports to schools. We will continue to support her directives and those of the state and local health departments as we work to create the safest environment for all involved in our activities.”

Looking back: Fenton XC teams earn state trips at regional meet

By David Troppens

The Fenton varsity cross country programs may have had the greatest regional meet performance in school history.

All the teams did was have one squad win a regional title, both teams comfortably qualify for the Division 1 state meet and both had an individual regional champion. If that wasn’t enough, 12 runners had personal best times between the two teams.

Fenton’s Alexa Keiser and Adam Jesse won individual regional championships and the Fenton varsity boys won their team regional championship, highlighting an outstanding Saturday for the Tigers at the Saginaw Heritage regional meet. The girls also qualified by taking a very comfortable third-place team finish.

“We had one individual and one team champ in 2006 with Joe Dimambro and the guys in D2,” Fenton varsity cross country coach Jesse Anderson said. “So to have both teams go, one win and two individual champs probably becomes our most successful regional weekend in our history.”

On a weekend with a bunch of highlights, Jesse and Keiser were the two biggest stars. Jesse won his first race since his sophomore season, taking the boys’ race in 16:01.36, about three seconds ahead of Saginaw Heritage’s Brady Neumann. Meanwhile, Keiser, who has won 24 races during her Fenton career, won her first regional race ever, taking the top spot with a time of 18:13.81, about 30 seconds ahead of Bay City Western’s Ashlyn Nagel.

“I was very happy for Adam,” Anderson said. “His last and only win in a high school cross country 5K race was his sophomore year in an early season race, but he was all-state last year and slowed the early part of this season by an injury. His workouts had started coming around and he showed a lot of faith in his abilities to set himself well over the first mile to compete for the win. Once he took the lead at about the halfway mark, the race was not in the bag as a couple athletes behind him also ran negative splits in pursuit. Adamhammered extremely hard the last half of the proceedings and simply ran the legs out from those behind him. He didn’t want to leave it up to a kick, and he didn’t let it come down to one. Very tough, strong race for him.”

Keiser’s race helped bring one honor she had yet to win — an individual regional title.

“This was a huge day for her,” Anderson said. “She’d won 23 races headed into this weekend, but never a regional. No girl in our history had, actually. She executed remarkably, running a textbook race and really pouring it on over the last half of the race. Twenty-seven seconds of her eventual 30-second margin was accrued over the last 1.1 mile, she really showed her unerring determination and toughness to keep hammering over the stickiest part of the course, all alone up front. I’m super proud of her career and so happy for her to get this huge accomplishment her senior season.”

The Fenton boys were dominant, earning each of their five scoring runners in the top 20, scoring just 55 points. That was 29 points better than second-place Davison.

Logan Canada took seventh (16:23.99) while Samuel Cox placed ninth (16:26.30). The rest of the top five were Micah Dekraker (18th in 16:58.74) and Remington Stapp (20th in 17:03.57). The other two varsity runners were Josh Maier (24th in 17:07.94) and Gage Bond (26th in 17:13.19). This was the program’s fourth regional title in history and second in Division 1.

“This was probably the best individual race I’ve seen our guys race since maybe the Metro League champs in 2016 in terms of expectations going in and just crushing them,” Anderson said.

FUNERAL ETIQUETTE

WHAT CAN I DO TO HELP LATER?

In the days and months to come, the family will continue to need your support. Try to write or call on a regular basis. Continue to include them in your social plans, they will let you know when they are ready to participate. It is also nice to remember the family on special occasions during the first year following the death. Don’t worry about bringing up the pain and emotion of the loss, they are well aware of that. By remembering such occasions as wedding anniversaries and birthdays, you are not remembering the death, but reaffirming that a life was lived. Source: Thefuneralsource.org
